Stumping for GOP candidate

Nixon given rousing Michigan welcome in test of popularity

BAD AXE, Mich. (UPI) — President Nixon flew to Michigan's "Thumb" area today for his first political campaigning since 1972, a rural motorcade in behalf of a Republican congressional hopeful that also was a test of his own Watergate-scarred popularity.

The President's plane put down at the Tri-City Airport near Saginaw 80 miles northwest of Detroit at the start of a fast-moving visit. Some of the 11 towns on the agenda for his 4½ hour visit are so small they do not even appear on state maps.

The President's bulletproof, bubble-top limousine was also flown from Washington for him to use in his tour of Michigan's 8th Congressional District to campaign for James M. Sparling Jr. who is facing Democrat Robert Traxler in a special election April 16.

The district has been a strong Republican area and Sparling is seeking to keep the seat in GOP hands. The seat was vacated when Republican James Harvey, who served since 1961, resigned to accept appointment as a U.S. district judge.

More than 5,000 persons, many of them school children on a special holiday, were among the airport welcoming crowd who turned out in sunny weather with the temperature in the 40s.

Signs attacking and supporting the President were in ample evidence. They included a 25-foot banner reading "God Love Nixon" and another reading "Nixon is the Nation's No. 1 Crook."

The welcoming committee at Tri-City Airport included Republican Gov. William G. Milliken and Sparling, but Milliken did not join Nixon in the motorcade. Instead he decided to go ahead with plans to attend a meeting in Toronto on water pollution.

In brief remarks on his arrival at Tri-City Airport, Nixon assailed what he called "the bottleneck in Congress" for not supporting his programs and called for the election of people who will work with him, such as Sparling.

Nixon mingled with members of five high school marching bands among the welcomers and after 33 minutes, boarded a helicopter and flew to Bad Axe.

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., the minority whip, also greeted the President. Griffin has thrown his political weight behind the Sparling campaign in recent days and his staff members have been in the district helping to prepare for the presidential swing.

Nixon appeared in a jaunty mood as he boarded his plane at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., for the 90-minute flight to Michigan. He was accompanied by top aides, a speech writer, two White House physicians but not wife Pat, a usual companion. An aide said Michigan was a testing ground for Nixon and it was not necessary for the first lady's presence.

1 dead, 8 missing in ship blast

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Greek oil tanker exploded at dockside while unloading its cargo Tuesday night, killing one crewman and leaving eight other persons missing.

Thirteen crewmembers, including a woman, and a pier guard were injured in the explosion which left the 650-foot tanker Elias, chartered to the Atlantic Richfield Oil Co. (ARCO), looking like "a twisted beer can."

The Elias was pumping off its cargo of Venezuelan crude oil at ARCO's Fort Mifflin depot when the center section of the ship exploded shortly before 10 p.m.

After the explosion the ship broke into two burning sections and a witness said "it looks like a twisted beer can."

The Coast Guard today launched air and river search efforts to locate five crewmen and a woman and two children —the latter three visitors to the ship—reported missing following the blast and fire. Some of the missing were feared still aboard the tanker which settled to the bottom of the Delaware River about one mile south of the Philadelphia Naval Yard.

The dead crewman, found near the concrete and steel dock, had not been identified. He was burned beyond recognition, police said.

Three of the injured crewmen and the pier guard were reported in critical condition. Three others were admitted to city hospitals with lesser injuries and the balance of the injured were treated and released.

The Coast Guard said 14 members of the tanker's 33-man crew were on shore leave at the time of the explosion.

Philadelphia fire officials said cause of the blast was still undetermined. Firefighters, who brought the flames under control just before midnight, were still on the scene at daybreak hosing down the partially submerged tanker.

Stephen Saliga, 35, a trainee cook who was asleep in a block house 500 feet from the ship when the explosion occurred, said the force of the blast blew in the windows and caved in the roof.

"I was in Vietnam for 18 months and never saw anything like this," he said. "I'm just glad to be alive."

A priest who speaks Greek was able to talk to one of the injured crewmen and quoted him as saying:

"I was asleep and then everything happened. We shinnied down a rope to get to the dock, but it burned through and we fell into the water.

Damage $40,000

Arson suspected in Covina school fires

COVINA — Fire officials are investigating the possibility of arson in fires that heavily damaged portions of Northview High School and Valencia Elementary School early this morning.

Damage to the boys shower and locker room in the Northview High gym, 1016 W. Cypress St., was estimated at $30,000 in equipment and structure. That fire, which broke out about 2:30 a.m., was spotted by a passing police unit. Firemen were able to contain the blaze within 10 minutes of their arrival, preventing a total loss.

The 20 by 14 foot room contained athletic equipment, linen and student lockers.

The second fire at nearby Valencia Elementary, 758 W. Grondahl St., started about 4 a.m. in two adjoining sixth grade classrooms. A call from a passing motorist enabled firemen to contain the blaze within 15 minutes.

Damage to walls, cabinetry and portions of the attic and roof was estimated in the $8,000 to $10,000 range.

Fire officials said both fires were incendiary in nature. Although there is no hard evidence of arson, the fact that both schools were within a mile of each other and were secured led to suspicions of arson. There was also no evidence of forced entry at either school.

Asst. Fire Chief Carl R. Johnson said the Valencia fire apparently started in a cabinet where several Sterno cans were found along with what appeared to be chemistry equipment.

The location of the start of the Northview blaze has not been pinpointed yet, he said.

Covina Valley Unified School District Supt. Erwin Jones said he suspected vandalism in both fires. He said there have been no recent labor disputes, gang or racial problems that might have provided a motive for either fire.

Both fires "were very surprising," he said, since the district has had no major fires in four to five years.

White House says panel to get additional material

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House says additional material requested by the House Judiciary Committee will be provided for its impeachment inquiry by the end of the month. Rep. Peter Rodino, DN.J., committee chairman, says it may be the end of June before there is a report.

President Nixon, through his attorney, sent word to Capitol Hill Tuesday that a review is under way of 41 additional tape recordings requested by the committee and should be completed by the end of the congressional Easter recess which runs to April 22.

At that time, the White House said it will furnish additional material, but it did not say how much, if any, of the extra information would be turned over. Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Tuesday the White House will "respond affimatively to all requests for tapes and other material which it considers relevant."

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said today the time required to listen to the tapes would delay any committee action. He said the average length of each tape is eight hours and it would require 336 hours of listening time to go through the tapes requested by the committee.

Rodino said the full House likely will get the committee report late in June. "We hope in the first week of May to take up the evidence concerning impeachment," Rodino said. "We may have to call other witnesses.

"I think it will be a matter of maybe a month or five weeks or so before we complete the committee work. So I hope some time in late June it will be ready to go to the House. But we are going to do it as expeditiously as we possibly can."

Scott said one of the President's lawyers has been assigned to monitor the tapes but added that he has "suggested that they assign more people to the task."

To illustrate the time consuming chore, Scott said it took one person a full day to decipher only six minutes of one tape. He said it took that long "to find out who was saying what to whom."

Supervisors now mulling $2.4 million proposal for commuter train services

LOS ANGELES — The Board of Supervisors is considering a $2.4 million proposal to provide commuter trains on existing tracks between San Bernardino and Los Angeles.

The trains, to run three times a day on the Santa Fe tracks, would have about 10 interim stops, including those at Upland, Claremont, Pomona and Glendora.

The proposal is part of a package presented to the board Tuesday by Fifth District Supervisor Baxter Ward. The plan also includes three runs daily between Los Angeles and San Diego.

Ward urged the board to underwrite a $2.4 million annual expense for the operation of the commuter service—$1,095,000 a year for the San Bernardino line, and $939,000 a year for the San Diego run.

In addition, the county also would have to find, or buy, locomotives and coaches to be used in the service.

Ward said he was gathering enough information to present this plan to the rest of the supervisors for action in two weeks.

The plan itself is not new. It is patterned after one first proposed last year by the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG). Similar plans also have been suggested by State Sen. Ruben Ayala of Chino when he was chairman of the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors and Montclair Mayor Harold Hayes.

What makes it significant at this time is that it is now being sponsored by a Los Angeles county supervisor and that money may be available for financing it through the county's revenue-sharing funds.

Although the trains, making the run between Pomona and Los Angeles in 59 minutes, are not expected to save much time over the buses, Ward pointed out that they would be more comfortable in that passengers would be able to walk around.

He said the trains would not replace the buses operated by the Southern California Rapid Transit System (RTD), but would be an addition to them. The buses now run every hour.

He said that although fares should be charged to the riding public, the county should subsidize some of the costs to encourage motorists to leave their cars home and use the commuters.

The board already is underwriting a three-month experiment with RTD buses that is providing 25 cents a ride anywhere in the county. The subsidy is costing the county $9.6 million and comes from revenue sharing.

'Reached end of road'

Golda tells Labor party she'll resign Thursday

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Prime Minister Golda Meir told her Labor party today she will resign Thursday.

The Israeli political crisis blew up over growing demands that Defense Minister Moshe Dayan resign because of Israel's unpreparedness when Egypt and Syria attacked last Oct. 6, Yom Kippur.

Mrs. Meir had formed a shaky coalition following the October War with Dayan remaining as Defense Minister, but calls for his resignation persisted. The Israeli chief of Staff, Gen. David Elazar, resigned last week.

The 75-year-old prime minister told her party's leaders that she had definitely made up her mind and she could not be convinced to stay in the post she has held since 1969, an official source said.

"I have reached the end of the road," Mrs. Meir said. "I can go on no longer. This has nothing to do with Moshe Dayan but only with myself."

There has been a series of political crises since the October war and in January both Mrs. Meir and Dayan had threatened to resign.

The cabinet crisis deepened earlier today with a legal opinion hinting at Dayan's responsibitity for Israel's unpreparedness for the October war. Political sources said it could force him to quit and thus topple the government.

The opinion by Justice Minister Haim Zadok said Dayan is not legally bound to resign. Dayan requested the opinion.

"The opinion said that a minister is responsible for what is done in his ministry," one source said. "That's why if you read the opinion correctly you have to reach the conclusion that Dayan must go."

Gasoline near normal, says Simon

Cheer for vacationers!

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy chief William E. Simon said today there will be enough gasoline available for Americans to take their normal summer trips this year.

Simon said that with rapidly improving gasoline supplies — as oil is again reaching this country from the Middle East — the situation has returned to "near normal."

"As the supplies again begin to land on this shore, we'll have a sufficiency of gasoline with the production levels that have been established certainly by the end of May," Simon said.

Simon also predicted that first quarter profits of major oil companies will be so high as to be "embarrassing" to them when compared to the first three months of 1973.

Simons was asked to comment during an interview on the NBC-TV Today Show on a statement by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash. that oil company profits would be "obscene."

"I don't think that I'd use that adjective," Simon said. "I would say that in the traditional way of financial reporting as compared to the first quarter of last year that they're going to be embarrassing because of the gasoline shortfall and the experience that the American people have had.

"But . . . we have to sit back and take a look at how the oil company profits have measured against all other companies over a long period of time and you'll see that they fall in the middle range."

As for gasoline supplies, he said: "If the American people continue to abide by normal conservation practices, we'll be able to live in a normal fashion."

Simon said he was "encouraging the American people to take a normal summer vacation, not to postpone going to New England or down to Florida if that has been there traditional practice. There is going to be gasoline out there."

But he cautioned that it is going to cost more to go on the trips because "prices are going to be higher, especially among gasoline stations that rely on foreign imports."

Accused of lying to Senate panel

Reinecke denies guilt in court appearance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke of California pleaded "absolutely not guilty" today to three counts of lying to the Senate Judiciary Committee during testimony concerning financing of the 1972 Republican National Convention.

A tentative trial date of June 19, was set by U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker. That is two weeks after a June 4 California Republican primary in which Reinecke is a candidate for the nomination to succeed Ronald Reagan as governor.

Reinecke's lawyers asked Parker for an earlier trial date "so his innocence may be established before the primary." Parker said he had a "crowded court calendar but would consider the request."

Reinecke's lawyer, F. Joseph Donahue, also asked that the trial be moved to California. Parker took that request under consideration and said he would rule later on it.

Reinecke was indicted on perjury charges for testimony about an offer by International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT) to help finance the GOP convention then scheduled for San Diego during hearings on Richard G. Kleindienst's nomination for attorney general.

Speaking with reporters shortly before his court appearance, Reinecke said of the case against him: "It appears nonprofessional. It's a flimsy charge. There is something very strange about the whole thing —I can't help but question the whole motivation behind it."

Asked if he thought the indictment was politically motivated' Reinecke observed that it came "very close" to the primary.

Parker gave Reinecke's lawyer until April 17 to file other motions in the case and gave the Watergate prosecutor's office until April 24 to respond. A hearing on the motions was set for Saturday.

Both sides indicated they would be prepared for trial by May 20 if Parker could find room on his calendar for an earlier date.

"The lieutenant governor is at the moment a candidate for governor of California in a primary that will be held June 4," Donahue told the judge. "It is my desire to set trial on May 20 so his innocence may be established before the primary."

Parker said, "I have a calendar where defendants are languishing in custody and I imagine that other defendants would like a similar fast disposal of their cases. I will have to let it stay as it is for now but I will reconsider my calendar."

Opening may be delayed

Regional Park damaged by people going to Jam

CUCAMOGA — Damage caused by some persons going to the California Jam could cause a delay in the opening of the Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park.

Hundreds of persons tore down chain link fences and gates, trampled three acres of newly sown grass and damaged trees and shrubbery as they crossed the parksite to get to the Ontario Motor Speedway.

The park is located east of Archibald Avenue and north of the San Bernardino Freeway — about 1.5 miles northwest of the speedway.

The site was overrun by persons who parked along Archibald then took a shortcut across the enclosed property to reach the concert.

They climbed over and through two fences and removed two or three gates, officials reported.

Many also stopped off at the recently completed restrooms, clogging the plumbing.

Officials had proposed a dedication program on May 18, with the park then opening in June.

"But should the grass have to be replanted, we would have to delay the opening," said Gary Patton, county regional parks director. "We want the grass established before we open the park to the public."

It may, however, take several weeks to determine if the grass area has to be replanted.

"We plan to keep the area well watered and should know in two weeks if it has to be reseeded," said Rick Wilkins, president of C&R Construction Co., the park contractor.

Wilkins was at the park Saturday and attempted to keep concertgoers from crossing the property. "They parked along Archibald Avnue then crossed the west and east perimeter fences along Archibald and Haven avenues."

He said it looked like a "string of ants" going across the park. "They trampled down the grass we had just planted and 18 to 20 trees and shrubbery were torn down."

Several of the chain-link fence gates also were taken down by persons who removed the pins, he added.

Wilkins said he attempted to stop the pedestrian flow. "But I was just one man talking to a mob like that. I was simply outnumbered."

Wilkins said he was pleased however, that damage was limited to what it was. "It could have been much worse. It just got out of hand."

He said it is difficult to estimate the loss until it is determined if the grass had to be reseeded.

Meanwhile, county officials estimated the damage to the fences and gates at $4,000 to $5,000. "I think the county should be reimbursed for damage costs by the promoters of the concert," said Patton. He also urged steps be taken to prevent any future park damages should other concerts be held at the speedway.

MONTCLAIR — A 17-year-old Chino girl was forced into a car at knifepoint by two men at the Montclair Plaza parking lot Tuesday night, driven to the Padua Hills area above Claremont and raped, police reported.

Police said the girl was walking to her car parked in the lot north of the main entrance of the Montclair Plaza when she was approached by two men, both Caucasians. One of the men produced a knife and forced her into a van truck. The girl was then driven to the Padua Hills where the men raped her. The girl was later released by the men.

The girl reported the incident about 11:10 p.m. nearly two hours after she was abducted.

The girl described the men as Caucasians. One was 16 or 17, 6 feet tall, of slender build, with light blond hair wearing a green and gold Pendleton type shirt and blue Levis. The other man was described as about 19, 6 feet 1, with blond curly hair and a "pointed nose." The second man was wearing blue jeans.

Garey and Arrow collision injures wife of judge

POMONA — Patricia S. Piatt, wife of Pomona Municipal Court Judge James H. Piatt, was injured this morning in a two-car collision at Garey Avenue and Arrow Highway.

Mrs. Piat, 37, suffered head, neck and chest injuries and was to be admitted at Pomona Valley Community Hospital, for observation. The other driver, Mildred M. Wrentsch, 54, Arcadia, had chest and neck injuries and was to be referred to her own physician after being released from the hospital.

Police reported that Mrs. Piatt was southbound on Garey Avenue shortly after 7:30 and Mrs. Wrentsch was eastbound on Arrow when the collision occurred. Officer Bill Laszlo said that early examination of Mrs. Piatt's small car indicated that crossing over a set of railroad tracks north of the intersection may have shaken the car's brake fluid line loose, resulting in a loss of the vehicles brakes.

'Too high' milk prices assailed by Moretti

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, a candidate for governor, said Tuesday that state officials had authorized too high milk prices, which should be reduced immediately by five cents a half-gallon.

The present price structure guarantees a profit even to badly run milk selling operations, and an exorbitant profit to the efficient ones, Moretti said.

Moretti, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, blamed C.B. Christensen, state food and agriculture director, for allowing retailers to pass on higher milk prices to consumers "when retailers haven't even requested it."

The state sets a minimum price for milk. The minimum rose by 10 cents a gallon last month—bringing increases in the past year to 30 cents—when dairymen complained that soaring feed costs had driven the expenses of their operations so high that they would slaughter their cows for beef unless they could charge more for milk.

State milk prices at retail now range from 68 cents a half gallon in Los Angeles County to 73 cents in Siskiyou County.

"Milk is too high and it doesn't need to be," Moretti told a news conference. "I have spoken to retailers and they assured us they could sell milk at a lower minimum price and still make a profit." The Berkeley Co-op said "They can reduce the minimum price of milk a dime and still make a profit," he said.

"The law is not designed or intended to insure a fair profit to even an inefficient or incompetent retailer ... or to assure an exorbitant profit to an efficient, competent retailer," he said.

He said the Assembly would investigate milk pricing and he will ask Christensen to reduce the minimum required price "so the large companies can reduce their prices."

UPI Guild votes to accept offer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wire Service Guild members returned to work at United Press International today, ending a 23-day strike, the first by editorial employes in the news agency's 67-year history.

Striking newsmen, newswomen, photographers, editors and other Guild-covered employes returned to work at midnight, six hours after the Guild announced that Guild members, in a national referendum, aproved a new two-year contract.

The approval, on a vote of 323 to 245, came just one day after 58 per cent of striking Guild members voted to reject the same proposed contract. But the four-member Guild negotiating committee, which had unanimously asked members to reject the offer, resubmitted the proposal with a unanimous recommendation that it be approved. The committee said a 58 per cent rejection vote was not strong enough to maintain a hard bargaining position.

The settlement provides pay raises of 5.67 per cent in each year, raising minimum salaries for the most experienced editorial employes from the $300 provided in the contract that expired at midnight March 15 to $317 immediately and to $335 on Jan. 1, 1975.

The Guild had sought pay raises of 10 per cent in each year of the contract.

Parks and recreation meeting is canceled

POMONA — The Pomona Parks and Recreation Commission has canceled its regular Thursday night meeting due to a lack of a quorum. The session had been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the City Council chambers.

3rd murder suspect arrested in court

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — One of two men charged with the slaying of a park ranger in Marin County turned state's evidence Tuesday and a third suspect was arrested when he showed up as a spectator at the trial.

Charged in the shooting death of National Park Service ranger Kenneth C. Patrick, 40, are Alan W. Veale, 24, and Veronza Bowers, 28.

FBI agents arrested Jonathan Z. Shoher, 28, when he tried to attend the trial at the Federal Building. He was charged with murder and bail was set at $100,000.

California

Seat of government posted on a bicycle

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The seat of government of the nation's most populous state today was a bicycle seat.

The acting governor of California, James R. Mills, was leading a caravan of 40 bicyclists on a 600 mile run from Sacramento to San Diego to rally support for Proposition 5, a ballot initiative to allow highway funds to be used for public transportation systems and pollution control.

Mills, a Democrat from San Diego, is usually president pro tem of the state senate.

But as he and his fellow bicyclists were munching sandwiches outside Santa Barbara Tuesday, Mills was informed that he was about to become the highest executive officer in the state.

Gov. Ronald Reagan is vacationing in Arizona, and Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke was about to fly to Washington to be arraigned on federal charges of perjury.

Mills said that rather than cut short his trip, he would govern from his bicycle seat.

As acting governor, he immediately got an escort of state police and highway patrol officers. They drove while he pedalled, and the patrol car radios served as his link to the capitol, Mills said. "There's no problem," Mills said. "Anything that needs to be done, I can do from here."

A Reagan aide said there was one bit of pending business, a school financing bill that is awaiting signature by some governor. But it is not worth buying an airline ticket for someone to carry the bill to Southern California and hunt up the acting governor on his bicycle to sign it, so it will await the return of Reagan or Reinecke.

He said he has no plans to take any official actions at all before his "term" comes to an end tonight when Reinecke is scheduled to return.

If there is an emergency, he said, Reagan left him with the instructions "to do nothing that would be distasteful to him or to me."

The only worry for the bicycle-borne governor was expressed by those who noted that two years ago Mills, on his bicycle, crashed into a San Francisco County supervisor, breaking a collarbone and a rib.

Columnist charges Connally took $10,000 bribe from Milk Products

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The Watergate prosecutors are investigating bribery charges against former Treasury Secretary John Connally.

The crack FBI squad, which is assigned to the special prosecutor's office, has dug up evidence that Connally pocketed $10,000 from the Associated Milk Products, Inc., and hastily returned the cash after the dairy lobby came under investigation.

This dramatic development could finish Connally as a presidential contender. For the past six months, he has barnstormed through more than 30 states addressing Republican audiences and courting party leaders in hot pursuit, presumably, of the 1976 presidential nomination.

Our FBI sources say the alleged $10,000 bribe was passed by AMPI official Robert Lilly to lobbyist Jake Jacobsen, who delivered it to Connally. Jacobsen already has been indicted for perjury for testifying that he stashed the $10,000 in a safe deposit box and never removed it until the FBI opened the box last November.

Connally has emphatically denied that he ever received the money. An associate has said that Jacobsen offered the $10,000 as a campaign contribution for distribution to GOP candidates but that Connally turned down the offer.

The FBI's Watergate squad has painstakingly tracked down evidence, however, that the $10,000 not only was accepted by Connally but that he made two trips to return the money after it became hot.

The first time, according to our FBI sources, Connally gave back the money in $100 bills. Later, he allegedly became worried that the bills could be traced and brought a second batch of smaller bills, which he exchanged for the first $10,000.

He took pains, say our sources, to select bills that had been issued before the $10,000 payment was made. He allegedly didn't want the FBI to find any new bills among those Jacobsen said had remained untouched in a safe deposit box.

Ironically, the former Treasury head forgot that Federal Reserve banks don't necessarily issue currency during the year it is dated. FBI agents have established that some of the bills in the bank box were not issued until after Jacobsen claimed the money had been deposited.

A methodical FBI check of deposit slips, telephone tolls and travel records have poked other damaging holes in Connally's alibi. Our sources say witnesses have also given the FBI statements which contradict Connally.

After Connally pocketed the $10,000 from the milk producers, according to the FBI evidence, he juggled his schedule on March 16, 1972, to meet with AMPI officials George Mehren and Harold Nelson. They were brought over to the Treasury by Jacobsen.

Connally was then at the height of his power and prestige. He listened carefully to the dairymen's appeal for greater dairy subsidies and for settling an antitrust action against AMPI.

Then in the presence of the dairy lobbyists, according to sworn testimony, he telephoned former Attorney General John Mitchell and told him in blunt Texas language:

"John, get off your — and find out what is going on in the Midwest. There is discontent among the dairy farmers, and I have a group of them here."

A year earlier, Connally huddled with the AMPI's Robert Lilly at Washington's Page terminal, where the private planes tie up. The Treasury Secretary allegedly told Lilly that a dairy subsidy increase was "in the bag."

This was the same Lilly who later handed over $10,000 to Jacobsen for delivery to Connally.

A few days after the airport meeting, Connally attended a White House meeting with the dairy lobbyists. They promised to raise a campaign chest for President Nixon's reelection.

The White House has acknowledged that "Secretary Connally said that their votes would be important in several Midwestern states, and he noted that the industry had political funds which would be distributed among House and Senate candidates in the coming election."

The following day, the White House ordered a price support increase — which the Agriculture Department had just rejected — worth approximately $500 million a year to the dairy industry.

Not long afterwards, Connally threw a barbecue at his Texas ranch for President Nixon. High on the guest list was Leon Jaworski, who as special prosecutor must now prosecute his friend Connally.

Renting to Weight Watchers costing tax exempt status

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — At least five churches and synagogues will lose their tax exempt status because they rent space for Weight Watchers meetings at $25 a session, the county assessor's office said Tuesday.

Churches and synagogues are exempt from property taxes, under state law, only if they are used "solely and exclusively for religious worship," said Sheldon Paris, who is in charge of religious and welfare exemptions in the county assessor's office.

He said 21 churches and synagogues had been warned they might lose their exemption, and eight had notified him they would not allow Weight Watchers to meet in their buildings anymore and "will retain their exemptions."

"Five said Weight Watchers will stay, and they will take the tax consequences," he said, meaning tax bills of from $100 to $1000.

Eight congregations are yet to be heard from.

A spokeswoman for Weight Watchers said the organization favored use of churches for meetings, held one to three times a week, because they charged low rent, were favorably located and had plenty of parking.

The tax ruling is driving the rents up to as much as $2,400 a year however, she said, so the group will "ease out" of churches.

Christians in valley prepare Maundy Thursday rites

Christians throughout the Pomona Valley will gather Thursday evening to celebrate the night on which Jesus and His Disciples were in the Upper Room breaking bread together.

Maundy Thursday commemorates the events of Christ's last days on earth. Holy Thursday will be observed in Pomona Valley churches with the celebration of Holy Communion, prayer services and, in some denominations, foot-washing ceremonies.

The word Maundy refers to Christ's commandment to His Disciples in the Upper Room: "A new commandment I give unto you: That ye love one another" — John 13:34.

The events of the Maundy Thursday celebration are Christ's washing of His disciples' feet and His last meal with the disciples.

Only a few denominations conduct the foot-washing ritual or Love Feast.

Maundy Thursday services will be conducted as follows:

POMONA — A candlelight Tenebrae and Holy Communion service will be conducted by the Rev. George A. Wilson at the First Presbyterian Church at 7:30 p.m.

Court order halts fertilizer plant

CHINO — A proposed fertilizer processing plant, bitterly opposed by local residents here, has been ordered halted by a Superior Court judge for lack of proper environmental considerations.

In issuing a stay order against Red Star Plant Foods Co., Judge James E. Cunningham's order is also directly critical of the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors' failure to intervene and demand a full environmental impact report, even after residents had petitioned the supervisors to do so

The court order culminated a class action suit brought by Shirley Swierstra of Chino on behalf of all residents living in the southeast Chino area.

Attorney Bill McVittie, representing the residents from resenting the residents, noted that the county failed to make proper notice for public hearings on the matter, and thereby prevented resident from exercising their rights to oppose the fertilizer company's plans.

"More important is the failure of the county to prepare an environmental impact report covering the effect that the proposed manure processing and stock-piling operation will have on the surrounding community," McVittie said.

The basis for the residents' case was the landmark Friends of Mammoth decision of 1972, which requires environmental impact reports for projects that may adversely effect the surrounding community.

Judge Cunningham scheduled a hearing for April 19 at 10 a.m. when the fertilizer company will be given the opportunity to show cause why the stay order should be lifted.

Paul Bernhard, president of the Downey-based company, was not available for comment on the court decision or what course the company will pursue.

In the past, however, Bernhard has adamantly contended that the fertilizer plant would not adversely affect the community.

The company has operated a fertilizer plant in Downey since 1927, Bernhard has publicly stated, and has never been the target of community complaints even though surrounded by restaurants and a variety of retail commercial operations.

Meanwhile, residents of the area are intent on keeping the fertilizer plant out and preventing similar ventures in the future.

Banding together, the residents have formed the Committee to Protect the Chino Valley Environment and will hold a meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Building.

McVittie, who is also the Chino city attorney, is scheduled to address the group concerning the present legal situation. In addition, city planning director Gale Carr will review the city and county general plans for the area

Two fires reported in empty homes

POMONA — Arson investigators are looking into the causes of fires started in kitchen sinks in vacant homes at 1744 and 1752 Aralia Ave. Tuesday night.

Fire units responded to an alarm at 6:03 p.m. Tuesday and were fighting a blaze at 1744 Aralia Ave. when they discovered a fire next door at 1752 Aralia Ave.

Firemen reported $5,000 damage to the structure at 1744 Aralia Ave., but none at 1752.

Department officials reported it was "touch and go" for a while at 909 Carson Lane at 9:36 p.m. where someone had spilled gasoline on a garage floor.

Mrs. Phyllis Christian told officials she arrived home to discover the spilled gasoline and noted the odor of gas throughout her house.

Mrs. Christian reportedly opened the door from her service porch to the garage, but luckily the gas flame in the water heater in the porch failed to ignite the fumes.

S. D. parks group to meet

SAN DIMAS — Members of the San Dimas Parks and Recreation Commission will meet in a special study session Thursday at 7 p.m.

They will discuss master park plans which have been prepared by Lampman and Associates.

Watches worth $700 stolen

POMONA — Seven hundred dollars in women's watches were stolen Tuesday afternoon at Bryant Jewelers, 215 Pomona Mall East. An employe told police that she was distracted by one supposed customer while a second opened the case and took the watches, all Omegas.

Fiddle concert expects 100,000

UNION GROVE, N.C. (UPI) — About 1,000 early arrivals were "picking and fiddling around" Tuesday in preparation for the 50th annual old-time fiddlers' festival that is expected to attract 100,000 persons.

The three-day gettogether begins Thursday with competition in seven categories, including the best "old-time band," the best "bluegrass band" and the "best single performance."

A festival spokesman said crowds began arriving early this week and by Tuesday about 1,000 persons had arrived. The convention last year drew about 75,000 persons during the three days.

Assistant superintendent resigns

School administration is reorganized

By PATRICK Spencer
P-B Staff Writer

UPLAND — School trustees authorized a major reorganization of the district's administrative system Tuesday following the resignation of Asst. Supt. Darrel Dawes.

Under the new reorganization, the position of assistant superintendent, which Dawes has held since 1971, will be retitled personnel administrator.

The new position carries a different range of duties, according to Supt. Bill Plaster. Rather than have responsibility for both certificated personnel matters and instructional programs, the personnel administrator will be solely responsible for both classified and certificated personnel matters.

Plaster will assume responsibility for the management of the district's instructional program under the new system, while Business Manager Glenn Hardy will be relieved of his current additional duties as classified personnel manager.

Plaster said the new arrangement "is an effort to bring better service to the district and to employes." Employes personnel questions and problems requiring professional advice and counsel should get immediate response from district administrators, he said, and the arrangement will provide employes with someone who can devote his full time and attention to employe matters.

Plaster said he had been dissatisfied with the old arrangement under which personnel matters were split between Dawes and Hardy He felt the new organization would be more streamlined and effective.

Plaster said the new position will become effective July 1 and that he would begin a search Monday for someone to fill it.

Dawes' resignation becomes effective June 30. He has been with the district in a variety of teaching and administrative posts for some 20 years. In 1970 he served as acting superintendent, but turned down the board's offer of the full position to return to teaching.

In his new post, Dawes will act as both district superintendent and principal of the 500-student Pollock Pines Elementary School District in Northern California's El Dorado County, east of Sacramento.

In other action, the board authorized Supt. Plaster to meet with Roy C. Hill, county superintendent of schools, to discuss a county welfare department plan to set up a 25-member Child Development Services Advisory-Action Committee.

The committee would function to implement Assembly Bill 99, the "Child Development Act" which places responsibility upon educational systems to develop an integrated plan for the care and development of children in the absence of their parents.

Such services as preschool programs, day care centers, children's centers, emergency homemaker services, social services and health screening and treatment are to be administered at the district level under the supervision of county and state education officials by 1978.

The board wants to obtain the county schools administration reaction to the proposal and obtain additional information on the scope and activities of the new committee before an official endorsement is given.

Syria envoys on way to Washington

By United Press International

A Syrian delegation headed for Washington today carrying proposals for troop disengagement with Israel in the Golan Heights where the two countries have waged a daily war of attrition for nearly a month.

The nine-man Syrian team, headed by military intelligence chief Brig. Hikmat Chehabi, spent the night in London en route before flying on to present the Syrian proposals to U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and receive in return the Israeli plan for disengagement.

It will then return to Damascus with the Israeli plan which Kissinger got earlier this month from Defense Minister Moshe Dayan.

Arab press reports said Chehabi was not authorized to negotiate with Kissinger.

The Beirut newspaper An Nahar said that the outcome of the disengagement talks may be determined by the three hills that dominate Quneitra, the largest town in the Golan Heights.

The Israelis are ready to withdraw from the town, provided they keep the hills, the newspaper said, but the Syrians want Israel to pull off the hills as well.

After talking to Chehabi and studying the Syrian plan, Kissinger may visit the Middle East later this month in an attempt to bring about Golan disengagement in the same way he negotiated diesengagement between Egypt and Israel by shuttling back and forth between the two countries.

Israeli and Syrian forces exchanged artillery and tank fire in the Golan Heights Tuesday for the 29th consecutive day, with skirmishes reported on the slopes of Mt. Hermon, 22 miles from Damascus.

Syria said it inflicted "heavy losses" on an Israeli tank unit. Israel reported no casualties.

In Israel, there were new calls for the resignation of Dayan as a result of of an Israeli report charging that Israel was unprepared for the October Middle East War.

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir said: "If I were Moshe Dayan, I think the best thing for me to do would be for me to resign."

Leaders of Prime Minister Golda Meir's Labor party decided to empower a committee to prepare suggestions for parliamentary debate Thursday on the whole issue of Israeli unpreparedness.

In another development, Syria and Lebanon were at odds over the Lebanese refusal to turn over to Syria two Israeli pilots who bailed out from the Phantom jet over south Lebanaon Monday before it went down in flames.

I'm laughing, but I hurt

By ERMA BOMBECK

A reader who signs herself "Ann," has threatened to send me her 2½-year-old son and 1½-year-old daughter because, "You seem to be able to laugh at children."

She goes on to sreport that they are a "handful," having put a loaf of bread in a pitcher of Kool-Aid, smeared mayonnaise all over themselves, dumped baby powder in their ears and (Devilish Danny) emptied his potty down the floor furnace all in one morning.

I don't know how to tell you, Ann, but March and April are not the months to test a woman's humor. Let me spell it out for you.

I've been on a diet for two weeks and have gained three pounds. I broke my bottom getting to a White Sale, only to discover that all that was left were double top sheets, single contour bottoms, and king pillowcases. My checkbook balanced. (I was hoping I was not $63 overdrawn.)

My best friend (whom I always trusted) just learned how to bake bread. The school called and said they are suspicious my son posted a sign in the restroom that read, "Flush twice. It's a long way to the cafeteria." (He not only signed his work, but he misspelled cafeteria.) Some wise guy wrote "HELP" in the dust on my draperies.

My world is falling apart, Ann. Lucy is leaving TV, Miss Kitty quit at the Long Branch, Rhoda is leaving Mary Tyler Moore, and a magazine in the supermarket had a blaring headline, "Jackie Onassis Spending Habits Suggest Mental Disorder." (I've had the same disorder for years and my husband says the only cure is the penitentiary.)

The cheerleader on my high school cheer squad just became a grandmother. The supermarket just discontinued my silverware pattern and I had five place setings to go. I just found my Christmas cards and a roll of eight-cent stamps. My daughter is 20 and doesn't know how to turn on the stove and I spent 40 minutes ironing a linen dress and then discovered it doesn't fit me anymore. The other day I drove into a drive-in bank and the car ahead of me got a flat.

I like you, Ann, and I want to assure you that you are doing a splendid job with those children and that psychologists recommend a child belongs with his mother. Besides, if I laugh anymore I will surely hurt myself.

(What do you wanta bet? With my luck, the kids will arrive with postage due.)

Minimum wage bill

Nixon signed it, but reluctantly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When a president is particularly pleased with a piece of legislation, he throws open the doors to his Oval Office and invites congressional leaders, cabinet members and television cameras to record the historic signing.

He manipulates dozens of pens with grand flourishes, and the assembled onlookers eagerly await the gift of the presidential ballpoints.

He has a speech about the surpassing public good that will accrue from the legislation.

And it rarely is a time for partisanship. Accolades are heaped equally upon the congressional guests, Democrat and Republican alike. It is a time for jolly good will, and the political differences are laid aside in the super abundance of cooperation.

On Monday, President Nixon signed a bill he was not particularly pleased with.

The doors on the Oval Office were opened, no mem fice were opened, no members of Congress were present. There was only one cabinet official, Labor Secretary Peter Brennan.

There was only one pen. Nixon affixed his signature quickly, skidded the pen across the presidential desk to Brennan, and flipped the completed bill like a frisbee into the outbox in the right hand corner of his desk.

The reporters let in moments before were whisked out. There had been no presidential speech, although Nixon murmered a few words as he signed, and the White House issued a lukewarm statement afterwards.

The "ceremony" was over. The provisions of the new law said that in three weeks the minimum wage for about 54 million Americans would be $2 per hour.

The nation had its first new minimum wage bill since 1967. About 7 to 8 million new workers were brought under the minimum wage umbrella. And Congress had a political victory over a reluctant president.

It was just seven months ago that Nixon vetoed as inflationary and too liberal an almost identical bill. Efforts to override the veto failed, but the massive majority by which both the House and Senate approved the new bill two weeks ago made it a certainty a second veto could be nullified.

So, with his standings low in the popularity polls and the House of Representatives studying his possible impeachment, Nixon apparently felt that though some segments of the bill clearly were distasteful to him, nothing could be gained by another veto.

The minimum wage will be raised to $2 an hour May 1, to $2.10 an hour Jan. 1, 1975, and to $2.30 an hour Jan. 1, 1976.

Included in minimum wage coverage for the first time were domestic service employes — except babysitters and paid companions; all state and local government workers; and retail service workers employed by chain stores.

The law also will extend provisions requiring payment of overtime in excess of 40 hours a week to 8 million workers not now covered —mostly in hotels, restaurants, nursing homes, bowling alleys and similar businesses.

In his written statement, Nixon said, "On the whole, S2747 contains more good than bad and I have concluded that the best interests of the American people will be served by signing it into law."

"Although I have some reservations about portions of this legislation, its basic purpose —to increase the minimum wage for working men and women of this country — deserves the support of all Americans," Nixon said.

"The federally legislated minimum wage for most American workers has remained static for six years, despite a number of inccreases in the cost of living, raising the minimum wage is now a matter of justice that can no longer be fairly delayed."

Two dollars an hour comes out to $80 a week, $4,160 a year —before taxes.

Brennan, who said the signing "marks a great day for American working men and women," put the presidential pen in a box embossed with a presidential seal, and left the Oval Office.

U. of Minnesota hires president

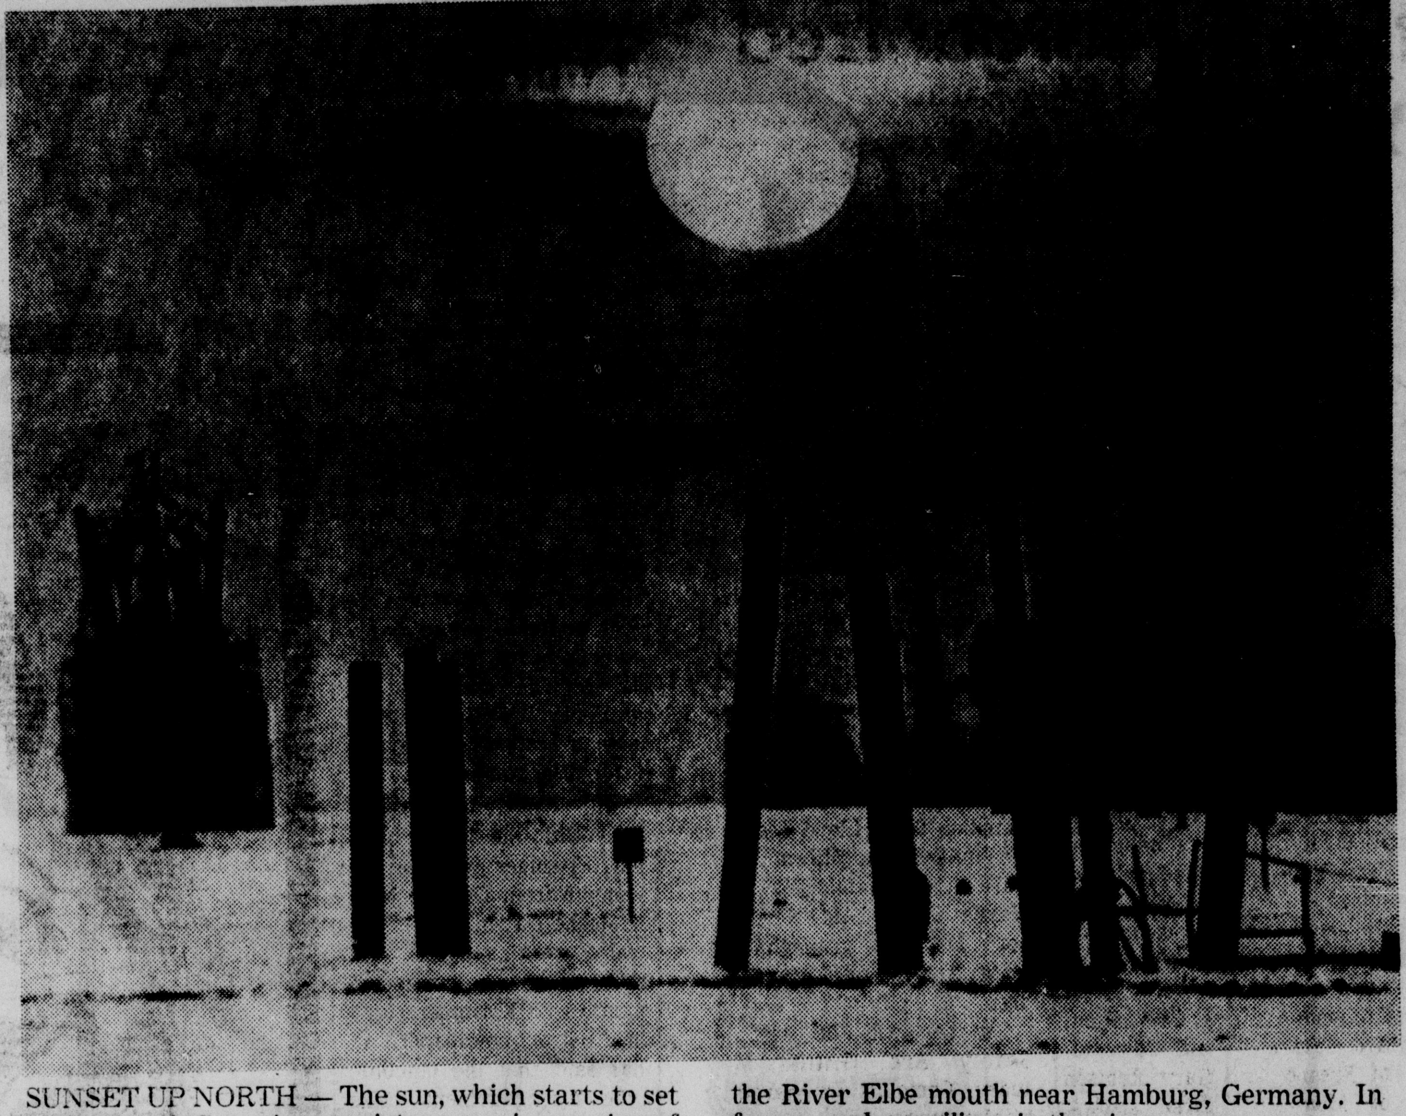
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — C. Peter Magrath, 40, president of the State University of New York at Binghamton, has been hired as president of the University of Minnesota at $60,000 per year.

Magrath will succeed Malcolm Moos, who is scheduled to leave in July to head the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

Before going to the Binghampton institution, Magrath was employed by the University of Nebraska as vice chancellor for academic affairs at the Lincoln campus.

'The necessary'

The privy or outhouse of Colonial Virginia was aptly called "the necessary."



SUNSET UP NORTH — The sun, which starts to set in the North Sea, gives a picturesque impression of the River Elbe mouth near Hamburg, Germany. In foreground are pilings in the river.

Indian canoe

The Indian word canoe was introduced into the English language by John Smith, describing the hollowed-out log used by the Indians for water travel.

Ancient custom

Christening a new ship by breaking a bottle of wine over tis prow is believed to be a survival of the ancient custom of dedicating each vessel to the protection of a god.

Strength of gravity weakening, U.S. Navy astronomer asserts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first indirect evidence was reported Monday supporting the theory that the strength of gravity on earth and throughout the universe is very slowly weakening.

Dr. Thomas C. Van Flandern, an astronomer at the U.S. Naval Observatory, measured the orbital speed of the moon with the precision of an atomic clock to determine that the force of gravity apparently is decreasing at the rate of one part in 10 billion per year.

This means, he said in an interview, that a 150-pound man would lose 7 millionths of a gram of weight a year. A gram is roughly the weight of a paper clip.

Van Flandern presented his findings at the opening session of a week-long meeting of the American Geophysical Union. He said his work was based on a theory proposed two years ago by Cambridge University astronomer Fred Hoyle.

The basis for the work is the assumption that if gravity is weakening, the orbits of planets about the sun, or the moon about the earth, would slowly expand and the time for each orbit would gradually increase. The orbital time of the moon was easiest to measure, but it is also known that the friction of tidal forces between the earth and moon is slowing the moon's orbit.

Hoyle suggested that if the role played by tidal forces were removed from the calculations, the role of a decrease of gravity could be measured. Van Flandern, using the separate calculations of two other scientists, subtracted the tidal factor and found that what presumably is weakening of gravity is allowing the moon to move away from the earth about 4 centimeters a year—about 1½ inches —to increase its orbital period seven-tenths of a second a year.

"This is the first numerical result which appears to have as its most probable explanation that gravity is decreasing," he said.

Up to about 40 years ago, it was assumed by scientists that the force of gravity remained constant. The first suggestion that it might be decreasing was made in the 1930s. But there is as yet no direct way to measure changes in the force of gravity, and Van Flandern said his work was the first indirect evidence suggesting gravity is decreasing.

Another possible cause for a lengthening of orbital period would be that the sun is losing mass at a greater rate than is now believed. But he said astrophysicists do not believe this is the case.

"So as nearly as we can tell, the other possibilities seem to be excluded," Van Flandern said.

If the rate of gravity weakening were constant throughout the history of the solar system, he said, it would mean that an object that existed 4.5 billion years ago would be twice as heavy as it is today.

A weakening of gravity also would have major implications for the earth and moon. It would mean, for example, that the earth is expanding at the rate of less than one centimeter per century. That, he said, could explain why the continents of earth seem to be slowly drifting apart.

A constant rate of the decline in the force of gravity also compounds a problem for scientists trying to determine the history of the moon in relation to earth. Constant deceleration of the moon's orbital speed by tidal forces alone would mean that the moon could not have been a satellite more than 1.5 billion years and the weakening of gravity on top of that would mean the moon must not have been an earth satellite longer than 1 billion years.

But he said if the strength of gravity is decreasing, a longtime puzzle about earth's rotation would be cleared up. The rotation of earth apparently has been slowing at only half the rate predicted by tidal friction with the moon. But the theory that gravity is weakening would account for this discrepancy because it would imply that the astronomical time scale used for measurements must also be revised.

'Endangered species' law rattles Illinois

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) —You could go to jail for a year in Illinois for carrying an unregistered purse—if it happens to be made of alligator skin.

Illinois conservation officers this week began enforcing a new Illinois "endangered species act," which requires persons who own or sell animals or animal byproducts from a long list of endangered breeds to register with the state or face fines up to $1,000 and a year in prison.

The list of creatures threatened by extinction includes alligators, leopards, tigers, cheetahs, panthers, cougars, gray wolves, red wolves, polar bears, kit foxes and green turtles.

"Animal products" refers to such things as teeth, fur, claws, hides, feathers, "the body or any portion thereof."

The Illinois General Assembly passed the law and former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie signed it in 1972. But enforcement was delayed until Monday while conservation officials geared up for the strange task of monitoring the buying and selling of animal products.

"We are concerned mostly with the large scale commercial importers," William O. Brey, chief of law enforcement for the Department of Conservation, said.

"But individuals who own such things as alligator purses or rare hunting trophies must also register with the state."

Brey said although conservation officers are now under orders to make arrests for violations of the law, "We will procede very carefully until people get a chance to catch on to what is happening."

Since April of last year, the department's division on wildlife resources has issued some 1,100 permits to people who reported they own furs, purses, shoes, souvenirs and other objects derived from rare animals. A few fur retailers have also applied for permission to sell what furs they have in stock.

However, a spot check of Springfield merchants revealed some dealers were caught off guard by the new law.

"Frankly, I didn't know we had such a law," Lester Friedman, manager of S.A. Barker Co., a women's apparel store, said. "We might have a few furs or alligator purses in stock. If I had known, they would have been taken off sale by now. We certainly don't want to break the law."

Another retailer said he was not aware of the law until a week ago when a customer asked if a fur she had recently bought was on the endangered list.

"I think the Department of Conservation should have contacted us a long time ago rather than wait for us to ask them for a list," Charles Paris, fur department manager for Berger-Siegel, another women's clothing store, said.

Harry Rice, fur manager for Myers Brothers Department Store, said he does not carry endangered furs because "people just don't want them anymore."

"The company we buy from in New York has absolutely gotten out of the leopard business," Rice said. "You may find some foreign companies that still offer them, but we don't get much demand for leopard—or any endangered species."

Sheepskins used to halt bedsores

MELBOURNE (UPI) — The Austin Hospital here has decided that sometimes old ways of doing things are better than new. After trying various new materials and methods it has gone back to using sheepskins to reduce the incidence of bedsores in patients.

Humane Society against animal control sticks

Perhaps you can find out where I may purchase a walking stick that is battery operated.

I would like to do some walking or cycling but the territory where I live is definitely too dangerous because of large dogs that attack one while on the streets. — Mrs. V. S., Chino.

There are sticks about 16 inches long equipped with a small battery and a discharge button which when pushed will give an animal a mild shock.

They resemble the devices used to herd cattle in stockyards.

You can obtain one through the Home Pet Center in Claremont. The Home Pet Center doesn't carry the sticks but can order them from an affiliated store in Santa Ana.

Before you decide to get one you should know that the National Humane Society is pushing legislation to remove them from the market or modify them.

One of the problems is that children find them and take them to school.

They have been used in training animals but pets have been said to cower whenever they see any kind of a stick as a result of such training.

Vincent Martin, Southern California Edison Co. district manager in the Pomona area, said meter readers tried them on an experimental basis and discarded them more than 10 years ago. They were considered "poor public relations."

He recommended that you do not obtain one.

When I re-entered Chaffey College, I filled out Veterans Administration forms to obtain educational benefits.

On the forms I indicated that I was married and had three children. According to VA benefit charts, I was entitled to $344 per month.

My first check was for $261. I wrote to the VA office in Los Angeles requesting that they advise me whether I could claim the children, as they are stepchildren.

Approximately a month later I received a form letter advising me to send a certified copy of each child's birth certificate and my marriage license. I purchased certified copies and mailed them approximately a week later.

The following month I received a reply which made no mention of the forms already sent and requested certified copies of each child's birth certificate, my marriage license and divorce decrees from my prior marriage and my wife's.

These copies were obtained and mailed. A week later I received my VA check in the sum of $261.

I would greatly appreciate your assistance in finding out whether stepchildren may be claimed as dependents and, if so, your help in obtaining retroactive benefits. —J. M., Upland.

John G. Miller, acting regional director of the VA, explained that previous records complicated your application because they showed only your previous marriage.

When your papers were brought up to date, an educational allowance was processed to pay you retroactively from the date you entered school at the rate of $334 per month, not $344 as you thought, including an allowance for your wife and three dependent children.

In your case, he said, retroactive benefits are being paid for stepchildren because they are in the custody of you and your wife.

In preparing to move, I emptied a heavy fireproof filing safe.

It revealed two stock certificates in the name of Campbell's Foods, Ltd., dated September 1931.

I have never received any profits or notices of meetings.

If you are interested in trying to locate this organization, I will be pleased. —J. H., Chino.

We wrote to R. M. Smythe & Co., securities valuation specialists.

Michael A. Mullan of the company replied that Campbell's Food, Ltd., a Nevada corporation, "passed out of business" many years ago. He said this was confirmed by state authorities.

Mullan said there is no connection at all between the old Campbell's Food, Ltd., and any modern corporations with similar sounding names. The stock has no value.

We're sorry we couldn't soup up your personal economy.

Planners urged to vacate street in bad traffic spot

POMONA — A proposal to vacate a portion of Pomona Boulevard where it intersects with Valley Boulevard will be considered tonight by the Pomona Planning Commission.

Such action is sought to reduce a "highly hazardous" traffic situation since Pomona Boulevard enters Valley Boulevard at an extremely acute angle, city officials report.

The problem is compounded by a railroad crossing at the intersection. Considerable city funds would be needed to provide crossing protection should the present traffic pattern continue, they added.

The proposed closure will cause no undue hardship to motorists or adjacent property owners, officials noted. They proposed to construct a cul-de-sac to handle truck traffic using this section of Pomona Boulevard.

In addition, a barrier is requested on Pomona Boulevard east of the railroad right-of-way. The intersection is near Pacific State Hospital.

Other agenda items include:

—A request to vacate an 18-foot-wide portion of Fourth Street between Garey Avenue and Thomas Street. This will become part of the Pomona Financial Center.

—A request to include a 25-acre section between First Street and Mission Boulevard and Parcels Street and White Avenue in a redevelopment project area. The site is west of the Pomona Mall. The matter may later be set for public hearing.

Historical society aids Rains House

CUCAMONGA — The Casa de Rancho Historical Society has donated $865 for development of the Rains House here.

County Supervisor Daniel Mikesell accepted the gift on behalf of the County Museum Association.

The Rains House is listed in the National Register of Historical Places. It was built in 1961 and is located near San Bernardino Road and Vineyard Avenue.

The house was built by John Rains, who purchased the property from L. V. Prudhomme, son-in-law of Tiburcio Tapia who obtained the property in a 1839 land grant.

Claremont councilmen hold firm to choice of new post office site

By GEORGE MacLAREN
P-B Staff Writer

CLAREMONT — The City Council Tuesday night adopted a "hang tough" attitude and unanimously reaffirmed its choice of the Bonita Avenue-Oberlin Avenue site as top priority for a new post office.

Two weeks ago the council had received word that the U.S. Postal Service had chosen three acres of prime industrial land on Arrow Highway at Bucknell Avenue for a new post office.

The latter site had been the last on a priority list of eight possible locations drawn up by the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce and the Planning Commission.

The choice of the Arrow Highway site shocked the council and the chamber, which sent letters of concern to the Postal Service and congressmen.

City Manager Keith Mulrooney and Mayor Bertye Smith at a luncheon meeting Monday with Claremont Postmaster Harry F. Lawrence and Verl Coons, sectional center manager for the U.S. Postal Service, stressed the city's displeasure with the selection of the Arrow Highway site.

Mulrooney said he has talked to a representative of Pacific Scientific Corp. and was told that the firm had not sold the land to the Postal Service.

"I feel we would have some say in the site location," said Mayor Smith.

She explained that two possible sites next to the railroad tracks west of Indian Hill Boulevard and east of College Avenue had been discarded because of their rectangular shape.

Mrs. Smith noted that the Bonita-Oberlin site would be the most expensive in per-foot cost, and would involve relocation of families, but so would the city's No. 2 choice on the east side of Indian Hill Boulevard at Green Street.

The council cited the possible danger factor of traffic traveling south on Indian Hill Boulevard having to make a left turn to get to the post office.

"Indian Hill Boulevard would be terribly dangerous for senior citizens," said Councilwoman Claire McDonald. "Some of them don't drive."

"I want to hang tough on the original site," commented Councilman Frank Hungerford.

"I would, too," Mrs. McDonald said.

Councilman Gene Block's motion that the council reaffirm its previous choice of Bonta Avenue passed unanimously.

Mulrooney reported that the Chamber of Commerce will call a general membership meeting to discuss the problem.

DONA JOSEFA 'RETURNS'

Longs appoints another director

WALNUT CREEK — Longs Drug Stores, Inc., a drug chain operating 75 stores in California and Hawaii including one at 1450 E. Holt Ave., Pomona, has announced the appointment of Dean McHenry to its board of directors.

McHenry is chancellor of the UC Santa Cruz campus.

Longs' directors also announced the appointment of five vice presidents. They are Dr. Dominic Cavallo, Ronald A. Plomgren, David G. DeSchane, Richard A. Scott and George A. Duey.

J. M. Long, company president, said the vice presidential appointments were made to provide an executive staff to assure the expansion of the firm whose sales have grown at an average yearly rate of 22 per cent over the past 10 years.

Ten to 12 new stores are expected to open this year, Long said.

Library Friends give life award and elect officers

POMONA — Col. James H. Jones, a Cal Poly alumnus and founding member of Friends of the Cal Poly Library, has been awarded a special life membership in the group for his contributions and service to the university library.

Jones, of Irvine, has provided the library, on permanent loan, a valuable collection of paintings and prints accumulated over a 20-year period.

The life membership certificate is the first of its kind awarded, according to Frank Gaydos of Ontario, elected as this year's friends president.

Current officers of the organization besides Gaydos are Philip Wessels of Diamond Bar, vice president; Katherine B. Seibert of Claremont, secretary; and Donald Pfleuger of Claremont, treasurer.

The organization fosters interaction among the library, students and community members by featuring guest speakers during the year, presenting special art exhibits and through sponsorship of a student book collection contest, according to Gaydos.

$2-million law suit is filed against hospital and doctor for crash victims

POMONA — A $2 million law suit in Superior Court here filed against Doctors Hospital in La Puente and a physician charges negligence in the treatment of two teen-age Hacienda Heights accident victims.

The accusation earlier began an investigation by Los Angeles County authorities into the hospital's services. The county presently has a contract for emergency services with the hospital.

The physician named in the suit is Dr. Lynn Hilde, employed in the emergency room the night of the incident.

The suit was filed in behalf of Cindy Lee Trotter, 17, by her mother, Virginia Patry, 1338 Ridley Ave., and Roseanne O'Connor, also 17, by her mother, Agnes R. O'Connor, 1308 Coble Ave., all of Hacienda Heights. Hacienda Heights Attorney Andrew Patterson is asking $1 million for each girl.

The incident began at 2 a.m. March 16. The girls were passengers in a van driven by John Nelson Jr., 20, Valinda, when the vehicle crashed into a utility pole at Valley Boulevard and Wickford Avenue in La Puente.

The girls were sent by sheriff's deputies to Doctors Hospital in accordance with the county's agreement with that institution. In the emergency room they were examined by Dr. Hilde, authorities said.

The suit alleges that because of negligence the girls were told they had only superficial injuries and they were refused treatment. Actually, the suit claims, each had serious injuries. Cindy reportedly had two breaks in one leg, in addition to other injuries, and faced lengthy treatment in another hospital.

Roseanne, the suit said, had leg, back and other injuries and was placed under treatment at County-USC Medical Center.

The complaint was brought up at a recent meeting of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors and assigned for investigation of the county's emergency aide plan contract with the hospital.

Sheriff's Dept. is looking for new trainees

POMONA — The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department is looking for trainees, both men and women.

Filing dates for applicants will be from April 22 through April 26 and applicants must file in person between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. The nearest Pomona Valley location where applicants can file is the sheriff's station in Industry.

After being accepted, applicants must take a written examination. Such examinations will begin April 29 and will be administered at the Hall of Administration in Los Angeles. Those who file first will be tested first, a department spokesman said.

Perfect Posture winner will be crowned Friday

POMONA — The Citrus Chiropractic Society's Miss Perfect Posture for 1974 will be crowned at a special pageant scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday at Orlando's restaurant.

The local winner will represent the society in the state finals of the 1974 Perfect Posture Pageant, according to Dr. Robert Loehr, local posture pageant chairman. The state finals will be held Friday, May 24 in Los Angeles at the California Chriopractic Association's annual convention.

The local group is one of 10 member chapters in the Los Angeles County Chiropractic Society, the largest professional organization representing the area's chiropractic doctors, Dr. Loehr added.

Easter bunny needs help with wrapping

POMONA — Because of the large volume of candy Easter eggs being handled for this year's Easter egg hunts Saturday, the two sponsoring agencies are asking for volunteers to help with the wrapping.

Adults and senior citizens, especially members of the Pomona Senior Citizens Touring Club, willing to help with the chore are asked to attend an egg-wrapping session Thursday at 9 a.m. at the Ganesha Park Community Center, 1600 N. White Ave.

Volunteers are asked to bring sack lunches. The two agencies, the Pomona Fireman's Association and the parks and recreation department, will provide coffee and doughnuts.

Novice dog classes beginning Thursday

POMONA — A 10-week course in novice dog obedience will begin Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Westmont Park Community Building.

The first lesson is free. Attendance is required for all who wish to take the course. Registration will follow the first lesson. Dogs should not be brought to the first class.

The course is sponsored by the Pomona Recreation Department and the Los Perrerors Dog Obedience Club. Trainers Bill Koehler and Bob Yankie will conduct the course.

EDITORIAL

Opinion

Crime and what punishment?

Last fall, a judge in Miami, Fla., made the news wires when he proposed an unusual punishment for a 19-year-old self-confessed murderer.

Rather than sentence the youth to life in prison, where he would simply be a burden to society, the judge suggested that he be put on probation and be required to support his victim's wife and five children until the latter could earn their own livings.

The public prosecutor labeled the idea as "disgusting, abhorrent and abominable."

If, some 7,000 years after the invention of writing, we cannot agree on what is the best way to teach children how to read, let alone learn math and other aspects of society's accumulated store of knowledge, it is not surprising that after millenia of human history we cannot agree on how best to punish and-or rehabilitate those who break society's laws.

There have been as many fads and fashions in penology in recent years as there have been in the classroom. The prosecutor quoted above, horrified at anything less than the maximum punishment provided by law, evidently belongs to the old school of an eye for an eye, a life for a life.

This school reigned almost universally until modern times (though, strangely, each generation continued to produce a more or less constant percentage of criminals no matter how many were put away or done away with).

Then in the 1950s, the notion that most lawbreakers were in one way or another "sick" became popular in prison circles, recalls Science News. This approach was advanced by such modern penal reformers as psychiatrist Karl Meninger and former attorney general Ramsey Clark.

By the 1960s, however, it began to become apparent that psychotherapy, vocational counseling, education programs and the like were not working. Crime was on the increase and the rate of recidivism was little changed.

Then came something called behavior modification. Instead of "coddling" criminals with psychotherapy and trying to understand them, the idea now was to focus on the deviant behavior and, by means of sophisticated behavior-control technology and systematically applied rewards and punishments, force them to shape up.

But now the future of this youngest school of penology is in doubt. Last month two federal agencies, the Bureau of Prisons and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), announced that they were ceasing to fund projects involving behavior modification. Professional criticism of this controversial approach to crime and punishment is also mounting.

"Being locked up should be of sufficient punishment," says Albert Bandura, president of the American Psychological Assn. "Society has no moral or legal right to force an individual to change. If I am black and am put in prison because I'm opposed to the political and social system in this country, I sure as hell wouldn't want behavior modification forced upon me."

At the other extreme is James V. McConnell, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan:

"I don't believe the Constitution of the United States gives you the right to commit a crime if you want to; therefore, the Constitution does not guarantee you the right to maintain inviolable the personality it forced on you in the first place — if and when the personality manifests strongly antisocial behavior."

Unfortunately, for the one point of view, imprisonment is very often not enough. For the other, behavior modification smacks too much of something like Big Brother would like to use "for our own good."

In the meantime, while the experts argue, crime marches on.

Play ball!

"The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the umpire is heard in our land." That, of course, is not quite the way the Song of Solomon puts it, but it seems a fairly appropriate adaptation for welcoming the new baseball season.

On playgrounds and sandlots, in the yawning spaciousness of great stadiums the crack of bat against ball, the plop of a basket catch in the outfield, the bellows of the umps are with us again.

Admittedly, baseball has slipped as the national pastime, despite some Charlie Finleyish improvisations. The crowds aren't what they used to be, and pro football lays claim to preeminence among the fans. But it's still a grand old game.

In California the Dodgers go on much the same, but the Giants have become a new, young team. .

Willie McCovey having turned into a Padre in San Diego, where it's warm, Big Mac weather. The A's, thanks to Finley, have an unofficial designated runner to assist their quest of a third straight world title, and the Angels have spread their wings in the hopes of flying higher.

The minors are filled with hopes springing eternal in the young breast, and a lot of people are going to have fun again at the old ball park. Play ball!

IRS agents work on quota system

WASHINGTON — Few stories have so infuriated taxpayers, as they make out their returns this month, than the discovery that President Nixon for two years paid less taxes than did many an unskilled ditch digger.

The Internal Revenue Service conducted a polite audit and notified the President: "Our examination of your income tax returns for the years 1971 and 1972 revealed that they are correct." The IRS even complimented him "on the care shown in the preparation of your returns."

Now a joint congressional committee, which investigated the President's returns at his invitation, has come up with evidence that the IRS audit was a whitewash. A staff report charges he owes a staggering $476,531 in back taxes.

The government's tax collectors, after all, are sworn not to favor presidents over paupers. Yet a Senate subcommittee has found that the IRS often browbeats and bullies millions of ordinary citizens who patiently pay their fair taxes before April 15 year after year.

Later this week, the subcommittee under Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M., will hear from ex-IRS agents, tax experts and individual taxpayers. These witnesses, backed by Montoya's detective work will charge that the IRS doesn't always understand the difference between "prosecute" and "persecute." Some authorities go after unpaid taxes as if it were their lone mission to collect enough revenue for President Nixon to reduce his budget.

Montoya's investigator's have prepared a confidential staff report, citing heretofore unknown but "documented horror stories," which will be revealed at the hearings. Witnesses will tell of their "fear" of the IRS "based on past experiences and hearsay," the report states. There will be testimony, too, about the "dangers faced by 'the little guy' in the middle of complex and sometimes unfair IRS audit procedures."

Harassed taxpayers, who try to find out what mysterious rules govern their tax returns, often encounter stern silence from the IRS on the grounds the information is classified.

Evidence collected by Montoya shows this "secrecy" has led to "diminishment of taxpayer rights, continuance of questionable IRS policies and practices, and abuse of IRS power and discretion by those within and outside the IRS."

One of the most discomforting facts turned up by Montoya is that revenue agents, despite IRS denials, still are saddled with "a dollar production" quota. This sometimes forces them to order arbitrary audits. The national target quota for 1972, Montoya has learned, was $3.4 billion.

Although the quotas are merely "recommended," the Senate sleuths can show that district directors who fall below the "recommended tax and penalties" quota can expect quiet pressure from Washington. Indeed, the IRS is so eager to hold agents responsible for specific sums that separate quota estimates are set for individuals, financial institutions, estates, gift taxes and excise taxes.

The biggest audit quotas were assigned in 1973 to the North Atlantic states, followed by the Midwest, Middle Atlantic, Central Region, Southeast and Southwest. The three cities expected to produce the highest quota income are New York (Manhattan), Chicago and Los Angeles.

Among the "horror stories" uncovered by Montoya are these:

—Montoya's men put the same identical tax question to two IRS counselors, one in Washington, D.C., the other in Topeka, Kans. The IRS experts gave exactly opposite answers. Yet if the taxpayer had misguessed which IRS expert to believe, he might have been audited.

—An "exemption was allowed for a taxpayer's mother in 1970 but disallowed in 1971" on the same set of facts. The taxpayer, of course, was "entitled to exemption in both cases."

—A Chinese-speaking taxpayer not only was denied exemption for his four children but was billed $600 for them. The IRS refused to make a correction until the Community Tax Aid organization in New York squeezed out both a correction and an apology.

—The IRS sent an amended tax form to a taxpayer with a handwritten note at the bottom requesting: "Please sign . . . Return this copy." The form was a waiver of all the taxpayer's rights.

—IRS publications have so confounded the instructions for self-employment taxes that they are almost impossible to decipher. The befuddled taxpayers, therefore, almost invariably use "the optional method (which) results in a higher tax."

—The IRS computers have been used almost exclusively to catch taxpayers who pay too few taxes, almost never to help taxpayers who pay too much.

—President Nixon, members of Congress and other politicians get polite, patient counseling from IRS at tax time. But the IRS' telephone counseling service for nonpoliticians is sometimes manned by incompetents. No more than a high school education and two weeks of training qualify an employe as a "tax expert." While some give excellent advice, wrong information is commonplace.

—The IRS set up a service center for city dwellers, intended chiefly for the elderly and the poor, far from any public transportation outside the city. In another case, an IRS service center had an unlisted phone number.

—Among the most dramatic witnesses will be Hank Greenspun, the flamboyant Las Vegas publisher. The Montoya study says Greenspun will describe his own "audit harrassment" by the IRS. He was supposed to have been the target of a break-in by the White House "plumbers" who reportedly sought certain Howard Hughes documents in Greenspun's safe. Thereafter, Greenspun suddenly found himself the victim of an IRS audit which, after extraordinary harassment, gave him a clean bill.

S.F. strike had poisonous effect

A strike by some 15,000 so-called miscellaneous workers in a metropolitan government such as San Francisco's over pay raises, dental care and such, is just a problem between unions and the city. Right? No.

San Francisco's strike not only put thousands of citizens back on shank's mare, fouled up things for airline passengers, kept East Bay commute workers from getting to their jobs, silenced the City's beloved clack-clack of the cables, disrupted schools . . . it forced quarantines of all waters within San Francisco's city limits, the Bay south some 30 miles, and the Pacific ocean coastal waters a similar distance south of Golden Gate.

Involved in the quarantine were salmon, striped bass, numerous varieties of perch and bottom fish. Crab fishery also was endangered, as were mussel and oysters. Possibly even abalone, the season for which has just opened.

All because the strike over pay and dental care and such unfortunately closed San Francisco's three municipal sewage treatment plants for three or four days.

During those days, hundreds of millions of gallons of raw sewage poured into the Bay and the Pacific Ocean. Various state officials sounded warnings and expressed concern over the long-time effect such contamination could have.

Charles Fullerton of the Dept. of Fish and Game was quoted as saying that raw sewage could damage the crab fishery in the area because the Bay is its chief nursery. Also he expressed fear that the good work accomplished by water quality improvement programs in restoring natural mussel and oyster beds in the southern part of San Francisco Bay could be set back seriously.

One official of the Regional Water Quality Control Board cited lab test evidence that bacteria levels along the affected ocean shores exceeded the standards for protection of public health. Human waste along the shoreline could cause an epidemic, he warned; and said mussels, oysters, clams and other shellfish in the area were considered contaminated. He wouldn't "eat anything that came out of the Bay right now," he added.

Parochial though the San Francisco strike might be considered in other parts of the state, its peripheral and poisonous effect on the surrounding environment bears a lesson for all communities, all persons who take aggressive action in an effort to improve their personal condition, justified or not.

Men indeed are not islands, as John Donne suggested. The bells toll for me as well as thee.

The death penalty

Didn't the peoople of California vote to reactivate the death penalty? What has happened to this mandate?

Faced with the headlines of today's newspapers the people surely are cognizant of the capital crimes committed daily in our fair country. But there is no account of convicted murderers, rapists, kidnapers being gotten rid of. Many are back on the streets.

World wide we are experiencing a new dimension—an alliance of terrorism. Irish, Palestinian, German terrorists are training in the Middle East. They exchange not only weapons but tactics with Asian, African and American activists. When a tactic proves to be successful in one country, terrorist groups in other countries imitate an example.

Terrorists are becoming more vicious and indiscriminate. To combat the wave of terrorism security forces are taking virtual wartime precaution at airports, embassies, oil facilities and other likely targets.

It would seem that the most vicious and crippling are the kidnapers. To give in to their demands only sinks us deeper and deeper into a morass of crime. When these individuals are caught and convicted what happens? The firing squad is too good for them. Is the electric chair too expensive?

Gossip for today

Experts agree that by the year 2000 solar energy could save the U.S. $100 billion in crude oil imports; and they estimate that a solar energy development expenditure of approximately $1 billion would definitely make that $100 billion a year saving possible. To date, however, the government has decided it has only $20 million available for perfecting solar energy. — As worthy as such a project might be, government officials just can't conscientiously countenance the robbing of Peter to pay Paul.

After all, they point out, there are many other worthy causes on which taxpayers' dollars should be expended. There was that $70,000, for instance, allocated for a study of the odor of perspiration given off by Australian aborigines, not to mention the $121,000 spent to find out why people say "ain't". And even though an age old law of mathematics says you can't square the circle, some funds just had to be budgeted for educators at U of C at Davis who are attemping to produce square tomatoes.

BRUCE BIOSSAT

President 'taxes' the legal limit

WASHINGTON — Unpalatable reality is always harder to bear than the anticipation of that reality. This surely can be said of the findings that President Nixon owes the United States government somewhere around $470,000 in back taxes.

It will do him no good that he has announced he will not fight the official judgments but will pay. The great political commonplace of 1974 is that his generally small tax payments in his first four-year term (twice totaling less than $1,000 a year) have outraged the American public more than anything he may have done or not done about the great Watergate scandal.

Significant in the highest degree, of course, is the firm word that findings of the Internal Revenue Service closely coincide with the 210-page report of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation in Congress. Mr. Nixon had invited the committee's inquiry last year when he made his income tax returns public.

In asserting that the President would pay the huge sums owed, the White House was at pains to note specifically that the IRS finding (not made public at this writing) "rebuts any suggestion of fraud on the part of the President . . . The committee's staff report offers no facts which would support any such charge."

We are on delicate ground here. But I have consulted a source highly experienced in the workings of the federal tax laws, and his judgments do not back up the utterances from the White House.

My expert's word is that if any ordinary citizen employed the practices embodied in the President's 1969-72 federal income tax returns, he would indeed be wholly open to charges of either civil or criminal fraud.

Disputes over taxes which stop short of fraud are those which involve differing, though innocent and thus legitimately variable, interpretations of the tax laws.

What establishes fraud is "intent," that is, deliberate intent on the part of the taxpayer to misinterpret his income, the size or character of his expenses and deductions, or any other major aspect of his returns.

We must remember, in this instance, that the President himself — before ascending to the White House — was practicing some tax law in his New York firm. We must also remember that he had at his elbow, high-paid lawyers dealing with exceedingly complex tax issues, and that it has to be a foregone conclusion that they were chosen for their tax expertise.

Yet the improper practices set forth in Mr. Nixon's returns are of such an order that their invalidity is made clear in elemental tax guidebooks of the kind you can buy for a dollar or two in any bookstore.

The worst offense, obviously, is the now celebrated back-dating of documents to "legitimize" his taking as a deduction $576,000 for donation of his vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

Second in magnitude was his failure to report a capital gain of $117,000 from sale of excess acreage at his San Clemente "western White House."

Nor was it legal to defer a capital gain on sale of his New York apartment, since San Clemente is not his "principal residence," and clearly he can't have two main residences — San Clemente and Key Biscayne, Fla.

It is also rated fraudulent to split capital gains income, as Mr. Nixon did with his daughter, Tricia, on some Florida real estate.

All this, he and his lawyers had to know — and "intend."

County supervisors given report on L.A. recycling

SAN BERNARDINO (CNA) — Getting a view of Los Angeles industry, County Supervisor Robert O. Townsend, Chino returned home to give his colleagues some impressions on recycling at the board's Monday meeting.

Townsend was high in his praise of the way Los Angeles handles its recycling of otherwise waste material. His impression was that the plants are exceptionally clean in operation, not contributing to industrial pollution of the air.

"Of course, Los Angeles has the money to do many things we can't afford," Townsend reported. "But it does have good plants from which we might draw a workable pattern fitting into our financial limitations. In fact, the big neighbor to the west has one plant with the latest equipment. It is so sophisticated that it sorts out recycling obstacles — cans from paper, etc."

Other board members went along with him in the approach to more light industry. Chariman Nancy E. Smith added that the county is doing its part in a number of ways, including use of a paper shredder where outmoded documents and all interoffice communications no longer are needed.

AFS youths address club in Claremont

CLAREMONT — Students going to public school in Austria and Sweden must learn British English, and at least one or two other foreign languages besides their own native tongue, according to American Field Service teenagers attending Claremont High School.

Audri Valenta, who was born in Czechoslovakia but moved with her family to Austria six years ago, explained to the Kiwanis Club last week that the school she attends outside of Vienna is strict and conservative and described her teachers as old and conservative.

"Claremont High allows a lot of freedom," she said. "We can make our own decisions."

Hans Hertz of Sweden complained about the Pomon Valley smog and said that he has had a cold since last October.

He explained the town of Lund where he lives as being built in the early 1000s. He said that his house probably was built in the 1700s.

Hertz explained how a youth in Sweden must study English three years, go to school nine years, but may elect his own major.

For a foreign student to study in the U.S. during the winter it costs $850, Mrs. Bovard explained.

Stafford charges

3 GOP congressmen deserted constituents

CLAREMONT — Bob Stafford, Democratic candidate in the newly formed 35th Congressional District, has accused current congressional representatives of walking out on their constituents.

In a recent address before student political leaders of the Claremont Colleges, Stafford charged three congressmen with insuring their political security at the expense of those who elected them.

He claimed that Rep. Jerry L. Pettis, R-33rd Dist., and Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-25th Dist., "were elected to represent the areas that now make up the new (35th) district, but both these Republican leaders walked out on the people who elected them."

Stafford further charged that Rep. Victor Veysey, R-43rd Dist., moved into the 35th District "to set himself up as the incumbent congressmen . . . in a quest for votes to return him to Congress."

He claimed Veysey was more interested "with his Washington residence than he is with the people who believed in his ability to represent their needs."

Stafford, a Claremont attorney and school board member, will speak tonight at 8 before the San Gabriel Valley section of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers. The event is scheduled for Steele Hall, Caltech. Stafford plans to speak on "Pensions and Other Socio-economic Concerns of Engineers."

Geologic hazards

Report may doom Chino Hills Airport

CHINO — The principle environmental value of the Chino Hills is its importance as an open space. And geologic hazards make it mandatory that development proposals be carefully considered and adjusted to prevent destruction to life and property.

These are the major findings of a study by the State Office of Planning and Research, done at the request of Assemblyman John Briggs, R-35th Dist.

"I have, therefore, requested the state geologist on the basis of this study to designate the Chino Hills area as being a hazardous zone as defined under provisions of the Alquist-Priolo Geologic Hazards Act," said Briggs.

"The findings of this study should help us, once and for all, to bury the idea of any airport in the Chino Hills," said Briggs, of Fullerton, who represents sections of San Bernardino and Orange counties which includes the Chino Hills.

A major jetport to cover 4,000 acres straddling the two counties is proposed by the Chino Hills Airport Complex, Inc., a nonprofit group. Developers plan to build two 12,000-foot runways to handle 10,000 commercial and 20,000 general aviation operations a year.

Such a proposal has been opposed by various citizen groups and city and county legislators. It is also being supported initially by the cities of Chino, Anaheim and Stanton. The three signed as governmental sponsors to make the project's feasibility study eligible for federal funding.

John Lowman, president of the airport group, said it will take five months to determine the study method and another 19 months to complete the project if authorized. The toal study cost is estimated at $900,000.

The planning and research office study included these findings:

—The striking feature of the Chino Hills is its visual prominence, with 2.5 million persons living within direct visual contact and nearly twice that many "comings and goings" in the busy metropolitan area who have the opportunity to see and enjoy its vistas.

—Consideration should be given to a cooperative regional approach to planning and development of recreation facilities. Chino Hills is at the juncture of four counties: Orange, Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Riverside. The study area comprises 61,000 acres. More than eight million persons live within 40 miles of Chino Hills.

—Although the Chino Hills, because of its terrain, vegetation and openness, is a plesant area to behold, it does not have the values that would set it aside as a park, reserve or wilderness area.

—The Chino Hills are an extension of an open space affording an important connection between the more remote Cleveland National Forest and heavily urbanized areas surrounding the Chino Hills.

—Grazing is a primary agricultural pursuit but is not of high caliber. The Chino Hills is deficient in underground water reserves and this militates against extensive recreational development.

—The Chino Hills contain two major earthquake fault systems,—the Whittier Fault and the Chino Fault—toogether with some minor fault systems. These may be designated as active faults under terms of the Alquist-Priolo Geologic Hazards Act.

—There are also other geologic hazards, landslides, subsidence, erosion activity and expansive soils rated as sufficient in severity to establish them as areas of potential statewide critical concern.

—There are many problems of development. More than half the area has slopes in excess of 25 per cent and at least a quarter of the area is above 45 per cent slopes.

Energy crisis worries public health agencies

WASHINGTO (PI) — The energy crisis has hurt the operations of public health organizations and could be a "potential tragedy" if health agencies fail to get extra fuel allocations, three groups said today.

The three —the American Public Health Assoriation, the National Association of Counties and the National League for Nursing —recommended formation of a coalition of public health agencies to fight for a higher fuel priority. ..

The groups said they questioned more than 300 state and local health agencies and visiting nurse associations in a study on the effect of the energy shortage on their operations.

The study showed the agencies are faced with higher costs because of rising heating fuel and gasoline prices. Related problems of higher reimbursement for employes using their own cars, loss of time, and inconvenience were also cited.

"A lack of availability of gas, combined with a higher price of that fuel, plus the increased cost of heating oil and petrochemical products, can greatly impede these agencies that already lack sufficient funds to provide services," the study said.

It said there has also been "an insensitivity to the problems of these public health agencies, to the important services they provide, and their reliance on petroleum and petrochemical products.

"If this situation continues, it could represent a potential tragedy for many citizens of this nation."

The proposed coalition of health agencies, the groups said, would work closely with government offices in trying to reorder priorities for fuel supplies in case the present energy shortage continues or another one occurs.

Board rules girls may wear slacks

TRENTON N.J. (UPI) — Girls may wear slacks to school, the state Education Department has ruled.

The department said the school officials at Sea Girt, N.J. were wrong in sending a first-grade girl home last Sept. 10 because she went to classes in slacks.

The Sea Girt school sent the girl home for violating a school dress code that required "acceptable school attire...commensurate to (students') status as young ladies and young gentlemen in a proud new school."

Campus beer bar changing with the times

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Herb Kauvar is trading in his 3.2 beer for salami on rye. He's closing "The Sink," the corner bar for University of Colorado students that has more tradition than college ivy.

"Herb's Delicatessen" opens this week.

"There's nothing else I can do," said Kauvar, sporting a baseball cap and watching the remodeling. "I'm not making the money I used to. CU is allowing beer and whisky in the dorms now. Where's the choice?"

Legends of "The Sink" are as varied as the names carved in its wooden tables by generations of students. Miss America once stopped in, ignored the beer, but said Kauvar's hamburger's were unexcelled.

There always was a kind of low class to the bar. The plumbing was painted bright red, fraternity symbols were burned into the walls and Kauvar used to turn away patrons for fear they would violate fire safety occupancy laws.

Kauvar said his delicatessen will still serve beer "but we won't be anything like the old place. We're going to have carpeting and new ceilings and new walls, that sort of thing."

Kauvar took over the bar on what is known as "The Hill" section of this college town of 70,000 persons at the foot of the Colorado Rockies in 1958. Times and drinkers have changed, he said.

"The whole idea of the Bohemian effect is more or less disappearing," Kauvar said. "You have to go with the times. I can't look back. I have to look ahead."

Pouring beer for 14 years has given Kauvar a chance to watch young persons. He said they've changed and he's not too sure he likes it.

"They are a different breed nowadays," he said. "I just don't think they want to be as friendly, but basically, they are still good kids."

The drug scene hurt, too, he said. The advent of the "street people" throughout the area turned a number of students sour on the idea of spending afternoons in the dim light of the bar.

"A lot of kids didn't like that action," Kauvar said.

He said he probably would sell the scarred tables and posters at an auction and give the money to charity.

"We just weren't doing enough volume," he said. "It really doesn't bother me a bit, changing it around like this."

Report Mandel administration being probed

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The federal investigation into corruption in Maryland politics, which forced Spiro T. Agnew to resign the vice presidency last year, is looking into Gov. Marvin Mandel's administration, the Baltimore Evening Sun reported.

Mandel says "the state records are open and available to anyone who wants to look at them."

The Sun said the inquiry involves "a direct relationship" between the awarding of state engineering contracts and business done by the Tidewater Insurance Agency, Inc., owned by two supporters of Mandel, W. Dale Hess and Harry W.Rodgers III.

U. S. Attorney George Beall refused specific comment, saying only, "I won't say yes and I won't say no. I just can't comment with regard to specific individuals who we may or may not be investigating." The newspaper said investigators are acting on allegations made by at least one of the witnesses who played a key role in the kickback cases against Agnew and Baltimore County Executive Dale Anderson, who was convicted last month on 32 corruption charges.

The newspaper said that Tidewater has rereived a considerable amount of state business and until last week was connected with the engineering firm of Zollman associates. Zollman's share of state business has increased since Mandel succeeded Agnew as governor in 1968.

Drinking ban sought to cool unruly

BOSTON (UPI) — One way to cool bunches of unruly young people during long spring annd summer nights is to ban public drinking, and there is a trend among Massachusetts communities to enact such laws, a state official says.

Carter Lee of the attorney general's office said that "already this year we've had two dozen applications."

"The reason is complaints from local citizens," said Police Chief Charles F. Hart of Lawrence. "You get young people on main streets, parking lots and parks, drinking on the hoods of their cars, throwing bottles around."

"We don't want to harass people but we need this law as a tool to give service to other citizens. The guy who drinks from his flask while waiting for a bus won't be bothered," Hart said.

The new community laws generally forbid the drinking of alcoholic beverages "while on or in any public way or upon any way that the public has the right of access to."

Next shortage? how does coffee sound?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cry your hearts out, coffee lovers. The next shortage is going to hit you right in the percolator.

Droughts and frosts have reduced the world's exportable coffee production for 1973-74 by approximately 20 per cent, down to 44.7 million bags, according to the Agriculture Department. The department said recently that dry weather in Africa and frost damage in Brazil lowered overall production to 64.3 million bags of 132.3 pounds each, down 16 per cent from the 1972-73 crop of 76.4 million bags.

Fuel 'hot line' to Las Vegas operating

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — A fuel information "hot line" has been set up by the Las Vegas resort industry to help tourists motoring to the city on Interstate 15.

Motorists planning a trip to the gambling center can call (800) 462-8951 for current information on open service stations along the route, the locations and days and hours of operation.

The "hot line" will include stations in San Bernardino, Victorville, Barstow and Baker, in addition to stations on the freeway and in Las Vegas.

2 to 3 years before Watergate concludes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although most Americans would like to see Watergate disappear and the nation get on with its business, special prosecutor Leon Jaworski says it may be two or three years before the country is free from the scandal and its ramifications.

Early disposition of all the Watergate cases yet to reach the indictment stage, he said in an interview with U.S. News & World Report, "would come about only if all potential defendants were to negotiate and enter pleas of guilty. And that is not to be expected.

"With a number of trials — and making allowances for appeals —it could be a matter of two, perhaps three years, before we've heard the last of Watergate."

He said he wants White House documents on two matters now being investigated by a grand jury—illegal contributions in the 1972 political campaign and the awarding of ambassadorships in return for campaign contributions.

26 school children die in bus crash

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A truck jammed with schoolchildren plunged into a 700-foot ravine in Kashmir state Sunday night, killing 26 and injuring 44, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said today.

PTI said the accident occurred at Jindrah as the children were returning from an outing. Indian army rescue teams from Nagrota army camp helped recover the dead and injured.

It was the second major accident in Kashmir during the past two weeks. On March 28, a bus plunged into a 1,000-foot ravine, killing 18 and injuring 17 others.

Mass. lawmakers turn down legal prostitution zones

BOSTON (UPI) — The Massachusetts House has turned down a proposal to legalize prostitution in zoned areas.

"There is nothing wrong with prostitution, discreetly carried on," argued Rep. Barney Frank, whose constituency includes Boston's "Combat Zone," of strip joints and other nighttime activities.

Frank proposed permitting prostitution in zoned areas of Massachusetts cities, contending this would be healthier than the illicit flesh peddling which goes on regardless of the law.

Rep. Bruce Zeiser, a foe of the proposed legislation, said: "Zoning is a regulation of the use of land, and not of bodies."

Father Berrigan becomes a father

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Rev. Philip Berrigan, a Roman Catholic Josephite priest, and his wife, a former nun, became parents of a daughter, he disclosed recently.

Berrigan, 50, who never resigned from the priesthood but no longer has religious duties with the church, said they named their child Frida, after his 88-year old mother and because the name is derived from the German word for "peace."

Berrigan said his wife, former sister Elizabeth McAllister, 34, gave birth recently to the 9½ pound girl at the Jonah House, their home in Baltimore, which is also a center for Catholic antiwar activities.

$2.4 million saved by L.A. consumer unit

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The LOS Angeles Municipal Bureau of Consumers Affairs saved residents $2.4 million in the past two years and won convictions in all the cases that went to court, it was announced today.

The bureau's manager, Fern Jellison, said more than 19,000 cases had been handled and the savings figure was based on the market value of services performed, money refunded and contracts cancelled.

She said the bureau received 850 consumer complaints a month since its inception two years ago

According to Mrs. Jellison, the buck stops at the BCA office.

PLAYMATES — Florida, a dolphin who prefers human company to the open sea, frolics with Christy Kyser in the dolphins' private lagoon at Key Biscayne, Fla. The gates were opened last month and the mammals were encouraged to return to the open sea, but Florida and another one decided to stay.

Death toll shows dip

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Highway accidents took the lives of 4,905 persons last year in California, 91 fewer than in 1972, the state Office of Traffic Safety reported Friday.

The final tabulation of statewide traffic statistics for 1973 also showed a fatality rate of 3.7 deaths per each 100 million miles of travel compared with a 3.9 rate in 1972

The mileage death rate was based on an estimated 132.5 billion miles traveled in California last year.

A spokesman said the reduction of traffic deaths and accidents involving injuries was the result of the highway patrol's intensified crackdown on drunken drivers, speeding trucks and generally better weather.

World's exploding population will reach four billion within a year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Earth is supporting an estimated 3.919 billion people today. In a month, there will be roughly 7 million more humans on the planet.

The world's population will reach the 4 billion mark next year, according to conservative projections of the United Nations, and in another 25 years there should be more than 6 billion of us.

This is all the more staggering when one considers that it took from the beginning of man to about the year 1840 for the world's population to reach its first billion.

The globe's nations are not all increasing their numbers at the same rates. The richer countries are growing far more slowly than the poorer, underdeveloped lands in Latin America, Africa and Asia.

What are the consequences of this burgeoning global population, and how urgent is the need to apply the brakes?

The principal concern is that the planet may not be able to feed and otherwise support the great masses of people that could eventually inhabit it. But long before the limits are reached, the quality of life among the world's people would be expected to deteriorate.

And even if fertility rates decline to the point where families are producing only enough children to replace parents, there are estimates that the world population will not stabilize until late in the next century —at around the 8 to 10 billion level.

It has been said that unrestrained population growth is the greatest threat to human well being with the exception of the possibility of nuclear warfare.

"We are attempting to deal with finite limitations of resources in the face of what appears to be infinite human potential for procreation," said Dr. J. George Harrar, president emeritus of the Rockefeller Foundation.

"Our numbers are increasing like compound interest and unless it is possible to stabilize the world population through prompt and measureable progress towards zero population growth, the ultimate result can only be chaos," he told the American Association for the Advancement of Science at its recent annual meeting in San Francisco.

Global conference

The United Nations has designated 1974 as World Population Year, and representatives of most of the world's nations will meet in Bucharest Aug. 19 to 30 in the first such global conference on the population situation.

The conference will consider the most comprehensive and ambitious plan for a worldwide population policy ever formulated. Its ultimate objective is to improve the level of living and quality of life for all earth's people.

The plan is not merely aimed at curtailing world population growth, but one of its main objectives is to channel this growth within reasonable limits to forestall catastrophic conditions within a few generations.

The reason the world's population is accelerating so quickly is not simply that more women are bearing more children, but that their offspring are living longer. Better health care has raised the average life expectancy of a newborn child to 71 years in the developed countries, compared with 45 at the turn of this century.

In the less developed nations, the expectation of long life is not so bright. The average life expectancy of a child born in Latin America is 62. In Asia it is around 57 and it is only 47 years in Africa. Another way to look at it is that while on the average one out of 57 children dies before reaching the age of one year in the United States, the UN Population Commission said one of every 15 dies before reaching that age in Latin America, one of every 10 in Asia and one of every 7 in Africa.

"In some developing nations in fact, particularly African countries south of the Sahara, expectation of life at birth is less than 40 years and one of every four children dies before the age of one year," the commission said.

Medical researchers say there is little hope that the average life expectancy of a healthy adult in the United States or other industrialized nations can be lengthened substantially until fundamental breakthroughs are made in understanding aging processes. But improvements in medical care are expected to cut death rates in underdeveloped lands, particularly Africa, so that population growth rates will continue to increase even if birthrates level off.

Goal of draft

One goal of the UN's draft population plan is that the average life expectancy of all less developed countries should exceed 62 years by 1985 and should approach that of the developed natons by the year 2000.

Nearly three quarters of the world's peoples live in the less developed nations. And it is in these areas where the great majority of the world's underfed people live. An estimated 500 million are starving now and 1.5 billion are malnourished, according to Dr. John Knowles of the Rockefeller Foundation.

"It is no coincidence that the countries with the highest rates of population increase also report the highest rates of infant and preschool deaths, and have the most serious malnutrition among their lower income groups," said Dr. Nevin S. Scrimshaw, professor of human nutrition at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "Malnutrition is in fact that major determinant of these high death rates."

He said high infant mortality and malnutrition of mother and child is a major deterrent to the acceptance of family planning in the underdeveloped nations. People are reluctant to limit the size of their families until they are assured the majority of their children will survive.

Agriculture research has made great strides in the past decade and, as a result, the industrialized countries have more food of greater diversity and higher quality than ever before. But progress has been slower in the developing nations.

Food production increased at an average of 7 per cent per person worldwide during the past decades. But much of this extra food went to the wealthy nations, averaging a 16 per cent increase per person over relatively high levels that existed earlier. In the developing world, per capita food production in the decade of the '60s increased only 2 per cent over a level that was low to begin with. And Africa actually experienced a 1 per cent per capita loss.

Grain is the most important source of food for man and slightly more than half his energy is derived from the direct consumption of grain, particularly rice and wheat. Thirteen per cent comes from other plants, beans, peas, lentils and soybeans.

There was a small increase in farmland devoted to growing grain in the past decade, but a large jump in production of grain per acre, thanks to the technology of the "green revolution" of the last few years.

The problem with global food supply is that while the population is more concentrated in Africa, Europe and Asia, there is slightly less than 1 acre of arable land per person in the Old World compared to almost 2 acres per person in the New World.

Farmland shrinks

And as the population of the globe grows, the amount of farmland per person shrinks — and the shrinkage is much faster in Africa and Asia where the population is growing faster.

The UN's Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) has estimated the world's food supply must increase by 120 per cent by the year 2000 just to keep up with the projected population growth. An increase of 225 per cent would be needed to provide sufficient food for everyone.

Most of the world is now turning more and more to the United States, Canada and Australia for grain. Harrar, of the Rockefeller Foundation, said the current situation "reemphasizes the absolute necessity of developing a world food plan in which all nations with an agricultural industry should participate for the universal good."

But he said that unless family planning is widely adopted as a constraint on a burgeoning population, all efforts to satisfy the basic need for bread "will be overwhelmed by the numbers of claimants for limited quantities of nutrients.

"If population stabilization occurs on an increasing scale, then we can meet the problems of world nutrition."

Ninety-four per cent of the world's people live in countries with at least some family planning services, according to the International Planned Parenthood Federation. And 59 of the world's 118 developing countries have official policies to either reduce population growth rates or to support family planning for health care reasons.

But the availability of family planning services and putting them into practice with large numbers of people are two different matters.

India, which has a population of 562 million in 1972, has had birth control programs since 1951 but its annual population growth rate is 2.5 per cent which means its population will double at that rate in 28 years. It had an annual birth rate of 38 per 1,000 in 1971 with a death rate of less than half that.

The Indian government has recently improved its birth control effort and now has 42,000 family planning centers aimed at reducing the growth rate to 1.5 per cent within a decade.

China, with an estimated population of 800 million in 1972, has had an official birth control program for 12 years and the government strongly advocates late marriage and small families. The nation's population, however, is growing by an estimated 15 million a year.

Hong Kong, with a population two years ago of 4 million, has had a highly successful family planning program and its birth rate dropped from 36 live births per 1,000 people in 1960 to 19.7 in 1972.

The U. S. birth rate, in comparison, was 14.6 per 1,000 as of the end of 1973. It was 17.3 in 1971, and at that time 9.3 deaths were recorded for every 1,000 Americans.

Nigeria, on the other hand, had an estimated birth rate of about 55 per 1,000 in 1972 —one of the highest in the world. Its annual death rate also was high, 27 deaths per 1,000. The Nigerian government in 1970 adopted a position "to encourage the citizens to develop a balanced view of the opportunities for individual family planning on a voluntary basis . . ."

Cameroon, with a population of 6.1 million in 1972, considers the country to be underpopulated and does not promote family planning. It had a birth rate of 50 per 1,000 in 1971 and a death rate of 26 per 1,000.

Honduras high

In Latin America, Honduras had one of the highest birth rates, 49 per 1,000 in 1971 with a death rate of 17, giving it an annual natural increase in people of 32 per 1,000.

Brazil, with a population of 100 million in 1972, had a birth rate of 41 in 1971 and has no government family planning program although some services are provided by a private association. Mexico, with a birth rate of 44, actively promotes responsible parenthood.

The UN draft of the proposal to be presented to the World Population Conference this summer urges all countries to make family planning information and means available by 1985 to all those who desire it.

While careful to state that it is the responsibility of each nation to determine its own population policies, the UN plan suggests that nations with very high birth rates —more than 40 per 1,000 — might consider reducing these rates on the order of 10 per thousand by 1985.

"While no universal family size norm is recommended, it is recognized that a majority of world population lives in countries that wish to reduce present fertility levels, and a large majority lives in countries that favor small family size norms," the draft said.

But even if world fertility by the year 2000 were cut in half —to the replacement level of two children per family —the Population Council said the world's population would grow by 2 billion people to 5.9 billion. The Council said such a fertility reduction was an optimistic but possible prospect.

Scientists do not yet have a clear view of the ultimate limits of earth's life supporting capacity.

"It is clear, nevertheless, that planetary disaster is not immediately in prospect but that the need exists for the formulation of national, regional and global policies to avoid the deterioration of the biosphere and to improve the quality of life for all mankind," the UN Population Commission says.

LESS DEADLY USE for Cambodian government troops' ammunition cases has been discovered by the children of Tuol Kei village, six miles south of Phnom Penh where fighting continues. The boys use the wheeled-boxes to cart drinking water to their family huts.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Jet age travelers will be able to find emergency treatment for illness or injury at a new medical clinic opened at San Francisco International Airport. The clinic also makes full medical services available to more than 25,000 airport employes, including preventive health care in a computerized physical checkup center.

Spirit of Arthurdale wanes; maybe what we need is another depression

By TOM TIEDE

ARTHURDALE, W. VA. — (NEA) — The well-fed young woman got out of a new car and walked into Jean's bar. She removed a stylish doubleknit coat and rapped the table with a $300 set of wedding rings.

"My God," she groaned, "I was shopping in Kingswood this morning. Coffee's up four cents, bread is up another penny. I spent $38 and got two sacks of groceries. If you ask me we're heading for collapse; it's like another depression."

Nobdoy has asked the young woman. And nobody felt any special sympathy for her rhetoric. Loose talk of depression in this community is looked on with headshaking disfavor; a good lot of the old timers here knew hunger in the last depression and many of the middle-agers remember growing up in times when new cars, doubleknit coats and $300 rings were reserved for royalty.

Arthurdale, in fact, was a creation of the Depression. It was an experimental construction of the 1930s Federal Homestead Project. Some 100 other communities were built at various other places in the nation, all designed to activate idle land, give the impoverished places to live and rekindle sparks in the national spirit.

A success

Here at least the experiment was a success. The government purchased 2,400 acres of promising land from a farmer named Richard Arthur, built 65 sturdy homes and sent out the call for residents.

Several hundred desperately poor people (mostly coal mining families) moved in. In addition to new homes, the homesteaders received employment, several acres for gardens or farming, and new hope. In return, they were asked to "work hard and build well."

Indeed, the work did go well. To some extent because the community was favored as the pet project of Eleanor Roosevelt.

She outfitted the school with money she earned from magazine writing, visited often, encouraged the instruction of crafts such as hand weaving, and in one supreme moment of pride for all, brought her Presidential husband to address the graduating class of 1934. The latter occasion was turned into a nationwide broadcast and history credits its importance for a nation rebuilding its image.

Ah, says homesteader Ben Thompson, who has since moved away, the times were both terrible and fine. He remembers paying less than $10 a month rent (towards the purchase price) on a home that would sell today for $25,000. On the other hand, he recalls, "Nobody had any money and some people had no food. People scrounged is what they did. There wasn't a gopher alive for miles."

People managed

Nonetheless, people managed. Mrs. Felicia Hartsell, still a resident, says she and her husband moved to Arthurdale with two babies, a crib and a measure of pluck:

"My husband walked eight miles each day to work, and he got paid 35 cents an hour. But we didn't complain. We were glad to have anything. That's the way it was around Arthurdale then, everybody was glad to be surviving.

"There was a feeling of community and cooperation. Some woemn raised gardens for school lunches, other women took turns cooking it. We had meetings, we talked over our problems and we all went to church on Sundays. Yes, that's the way it was here then."

Innocence Gone

But no more. According to long-time residents, the glutworms of progress have destroyed the innocence of Arthurdale. Once a self-sufficient hamlet — with industries such as carpentry shops, which not only provided employment but usable goods as well — the community is now a nondescript and unproud bedroom locale for a transient population.

The once-active Community Center, where FDR drank punch and Eleanor chatted with the ladies, has been stripped of inside furnishings and outside windows. The pottery kiln is gone, so is the metal shop. Barnraising is dead. Town meetings have not been held for decades. Graffiti and initial scrawlings decorate what few public houses remain in the village.

And according to the oldsters, the population and character of Arthurdale have deteriorated as well. Coal miners have moved ugly trailer houses into the countryside. Careless new owners have let some original homesites weather away. The result is that where once there was community solidarity, Mrs. Hartsell says "I don't hardly even know my neighbors anymore," and where once there was the feeling of industry amid poverty there seems now a sentiment of lethargy amid spoiled affluence.

The woman in Jean's Bar is a good example of the corrosion, says one old gentleman: "She always complains. Yak, yak, yak, never says nothing good. God knows, amybe the price of food is a blessing; she could probably lose about 20 pounds herself."

It's not that the originals here deny the newcomers the right to rap high prices and hard times. Andrew Wolf, who once ran the now defunct Arthurdale variety store, says older people such as himself are sweating as much as anybody at the cost of living. "But these young people got big mouths. They never suffered themselves, they don't know what suffering is. I say this: rather than complain, they would do better to roll up their sleeves, like the homesteaders did, and get to work on the problems."

Wolf is among many oldsters here who doubt the younger generations will roll up their sleeves. He says the virtue of appreciation is dead in the area. He surveys the homes flanking his — each driveway filled with cars, each lot populated by campers, each house inhabited by wall to wall carpeting and color TV's.

No appreciation

But do they appreciate what they have? "Hell, no," Wolf says, "they're too busy griping about what they don't have."

The opinion is a hard one, but according to many here accurate. The feeling is that Americans, including "Arthurdalites," have gone flabby and foolish. Everyone is out for himself. The mouth is mightier than the muscle.

"If Eleanor could see what's happened," says one old philosopher, "she'd turn in her grave. She meant the town to be something different from what it's got. I don't know if I myself haven't fallen off; I hate to say it but maybe a depression wouldn't be so bad again. It's funny, and I know you won't understand, but at least we had some self respect back then."

Smoke fatal to 8-year-old boy

San BERNARDINO (UPI) — Michael Misener, 8, of Highland, died of smoke inhalation Monday after he apparently started a fire in his bedroom while playing with matches, sheriff's deputies reported.

His mother, Donna Misener, discovered the fire and saved her two other children, but Donald was dead on arrival at County Hospital. An uncle had warned the boy earlier in the day against playing with matches, deputies said.

Lace making a dying art in Belgium

BRUGES, Belgium (UPI) — In a small, whitewashed 16th Century cottage Mrs. Maria van de Ram, a plump, brown - eyed grandmother, spends the last hours each day making lace to supplement her income.

At 72, she is one of a dying breed of Belgian lace-makers.

"Of course some young girls learn it today, but then when they are old enough to work or get married they drop it and don't usually have the time to take it up again," she said, folding her arms across an aproned stomach.

"Financially it's no longer worth the effort. You can't ask even 10 francs (25 cents) an hour for a piece of lace that takes hours, even days to make. Shops will pay you little more than it costs in materials to make.

"Soon no one will know how to make lace. But it is so beautiful. Someone should do something about it."

Creative pastime

Local tourist officer Dennis Rogiers said lace-making by Belgians has become "a creative pastime for the young or the very old. It's no longer an industry. Already many shops now sell manufactured lace imported from China, Japan or northern France at half the price of the local handmade product. They buy it by the meter (yard), often with woven flaws to give the appearance of handmade lace, cut it into hankerchiefs, tablecloths, whatever."

Lace has its origins in ancient times. The Louvre Museum in Paris exhibits linen with network and pearls found in the graves of Pharaohs. But it did not make its debut in Europe until the 1400s. Bruges is one of half a dozen traditional lace-making centers in Belgium dating from then.

There are two kinds of lace— needlework, derived from white openwork embroidery, and bobbin lace, more traditional in Belgium. For the latter, cotton is wound around any number of palm bobbins, from as few as six to as many as a 1,000 depending on the intricacy of the design and its size, and dexterously plaited into knots around closely-spaced pins on a template.

Belgium's most famous piece of lace is an enormous bedspread presented by the people of Brabant to the Archduke Albert and Archduchess Isabella on their marriage in 1599. It is now displayed in the Brussels Museum of Art and History. It depitcs numerous biblical and folklore scenes and figures and heraldic emblems.

Today, not only is there a lack of lace-makers, but cotton itself is increasingly difficult to obtain, according to Rogiers. He said the best flax used to come from Egypt, but less and less is being grown there as synthetic fibers flood international markets and the Egyptians plant foodstuffs on traditional cotton - growing land.

Three schools

But Rogiers said efforts are being made to keep the craft alive. He said that in Bruges alone there were still three schools, including the centuryold School of the Sisters of Aostolines.

"From 1680 it was run by nuns making lace for the convent's own use," he said. "But in 1970, when it could no longer exist financially, it was taken over by the Lace Center, a private group of people interested in promoting the craft.

"Children go there after their normal lessons, and there are also classes for housewives and anyone else interested in lace as a hobby. They are taught by the more gifted teen-age pupils."

The state contributes financially to keep the school going, in an effort to keep the profession alive.

"After all," Rogiers said, "lace-making is part of our past here in Bruges. And just as one grows up speaking more than one language, so our people should know the local craft. We mustn't let it die."

Negro in Congress

The first Negro to serve in Congress was Hiram R. Revels of Mississippi, who took his Senate seat Feb. 25, 1870.

Being on top of world often lonely existence

CLEAR, Alaska (UPI) — It may never come, but 500 military and civilian personnel huddle in the cold, barren reaches of this Arctic region just in case of a surprise attack on the United States.

They man remote stations, stand eight-hour tours and have scanned the skies at this "top of the world" outpost every second for the past 10 years.

They know every inch of the radar screens that have become their lives and watch for the triangular yellow "blips" they hope will never come.

The energy crisis will never reach the sentinels of the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System, which provides a 22-minute notice of impending nuclear attack on the North American Continent.

The site here, along with its sister locations in Greeland and northern England, recently marked its 10th anniversary of operation in January.

Armed with three massive detection screens—bigger than football fields—and a tracking radar housed in a giant, golfball shaped dome, the Clear station can track a basketball-size object more than 3,000 miles over the Eurasian land mass.

The primary duty of the BMEWS system is to alert against an intercontinental ballistic missile attack against the United States. Its radars provide 22 minute notice and a chance for missile and aircraft retaliation.

Built by RCA and maintained by the Air Force, Clear and its sister outposts are independent, self-sufficient communities.

During construction of the Alaskan station, railroads provided the primary means of transportation and still serve to bring in more than 200 tons of food, clothing, spare parts and other supplies each month.

The site's power plant consumes 180 tons of coal a day, shipped in from mines 25 miles to the south, generating enough electricity to supply the needs of a city of 70,000 persons.

Some 16 deep wells provide water, which also is used for combating fires, a major hazard in the Arctic. The cooling pond, used for operation of the power plant, serves as a swimming pool in the summer and is referred to as the only outdoor heated pool in Alaska.

The 500 Air Force personnel and RCA engineers and technicians who man the base actually have nearly all the comforts of home. There are bowling alleys, hobby shops, a theater and gym and there is excellent hunting and fishing in the area. Grizzly bears discourage hiking, however.

But the mission of Clear is to guard against attack, and the three stationary detection radars perform the task.

The radar pulses are concentrated by electronic tubes called Klystrons, which send a 5 million-volt pulse through an "organ pipe" scanner system. The pulse is then bounced against the curved reflector screens, which hurls them into space. Each screen emits two horizontal fans or pulses, one a few degrees above the other.

If a ballistic missile ever came, it would penetrate both the lower and upper fans. Computers would then take over to evaluate the missile's origin and its point and time of impact.

The tracking radar in the dome is designed to follow a selected object from horizon to horizon. Its narrow, cone-shaped beam helps to provide more precise information on the trajectory of an object.

But machines can't do the entire job—detective work is necessary to determine if the object is hostile or merely one of the more than 1,000 pieces of "space junk" circling the earth.

Just as Scotland Yard and the FBI employ handwriting experts in crime detection, the warning system relies on experts to read radar "signatures" for clues.

The space age form of graphology is called "radar signature analysis," used to identify objects in space and determine their speed, size, shape and mission.

Entertainment Hall of Fame to honor 20th Century greats

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There's yet another hall of fame to go along with the sports and show biz shrines for athletic and performing immortals —this one is the brand new Entertainment Hall of Fame for 20th century greats.

It works like this: A panel of distinguished celebrities from the various arts nominates four entertainment greats, two living, two dead. Then ballots bearing the nominees names are mailed to entertainment editors of newspapers with circulations of 100,000 or more for voting.

Each editor casts his vote for 10 names, five living, five poethumous. The five in each division receiving the most ballots will be made members of the Entertainment Hall of Fame.

Winners will be announced on a nation-wide television special from the new MGM Grand Hotel sometime in May via ABC's "Wide World of Entertainment."

Gene Kelly, a member of the nominating board, will emcee the show.

Among the 21 others who comprise the board are such diverse show biz folk as Aaron Copland, Helen Hayes, director William Wyler, Elia Kazan, Quincy Jones, writer Garson Kanin, producer Bud Yorkin.

Members of the panel are not eligible for nomination, which amounts for the absence on the ballot of Helen Hayes.

"The hall of fame is for writers, directors, performers, choreographers, set designers and all the rest," said Kelly, "not just for stars. And the people being honored represent lifetime achievement whose work has withstood the test of time.

"We hope to make the institution as famous as Coopertown, the baseball shrine in New York, or the Football Hall of Fame in Massolin, Ohio.

"I would guess that people like Charlie Chaplin, Greta Garbo and Cary Grant —who never won Oscars —are the sort of names that will crop up in the voting."

Kelly was right in that one of the trio was, indeed, a nominee in this first year of balloting.

But Shakespeare, Chaucer, Beethoven, Bach and other giants of the arts down through the centuries are not eligible. Those members of the lively arts, literature and music during the present century are the only ones —living or dead — who qualify.

"I was asked to be chairman of the nominating committee to help find qualified people to work on the hall of fame," Kelly said.

"To make our nominations as valid as possible, we've limited candidates to those persons who work or worked in the English language.

"We are interested in an individual who achieved a single great moment and then was never heard from again. I think the nominees will represent a broad spectrum of the finest minds, talent and genius in this century's performing arts."

Members of the nominating committee submit their selections in secret. Balloting by the entertainment editors is secret and the results —like the Oscars —will not be known until the night of the show.

The Entertainment Hall of Fame may be the most unique institution of its kind with the likes of George Bernard Shaw and P.T. Barnum nominated for posthumous entry into the very select company.

Film maker to lecture at Scripps

CLAREMONT — Mildred "Chick" Strand, an award-winning film maker, will face the cameras April 18 when she lectures and shows her movies at Scripps College as part of the Visiting Artists Program.

Miss Strand will discuss movies and show examples of her own work at 1:30 p.m. in Balch Auditorium, 10th Street and Columbia Avenue. The Scripps Film Arts Program, directed by Paul Darrow and Ted Kerzie, will film her visit to send to the National Endowment for the Arts for distribution to other educational institutions throughout the nation.

Miss Strand, an instructor of film and photography at Occidental College, received her bachelor degree in anthropology from UC Berkeley and a master of fine arts degree in cinema from UCLA. At the latter, she participated in the Ethnographic Film Program from 1968 to 1970.

Her latest completed color ethnographic film, "Mosori Monika," was funded by a Ford Foundation grant to UCLA in 1970. Photographed around the Capuchin Mission at Guayo, Venezuela, it examines the acculturation of a small Warao village through interviews with a Spanish nun at the mission and an aging widow of a Warao shaman who tells of their life histories and philosophies.

Three other short color films, "Angel Blue Sweet Wings," "Anselmo" and "Waterfall," by Miss Strand are distributed by Canyon Cinema Cooperative.

'Take One'

Book by film columnist Honors Mervyn LeRoy

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — It's nice to be part of something that is successful. So I stood there, beaming cheerfully, for three hours or so while some of Hollywood's biggest stars came into the Beveryly Hills Hotel for a party in honor of a book I had written.

Then reason took over. I realized the biggies weren't there because of me but because the subject of my book was there, too. The book is "Mervyn LeRoy: Take One," the story of one of Hollywood's greatest directors. And LeRoy, loved and respected by Hollywood for more than 40 years, was the magnet that brought them all out.

They were all there. One of LeRoy's oldest friends, the great silent star, Colleen Moore, had flown in from her Chicago home just to attend the party.

The list seemed endless — in one corner, Irene Dunne, Rosalind Russell and Greer Garson were catching up on old times. In another corner, some of the great comedians — Jack Benny, George Burns, Red Buttons and George Jessel — were exchanging jokes. Across the room, best-selling authors Irving Wallace, Irving Stone, Jackie Susann and Harold Robbins were in a tight knot.

Alfred Hitchcok, who never comes to Hollywood parties, was there. He said he just had to come, to show how much he admired and respected LeRoy. Lorne Greene introduced himself to Hitchcock and they sat and talked for a half-hour.

Most of the stars there had worked for LeRoy at one time or antoher. There wrre people like Karl Malden, Ricardo Montalban and little (no more) Patty McCormack, LeRoy's child star of "The Bad Seed."

Tennis player Bobby Riggs came in, with Sandra Giles, and he and Willie Shoemaker, the jockey, got into a long conversation. Maybe Riggs was challenging Shoemaker to a race — presumably, Bobby would be on a colt and Willie on a filly.

Others spotted: Johnny Carson (Johnny bought LeRoy's house when he moved here from New York), Edgar Bergen and Frances and Joseph Ruttenberg, the great cinematographer who had worked with LeRoy on all the magnificent Greer Garson films.

The room was decorated with blowups of stills from LeRoy's pictures, many of which are also in the book. The man's credits are phenomenal — he directed such great ones as "Little Caesar," "I am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," "They Won't Forget," "Waterloo Bridge," "Random Harvest," "Quo Vadis," "The F.B.I. Story" — and he produced "The Wizard Of Oz." And, at 73, he's still active and looking forward to his next film.

Five vocal soloists to be featured in two concerts at the Music Center

LOS ANGELES — Five vocal artists will be featured in concerts by the Los Angeles Philharmonic under Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Master Chorale under Roger Wagner in concerts at the Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center at 8:30 Thursday and Friday nights.

The singers are soprano Veronica Tyler, mezzo-soprano Beverly Wolff, tenor Kenneth Riegel, baritone Douglas Lawrence and bass Peter Meven.

The program begins with a work for chorus and orchestra — Bach's Cantata No. 50, "Nun ist das Heil." Benjamin Britten's "Cantata Misericordium" is scored for tenor (Riegel) and baritone (Lawrence), chorus and orchestra. The evening's major work, Mozart's "Requiem," utilizes not only chorus and orchestra, but also a vocal quartet — Misses Tyler and Wolff and Riegel and Meven.

Miss Tyler is a Baltimore-born, Juilliard-trained soprano who has won acclaim on both the opera (New York City Opera) and concert stage. She performed the Bach B Minor Mass during the Hollywood Bowl's Bach-Mozart Festival last summer, and was also a soloist in Beethoven's Ninth Sympthy on opening night. Miss Wolff and Riegel were featured in the bowl's Summer Festival 73 concert performance of Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust."

Meven, a native of Koln, Germany, will be making his first appearances with the Philharmonic as soloist in the "Requiem." For the past eight years he has been under contract to the Deutsche Oper am Rhein in Dusseldorf and has performed in festivals and as soloist with sumphony orchestras throughout Europe.

Lawrence has performed frequently with the Philharmonic both in the Music Center and at the Hollywood Bowl. Last summer he was heard six times with the Philharmonic at the Bowl.

Bluegrass festival scheduled

SAN RAFAEL — The first Golden State Country and Bluegrass Festival will be held at the Marin County Fairgrounds April 26-28.

The promotoers are Paul and Judy Lammers, Bay Area residents for the past five years. The festival will feature dozens of top names in the bluegrass and folk-country music field. The festival begins at 7 p.m. April 26; it concludes at 11 p.m. April 28.

Among the attractions already scheduled — and more are being added daily — are: Jim and Jesse and the Virginia Boys, Doc Watson, Mac Wiseman, John Hartford, Ralph Stanley and the Clinch Mountain Boys, and Jimmy Martin and the Sunny Mountain Boys. A number of local groups from the Bay Area also will perform.

The festival has several objectives, according to Mrs. Lammers.

"We want to display the fantastic relationship that is developing between this type of music which originated centuries ago in the mountains of the American South and the music being played and sung by today's young people," she said.

"But most important, we're according special honors to a fiddle player who's worked tirelessly for years to help hundreds of musicians here in the Bay Area and all over the country. He's been an incredible inspiration to me and to everyone who's become privileged to know him. We're making the whole festival tribute to Vassar Clements."

Tickets are on sale now. For all three days, admission is $22.50. Daily admission is $8.50.

Mail orders should be directed to the Marin Memorial Box Office, Civic Center, San Rafael, 94930. Stamped, self-addressed envelopes should be enclosed.

Tickets may be obtained through all Ticketron outlets and at other leading agencies.

Corporation draws fine

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The corporation which owns two Wilsons Suede and Leather stores in the city has been fined $25,000, according to Superior Court records released Monday.

Judge Clayton Horn approved an order restraining the stores from such advertising in the future and levied the fine.

The stores are located at 373 Geary St. and 687 Market

DO YOU REMEMBER? — What two of Hollywood's top male dramatic stars appear as song-and-dance men? On the left is Clark Gable with a couple of chorus girls as he danced and sang "Putting on the Ritz" in a musical called "Idiot's Delight" back in 1939. On the right James Stewart is dancing in a 1942 movie musical, "Born To Dance." With him, from left, are Buddy Ebsen, Eleanor Powell and Una Merkel. Both numbers are featured in MGM's film "That's Entertainment," a celebration of movie musicals.

Skate star to perform in Ice Capades

LOS ANGELES — Karen Magnussen, 1973 world skating champion, will be making her first professional appearance in Los Angeles when Ice Capades opens at the Sports Arena April 26.

The Vancouver, Canada, skater felt that the most motivating force in helping her reach the top was challenge.

"The slimmer my chances, the harder I worked to win," she said.

Miss Magnussen was five times Canadian champion, the 1971 North American champion, 1972 Olympic silver medalist and winner of all three gold medals at the 1973 World Competition in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia.

During the 1969 World Championship, she was forced into an 11th hour dropout because of stress fractures in both legs, and the possibility of never skating again was a grim crises. Nonetheless, through strenouous practice, Miss Magnussen returned to the 1970 competition, placing fourth and receiving a standing ovation from the audience.

The run of the Ice Capades will continue through May 12 with 24 performances. The program also includes figure skaters, comedy acts, sets and original music, costumes and gimics.

The ice show also stars Jo Jo Starbuck and Ken Shelley, Anna Galmarini, Sashi Kuchiki, the Romanos family, Lucien Meyer and his chimps, Peter Gordon and Barbara Wilson, Susan Harmon, Ricky Reid, David Sadlier, Terry Head and Johnny LaBreque and Bob Mac.

Performance schedule is Tuesday through Friday nights at 8; Saturdays at 1, 5 and 9 p.m.; and Sundays at 2 and 6 p.m. All seats are reserved at $3, $4, $5.50 and $6.

Heels cost her an extra $144

LONDON (UPI) A pair of black platform shoes with glittering heels cost the wife of pop star Marc Bolan $144 in fines in a London court Monday.

Showing the shoes to the magistrate St. John Harmsworth, Mrs. June Boan said they cause her involvement in a multiple car crash.

As she tried to stop her Ferrari at traffic lights, she said, the sole of one shoe jammed between the brake and the accelerator pedal.

French group to appear at UCLA

LOS ANGELES — Le Treteau de Paris, French dramatic troupe, will present Eugene Ionesco's "Le roi se meurt" in UCLA's Royce Hall at 8:30 tonight.

The play, translated into English and presented as "Exit the King," explores the life of a once-great king called Berenger I, shown during his last hour of life surrounded by his two wives, his physician and the ever decreasing members of his decaying court.

It is said that Ionesco hoped that by writing this play he could bring himself to accept the idea of his own inevitable death. In his "Notes and Counter Notes," he recalls that since age 4, when he first discovered that he was going to die, he has been filled with anguish about death.

This production, staged by Jacques Mauclair to whom Ionesco dedicated the play, is being recreated by Le Treteau de Paris as part of its 16th anniversary season in the United States and Canada. The players include Olivier Hussenot in the title role, with Helene Duc and Christiane Desbois as his two wives, Queen Marguerite and Queen Marie respectively and Jean Dalmain as the Doctor.

PETER MAAS

Wateragte aids success of 'Serpico'

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — The Watergate mess, Peter Maas believes, has had a lot to do with the success of "Serpico."

Maas wrote the book from which the film was taken. The book was a success. The movie is a monster success. Maas thinks that maybe, since the theme dealt with a man's battle against corruption, that the timing was right. Timing is everything in the movie business. People, sick to death over what's been happening in Washington, delighted in the movie about one man winning out over the forces of official evil.

It's oversimplifying to say "Serpico's" success is just a question of timing. It was, of course, a crackerjack movie.

Maas had a lot to do with that. He had written "The Valachi Papers" and was unhappy with the way the movie version of that came out. So, when "Serpico" was sold, he insisted on some control. The first few screenplays weren't right, he says, so he "structured" the screenplay that was finally used.

You might be interested in knowing what's happened to the real Serpico. Peter Maas says the ex-cop is 38 now, living in Switzerland. He went there to get "things sorted out in his head," and Maas doesn't believe he'll stay there forever.

He still does pretty good with the girls," Maas says. "Only now they're Swiss and Swedes and French, not Americans."

Maas says the movie's effect has been a healthy one — "It's made people think of behaving better."

STARS — STARS — —
STARS — STARS — —

If "Serpico" was one of the pictures of the year, maybe "For Those I Loved" will be one of the pictures of the century.

That, anyhow, is the perhaps over-optimistic hope of the author of that book, a tragic man named Martin Gray. The book tells the story of his life — the Warsaw Ghetto under the Nazis, concentration camps, then worse.

He survived World War II's greatest horrors, came to New York, made a fortune, went back to France, married and had four children — and then his entire family was wiped out in a forest fire in the south of France.

Still, he manages to be an optimist. His book was a huge hit in Europe and is doing fairly well here. It will be a movie, with the script done by the noted Yugoslavian writer-director, Alexander Petrovic.

"It could be the picture of the century," Gray says. "It could be another 'Gone With the Wind.' "

It certainly should have the premiere of the century. Gray, who still lives in Europe where he runs a foundation to combat forest fires, is on close terms with European greats.

"I had lunch with the King of Belgium the other day," he says. "He'll be at the premiere. So will Willy Brandt and most of Europe's biggest names."

All the royalties from the book go to Gray's Foundation, and so will the movie profits. The Foundation of the Century?

Ghost town plans Mother's Day show

Stearns to conduct Verdi's 'Il Trovatore'

ONTARIO — Curtis Stearns, well-known in musical circles throughout California, will conduct the West End Opera Association's production of "Il Trovatore" at Spring Auditorium, Chaffey High School, at 8 p.m. April 20.

Stearns has worked as operatic conductor at the Redlands Bowl, musical director for the Riverside Opera Association and with conducting staff of the San Francisco Opera Association. For many years, he was musical director of the Educational Opera Association, an organization which brings opera to high school campuses.

Stearns is now teaching music and German for the North Orange County Community College District.

Angels wishing for 'old' Nolan Ryan

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

ANAHEIM — Come back Nolan Ryan wherever you are.

That is the cry of California Angels fans today after they watched their hero shelled by the Texas Rangers in Tuesday night's home opener at Anaheim Stadium.

There is some concern in the Angel camp about their star pitcher, who has been anything but effective so far in 1974. He hasn't resembled the hard-throwing righthander who won 21 games, pitched two no-hitters and set a season strikeout record last year.

Ryan officially pitched one inning in Tuesday's humiliating 10-2 loss to the Rangers but he did throw to seven Texas batters in the second frame, failing to retire anybody.

Threee consecutive walks opened the big eight-run explosion. Joe Lovitto knocked home two runs with a double. Another walk reloaded the bases. Back-to-back singles by Dave Nelson and Toby Harrah knocked in two more tallies and Ryan was headed for the showers on a quick knockout.

Already behind 4-0, the Angels were in deep trouble but it was soon all over. After reliever Skip Lockwood struck out lovable Alex Johnson, Jeff Burroughs cleared the bases with a grand slam home run over the left-center field fence to frustrate the 25,241 opening night fans.

The final totals show Ryan charged with seven runs, three hits and five walks with one strikeout. His earned run average has skyrocketed to 8.00 with 15 walks in nine innings of work in his two starts.

"I have to be concerned," Ryan told the writers. "I don't want to get off to a slow start this season. I have to do something to change it."

Since Ryan didn't pitch much Tuesday night, Angel manager Bobby Winkles said he is considering starting him again Friday night in the opener of a weekend series against the Chicago White Sox.

"I hope I can come back Friday night," Ryan said. "I still feel like I'm pitching in spring training. I'm having trouble keeping the ball down. I may try to slow my rhythm down and take something off my fastball. I must try to get ahead of the batters."

Meanwhile, Texas manager Billy Martin is enjoying discussing Burroughs, a 23-year-old power hitter from Long Beach who belted 30 home runs last year including three grand slams in a 10-day period.

"Jeff has a chance to hit a lot of home runs for us," Martin said. "I wouldn't be shocked if he hit 50 this year."

Considering his age and strength, a writer asked Martin if Burroughs could eventually approach Hank Aaron's career home run record of 715.

"I don't know about that," Martin laughed, "but he could be the guy to top Roger Maris' 61 in one season."

Tuesday's game was anticlimatic after Burroughs' home run.

The Angels managed to score in the fourth and seventh innings. Bobby Valentine tripled in the fourth and came home on Frank Robinson's sacrifice fly. Lee Stanton belted his second home run of the season in the seventh.

But Texas righthander Jim Bibby was able to coast all the way to pick up his first win of the campaign.

He was able to stop the Angels' biggest threat in the sixth inning when the home team loaded the bases with no outs on two walks and an error.

That's when the Angels heard the boos from the home fans.

ANGEL ANGLES — Ferguson Jenkins, who recorded six consecutive 20-victory seasons for the Chicago Cubs, will pitch for Texas tonight against southpaw Frank Tanana. Jenkins hurled an one-hitter to beat Oakland in his American League debut. . .

Thursday's probables have Bill Singer against either Steve Hargan or teenager David Clyde. . .

Epstein is hitless after 12 at-bats. After starting out the season with six hits in seven at-bats, Oliver has gone 0-for-10.

Dodgers get well in hurry vs. Braves

ATLANTA (UPI) — Hank Aaron took the night off Tuesday and the Atlanta Braves should have joined him.

With Aaron, who became baseball's all-time home run king with his 715th homer Monday night, sitting out the chilly night, the Braves were trounced 9-2 by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers raked two Atlanta pitchers for 11 hits in recording their fourth win in five games and tying San Francisco for the lead in the National League West.

Los Angeles jumped on starter Carl Morton for three runs in the first inning and added two more in the third. James Easterly gave up two hits and three runs in two-thirds of an inning after relieving Morton in the seventh.

Danny Frisella shut out the Dodgers after he came on for Easterly but the damage had been done and the Braves suffered their third loss in five games.

Morton walked three batters in a row after the first out of the game and Willie Crawford singled in two runs. Ron Cey's sacrifice fly brought the third run home.

Joe Ferguson and Crawford singled in the third inning to start another Dodger rally. Ferguson scored on Steve Garvey's sac fly and Crawford scored on Bill Russell's single.

Los Angeles added another run in the seventh and three more in the eighth

Davey Johnson's first homer of the season gave the Braves a run in the fourth inning and Darrell Evans scored the other in the ninth.

But Don Sutton, recording his second win in as many tries, limited the Braves to five hits before leaving in the eighth with a stiff back. Mike Marshall came on in relief and gave up two hits and one run.

The teams meet in the third game of their four-game series tonight.

Padres owner uses P.A. to criticize team

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Ray Kroc, the new owner of the San Diego Padres, told the largest opening night home crowd in the club's history, "I've never seen such stupid ballplaying in my life."

Kroc, the owner of the MacDonald hamburger food chain who bought the Padres to keep them from being moved to Washington, criticized his team over the public address system just before the home half of the eighth inning.

He then told the crowd of 39,083, "I suffer with you. I've never seen such stupid baseball playing in my life."

The Padres came up with three runs in their half of the inning but lost 9-5 to Houston for their fourth straight defeat of the season without a win.

Cesar Cedeno collected four RBIs on three hits and Larry Dierker, attempting a comeback after pitching only 27 innings last year, led the Astros to their first victory of the year.

"I've never heard anything like this before in my 19 years of baseball," Willie McCovey, San Diego players representative, said of Kroc's public blistering of the team. "I wish it hadn't happened. This will ring in the players' ears. We're not playing badly because we want to."

Preston Gomez, Houston manager, joined in admonishing Kroc.

"I didn't like to hear what Mr. Kroc said. Those guys are pros and they are out there trying. It's got to stop. It's bad for baseball and can't go on."

The Astros gained a 6-0 advantage after two innings with a pair of three-run bursts. Dierker threw a strong seven innings while San Diego starter Steve Arlin was relieved in the second inning and got the loss.

Charged with all six runs, Arlin was followed by six other pitchers.

Elks Tournament finals tonight

Edgewood wants a repeat

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — Edgewood High has the opportunity to become the first prep baseball team in 32 years to win back-to-back titles in the Pomona High-Elks Invitational Baseball Tournament.

San Diego High, who won the coveted crown nine times from 1933 to 1952, captured the championship five straight years ('38-'42).

Bishop Amat did win the title two years in a row in the mid-60's however their victories were sandwiched between a rained out tourney.

Edgewood, coached by Gary Kretz, will meet the darkhorse of the 39th Annual affair, Pacific High of San Bernardino, tonight at 6 p.m. at Ralph Welch Park for the title.

Defending champion and seeded Edgewood disposed of Chino in Tuesday's championship quarterfinals 3-2 and came back to trim Cabrillo 3-0 in the semifinals played under the lights.

The Sierra League leaders (7-1) stopped the fourth place San Antonio League (3-3) Chino Cowboys behind Ron Roenicke's 11 strikeout, five-hit performance.

The Trojan southpaw outdueled Chino's Jerry Belmudes, who threw a seven-hitter, to advance them to the semis.

Edgewood touched up the Chino righthander for two runs on four hits in the second inning.

The Trojans scored the winning run in the third on doubles by Tim Bititti and Bridgewater. Bititti finished with two hits in two at bats, and scored twice.

Edgewood came back in the semis to blank seeded Cabrillo 3-0 despite collecting just one hit.

All three Trojan runs scored on errors as two walks and an error lead to two first inning runs and three errors accounted for their sixth inning tally.

Cabrillo's Kevin Drake, the top major league prospect in the tourney, had one hit and stole two bases.

Pacific, a sixth place (2-4-1) Citrus Belt League entry, reached the finals by nipping El Rancho 1-0 in the quarters and trimming Bonita 2-1 in eight innings.

Coach Wayne Elton's Pirates scored the only run of 1-0 win on a throwing error by El Rancho catcher Jess Baez in the second inning.

Kings-'Hawks overtimes likely

CHICAGO (UPI) — On the record, the Chicago Black Hawks and Los Angeles Kings have a good chance to show the fans a few overtime games in their Stanley Cup playoff series opening tonight.

The Hawks fell one short of tying a league record for most ties in a season with 23 deadlocks in the 78 game National Hockey League season, and two of the ties were against the Kings, 3-3 and 4-4, in the last half of the season.

"There's got to be a winner in these games," Hawks coach Bill Regy said, "and I hope the fact we played so many ties in the regular season doesn't put us into too many overtimes."

The Hawks lost once in six games to the Kings. In the four victories, three of them were by identical scores of 3-0 as Hawks goalie Tony Esposito scored three of his 11 shutouts.

But Reay pointed out that the Kings boasted a top grade goalie, too, in Rogatien Vachon, who played every regular season game against the Hawks, and that he could be a major factor.

"Goal keeping is going to be the key to the series for both clubs," Reay said. "It always is. And the regular season doesn't mean anything now."

Reay also pointed out that the Kings "developed fast" in the last half of the season to make the playoffs, which could be another factor in the best of seven series. "They finished strong," Reay said, "and you've got to judge them on that."

The Hawks will be near full strength for the opening of the series with only defenseman Phil Russell unable to play. He was still recuperating from a collapsed lung suffered 10 days ago.

The Hawks, in the playoffs for the fifth straight year and the 15th time in the last 16 years, finished second in the National Hockey League's West Division, the first time since joining the division they haven't won the championship and the first time in five years they haven't won a divisional crown.

Chicago tallied 105 points, one of three teams over the 100 mark to trail Philadelphia by seven points in the division and lead the Kings, in third place by 27 points. The Kings were four poinnts in front of Atlanta.

The first two games of the series will be played in Chicago tonight and Thursday, with the next pair slated for Los Angeles Saturday and Sunday.

Orset Kindrachuk didn't play like a rookie with a kidney ailment in the Philadelpha Flyers' 4-1 victory over the Atlanta Flames Tuesday night in the quarterfinals of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Flyers and Flames got a 24-hour jump on the remaining six teams in contention for the Stanley Cup. Quarterfinal series beginning tonight find Toronto at Boston, the New York Rangers at Montreal and Los Angeles at Chicago.

"He had a tough year," said Flyers coach Fred Shero after Kinderchuck rammed home two goals in the third period to put Philadelphia one up in the best-of-seven series. "He was to have had an operation for a kidney ailment, but he didn't and he only got strong last week."

Kinderchuck, 1971-72 player of the year in the Western League who also led the league in fights, was deprived of a three-goal hat trick late in the final period on a spectacular save by Atlanta goalie Phil Myre.

Gary Dornhoefer scored the first Flyer goal in the opening period and Tom Blandon made it 2-0 in the second stanza.

Nicklaus' game is in shape

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus is the man. No doubt about it.

But the blond bomber looked the 38th Masters' field squarely in the eye Tuesday and said, "Most facets of my game are in pretty darned good shape for a change."

That's the equivalent of J. Paul Getty saying he's got a new idea for making money.

Nicklaus arrived at the Augusta National Golf Club Tuesday afternoon after three days at home in North Palm Beach, Fla. He played three practice rounds at Augusta last week, skipping the Greater Greensboro Open, before spending three days with his family at home.

He also played two rounds of golf at Los Tree Village while he was home.

Nicklaus will be the favorite, if there can be such a thing in a 79-player field, when play begins Thursday. The 79 total, including six amateurs and 13 foreigners represent the lowest number of Masters' contestants since 1971, when 77 played.

But if Nicklaus is feeling the heat of being the favorite, as he almost always is at the major championships, he wasn't showing it Tuesday. In fact, he seemed to enjoy it.

"If I'm not used to that by now, I'm never going to be," said the 34-year-old winner of 14 major championships. "But once everybody hits off the first tee, all that's over. I'm just dreading the day when I'm not the favorite. I'm glad people think enough of my game to make me the favorite."

Nicklaus, who has won here four times like Arnold Palmer, holds the Masters record of 17-under-par 271, which he set in 1965 when he blitzed the field by an amazing nine shots.

"That can be broken," said Nicklaus. "But when I say 271, I go out there and I don't know how anyone can shoot that. The course is not the same as it was in '65 and all the changes have made the course more difficult."

Then he added, "I don't really expect 271 to be broken for a long time. At least, not for another four or five days."

Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf, Johnny Miller and 22-year-old Ben Crenshaw passed up the Greater Greensboro Open last week in order to practice at Augusta National.

Only big name not in the Masters' field is Lee Trevino, the hottest pro on the tour the last two weeks. He won the Greater New Orleans Open, then tied for second at Greensboro to pocket more than $50,000 for two weeks' work.

But Trevino, because of his dislike for the Augusta National layout, is skipping the Masters.

Tuesday's weather was bright and sunny on the course with the high temperature reaching 60. A high of 70 with more sunshine was forecast for today, when the field will compete in the preliminary nine-hole, par 3 contest.

Gay Brewer equalled the record on the par 3 course last year with a seven-under-par 20.

Craig Morton jumps to WFL

HOUSTON (UPI) — Quarterback Craig Morton of the National Football League's Dallas Cowboys has jumped to the Houston Texans of the new World Football League, a radio station reported.

Morton signed with the Texans Tuesday night and a news conference was called today to announce the defection, radio station KPRC said. The station said Texans' president Steve Arnold of Memphis signed Morton after acquiring negotiating waivers from the Birmingham, Ala., franchise.

Hawaiians add Cowboys' Hill to WFL stable

HONOLULU (UPI) — Calvin Hill has signed a contract to play for the new World Football League but first he hopes to help the Dallas Cowboys win the Super Bowl.

Hill, a Cowboy running back, Tuesday signed a three-year contract with the Hawaiians which will begin in 1975 after he plays out his option year this season with Dallas.

Hill said he would do "everything in my power to help Dallas win the Super Bowl this year."

The five-year NFL veteran said he believed that his plans to play in the WFL wouldn't hamper his work for the Cowboys this season.

"I think we have a great chance of winning the Super Bowl," he said. "I plan to do everything I can to help the Cowboys do just that."

Although contract terms were not made public, a WFL spokesman said the money was "substantial."

Hill said that playing for the Hawaiians would be "like being in on the ground floor.

"It is a chance to be part of something that is starting from scratch and has a chance to become something big and worthwhile."

Hill was an All-Pro selection three times.

Just last weekend, tight end Ted Kwalick of the San Francisco 49ers also signed a contract with the Hawaiians— also to begin in 1975.

Leos bop ASU again in college action

The Leos clobbered the Sun Devils 11-3 at Tempe to continue their impressive trip to Arizona.

Cal Poly got back on the winning track, winning the nightcap of a twinbill with San Francisco State, 6-2, after dropping the opener, 6-4.

Claremont-Mudd also split a doubleheader. The Stags lost to visiting Pacific Lutheran, 7-5, in the opener but won the nightcap-8-0.

Azusa Pacific traveled to San Diego and lost a 7-5 decision to the University of San Diego.

La Verne pounded out 15 hits in its triumph. Dan Quisenberry silenced the Sun Devil bats on five hits, two of them homers by Clay Westlake and Gary Rajich.

The Leos scored in six of the nine innnings in posting the easy win. Jim Sherman and Hank Merenda led the hit parade with three apiece, with Sherman picking up three RBIs in the process.

Art Sanchez had two more hits for the Leos, giving him five in the two games with ASU.

The win gives La Verne a flashy 14-5 season mark, while ASU falls to a 27-17 ledger.

La Verne and ASU will wind up their series today with a single game with Robbie Mayhew slated for mound duty for the Leos.

Cal Poly broke a four-game losing string with its victory over San Francisco St.

The visitors from the bay area had taken the first game 6-4 behind a 13-hit attack, with Poly starter John Riddle absorbing the hill defeat for the Broncos.

Steve Brajkovich, Mike Heinen and John Kistner combined to fire a four-hitter in the second game as the Broncos salvaged a split.

Dale Biggs banged out three hits in the Poly win, while Kevin Thornhill, Dennis Rogers and Dave Metkovich had three hits in the twinbill.

Cal Poly, sporting a 12-18 season mark, plays host today to the University of Hawaii in a doubleheader starting at noon.

Claremont-Mudd slugged four home runs in its doubleheader with Pacific Lutheran. Brad Koppel, Jim Mullowney, Jamie Opatry, and Gregg Thompson had the round-trippers for the Stags.

Brad Rehn and Bob Phee combined for the shutout win in the second game. Rehn fanned six in the five innings, including the side in the third when Pacific threatened to score.

Two-run shots by Thompson and Opatrny in the third clinched the Stag win.

Wynson Moore had five hits on the afternoon for C-M.

Azusa Pacific ran into the elements and their own miscues in dropping a 7-5 decision to USD.

On a windy day in San Diego, the Cougars blew a 4-0 lead and wound up losing on four unearned USD runs.

Joe Jenkins bopped a three-run homer for USD to get them back in the game after APC led 4-0 in the third.

APC, now 13-10 on the season, plays host to Pacific Christian today in a single game slated for an early noon starting time.

Julius Erving tops ABA All-Star team

NEW YORK (UPI) — Julius "Dr. J" Erving, the big New York Net forward who was named Most Valuable Player in the ABA the past season, led all voting as unanimous selection for the All League team announced Wednesday.

Erving, who averaged 27.4 points a game in leading the Nets to their Eastern Division title, polled 132 points on 66 first team votes of sports writers and broadcasters in the 10 league cities. He was named on every ballot.

Artis Gilmore, the 7-foot-2 Kentucky center who led the league in rebounding for the third straight year, was named all-league pivot man for the third season.

In the back court, James Jones of the Utah Stars led the voting with 113 votes and 54 first team ballots. It was the third time Jones has made the ABA All League team.

George McGinnis of Indiana filled the other forward slot on the All League team and Mack Calvin of Carolina was voted to the other guard position.

On the second team, Swen Nater of San Antonio won the center position. Utah guard Ron Boone and teammate Willie Wise at forward joined Kentucky forward Dan Issel and fellow Kentuckian Louie Demper to round out the second team.

Sun inks Dick Enright, former Oregon coach

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Dick Enright, former head football coach at the University of Oregon, has joined the Southern California Sun of the New World Football League.

Enright, who was fired after two seasons at Oregon, will be an offensive line coach.

Four former Oregon players will be with him, Tim Guy, Jackie Conners, Mike Bolliger and Keith Davis.

Enright, who was a successful high school coach in Southern California before coming to Oregon, said he was "enthusiastic about getting back into coaching."

He said he disliked leaving Oregon, "but I can't urn down an opportunity to get back into coaching."

Mounties, Owls post wins in J.C. tourney action

MSAC downed L.A. Harbor 12-6 in the Easter Holiday Tourney at MSAC, while Citrus won two games in the opening round of the Cuesta College tourney.

The Owls downed West Hills College 6-4 in their morning game and came back to blast Reedley 24-2 in Tuesday's second round artion.

The Mounties put together a four-run fourth to overcome a 5-4 Harbor lead and went on to down the Seahawks. Ralph Beltran, taking over for starter Charlie Fallon during a four-run Harbor uprising in the top of the fourth, got the win with five innings of relief work.

In that big fourth inning for MSAC, Don Cashen blasted a two-run double and Kevin Bell picked up two RBIs with a single.

Bell, who has hit the ball extremely well in two games so far in the Easter Holiday Tourney, went two-for-four on the day and had four RBIs.

The Mounties play East Los Angeles today at noon in the final game of the tourney. If the Mounties win they will nail down the tourney title.

Immediately following the East L.A. contest, MSAC will play Glendale in a makeup of a game which was rained out earlier in the year.

Both games will be played at the Mounties' diamond.

Phil Doktor had a big day as Citrus won twice in the Cuesta Tourney.

The sophomore shortstop from Claremont had a perfect five-for-five in the two games, scored six runs and drove home six. In the Owls rout of Reedley, Doktor had two doubles and a homer.

Citrus will continue play today in the championship bracket of the tourney as they meet the winner of Tuesday night's Cuesta-Cal Poly (SLO) J.V. battle.

Chicago hits 5 of 12 shots in 1st period

By United Press International

It was waste not, want not for the Chicago Cougars Tuesday night.

The Cougars took 12 shots in the opening period of their World Hockey Association playoff game against New England but connected on five of them as they rolled to an 8-6 victory over the Whalers. It was Chicago's first win in the best-of-seven series which finds the Whalers leading 2-1.

In the only other game, Tom Martin's three-goal hat trick sparked Toronto to a 4-3 victory over Cleveland as the Toros hold a 2-0 lead in games over the Crusaders

Chicago got power play goals from Don Gordon and Joe Hardy within a six minute span and Rosaire Paiement, Bob Liddington, and Jan Popiel broke through a shaky Whaler defense to make it 5-0 before the 17 minute mark.

NHL player grabbed by WHA's new entry

INDIANAPOLIS, Indiana (UPI) — As far as the Indianapolis Racers are concerned, the defense comes first. The offense will take care of itself— later.

The Racers, the new entry in the World Hockey Association preparing for their first season next fall, Tuesday signed their first player by dipping into the rival National Hockey League to come up with Eddie Dyck, backup goalie for Vancouver.

Dyck, 23, who got into 11 games with the Canucks this season as understudy to Gary Smith, was signed to a three-year contract. Terms were not announced, but John Weissert, president of Indiana Professional Sports, Inc, which holds the franchise, said the native Canadian, from Warman, Saskatchewan, was highly recommended by John Wilson, who will coach the Racers and who has been scouting players the last three months.

WHERE THE ACTION IS — Thoroughbred racing returns to Hollywood Park this afternoon for a 76-day spring and summer meeting.

Hollywood Park beginning 35th season of horse racing

INGLEWOOD — Hollywood Park, bold and brilliant as the result of a million-dollar refurbishing program that has transformed the Inglewood track into the showplace of American racing, is starting its 35th season of thoroughbred racing.

The 30,000 added Premiere Handicap is highlighting the nine-race card that begins the spring and summer meeting's 76-day run.

First post throughout the campaign will be 2 p.m. and with the exception of a pair of special Monday racing programs — Memorial Day, May 27 and closing day, July 22 — competition will be presented on a Wednesday through Sunday format.

Nine events for $100,000 or more, including two $150,000 invitationals, the Hollywood Gold Cup and Hollywood Derby, and the inaugural running of the $10,000 added Swaps Stakes, which gives Hollypark three-year-olds a unique stakes opportunity, will headline the roster of major offerings for the finest thoroughbreds in the country.

Laffit Pincay, seeking his sixth riding title in the past seven seasons, will head a standout cast of reinsmen, which will include world's champion Bill Shoemaker, stakes-riding star Don Pierce, and such other talented jockeys as Alvaro Pineda, Steve Valdez, Fernando Toro, Jerry Lambert, Howard Grant and the promising newcomer, Octavio Aviles.

Hollywood Park patrons, who competed in a four-week version of the exciting "Sunday Sweep" last summer, will have not one but two weekend Sweepstakes to enhance their race-going enjoyment.

A Saturday "Super Sweep", rewarding handicappers for their season-long ability, has been added to the "Sunday Sweep", which again will offer a $5,000 bonus to anyone sweeping, or picking all nine races, on a Sabbath program.

Prize money in the two Sweepstakes will total $132,000 and with the carry-over conditions of the Sunday contest, it's possible that the handicappers will compete for a $76,000 prize on the final Sunday of the season.

The Coronado Stakes and the Lakeside Handicap, both to be contested at a mile and one-sixteenth on the Hollypark greensward, will highlight the first weekend of racing. Hollywood Derby prospects will battle in the Coronado on Saturday and Sunday's Lakeside will match older handicap performers.

JC spikers get ready for Relays

All three valley junior college track teams will slip away from conference action this week, but will not be idle during the Easter vacation.

Mt. San Antonio College will be competing in the Southern California Relays at Fullerton College and UC Irvine. The field events are scheduled for Fullerton at 9:30 a.m., while the relay events will get underway at the Irvine track at noon.

Meanwhile, Citrus and Chaffey colleges will also be competing in the Southern Cal Relays, but will be at Golden West College instead.

All the action will be held Thursday.

The activities at Golden West are scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

MSAC isn't going to settle with just competing in the Relays, however. The Mounties will take on Cal State Fullerton, UC Bakersfield and the U.S. Army Track team at the Fullerton track Saturday. The Army team just arrived at Fort MacArthur and will be preparing for its first major outdoor appearance of the year—the MSAC Relays.

Both MSAC and Citrus are coming off losses in conference showdowns.

The Mounties had their 35 conference dual meet victory streak snapped last weekend against Fullerton, while Citrus fell short in attempting to dethrone Grossmont from the Mission Conference title.

Citrus' star sprinter Rick Wilmoth set two school records last weekend in the 100 and 220 dashes with remarkable time of 9.4 and 21.0 — best in the southland and probably the state.

MSAC triple jumper Ehrich Scott keeps extending his Southern California top mark. Last weekend he pushed his 48-5 jump from earlier in the season to 49-2½ to run way out ahead as the southland's top jumper. Teammate Stan Bland moved into the fourth spot in the southland with his jump of 4-9 for second place.

MSAC high jumper Steve Miller moved into the top three in the southland after finishing second last weekend with a jump of 6 feet, 10 inches.

Mountie javelin thrower Dave Krogh also jumped into the top three with heave of 219-4 last weekend.

Valley drivers will compete at Corona track this weekend

CORONA — The wild Figure 8 and Oval Stock Cars will be crashing and banging on Saturday night on the quarter mile dirt oval at Corona Raceway.

Corona Raceway will be celebrating the Easter Holidays, and no races will be run on Good Friday and Easter Sunday.

So only the Thursday night "Super Cycle Combo" and the Saturday night Figure 8 programs will be held this weekend.

In the Figure 8 ranks, Otto Hayes of Garden Grove looks to be the leading contender in his Chevy Impala. Along with Hayes, Riverside's Fred Arnold, Jack Twitchell of San Dimas, Corona's Gary Cecil, and Jerry Smith of Riverside will also be on hand to compete in the Figure 8's.

Corona's Don Compton will head some 25 drivers in the Oval races at Corona Saturday night. Compton's brother, John, will also be racing along with Torrance's Dorsey Steele, Riverside's Heinz Wingler, Hayes, and Arnold.

On the "Super Cycle Combo" Thursday night, Eddie Lawson of Ontario and Mike Tidwell of Montclair head the list of Half-mile and Short track riders who will be competing beginning at 7:30 p.m. Lawson, 15, and Tidwell, 12, are two of the finest young prospects on the West Coast in the flat track ranks. Other riders who are expected are Jim Wright of Corona, Pomona's Dick Lewis, and Al Glover of Chula Vista.

In the motocross on Thursdays, Mark Tyer of Garden Grove is one of the top riders, along with Eddie Clark, Scott Wallace, Dennis Hazlett, and Ray Topham. The exciting motocross, half-mile and short track program begins at 7:30 p.m.

Ascot Park will keep busy Friday, Saturday

GARDENA — Danny Hockie of Harbor City, probably the best rookie expert since Tom Rockwood of Gardena to come from Ascot's own South Bay area, will also try to become the first rookie expert to win a 1974 Ascot half-mile this Friday night at 8 p.m.

Hockie, who vied with Northern Californias Rick Hocking of Fremont and John Gennai of Los Gatos for recognition as the nation's best junior dirt rider last year, made his local expert debut a good one as he finished third behind national stars· Dave Aldana of Santa Ana and Gary Scott of Baldwin Park last week.

In this Friday's event — the second in the $17,500 April Silver Medal series—Hockie will renew his efforts to beat Scott and stay ahead of Hocking, who was a creditable fourth in last week's opener.

GARDENA — Tim Lighfoot of Long Beach, defending super spring buggy champion of the Southern California Independent Drivers Association, seeks his third victory of the 1974 season in the first Saturday-night race of the 1974 campaign at Ascot Park at 8 p.m.

The buggies and the Baja sprint sedans are starting a monthly program to run throughout the 1974 season after making a dramatic comback at Ascot a year ago.

After a three-month hiatus caused by the disbanding of the American Desert Racing Association, the buggies and sedans returned to Ascot late last August and were greeted by more than 4,000 fans. Two fall shows and two Sunday-afternoon events the past winter were also well supported.

Arena hosts Car Show

LOS ANGELES — Big increases are reported in the number of vans, race cars and antique and vintage cars and cycles that will be shown at the 14th annual Custom Car and Motorcycle Show, set April 18-21 at the L.A. Sports Arena.

More than 1000 exotic machines will be on display in the nation's largest show of its type. Included are dune buggies, vans, customs, motorcycycles, model cars, race cars, antiques and classics, dragsters, futuristic machines and bicycles.

Special attractions include outstanding race movies, including the Indianapolis 500.

Southland racing

IRWINDALE — West Covina's racing realtor, Bill Swailes, returns to San Gabriel Valley Speedway Saturday night with his sights set on another visit to the winner's circle.

Swailes claimed his first victory on the demanding quarter-mile course March 31 when he downed 14 of the top stars of United States Racing Club including "Indy 500" winner, Roger Ward, in the main event.

SAUGUS — Promoter and General Manager, Marshall Wilkings has scheduled a full fourteen event program for the second week's show at Saugus Speedway this Saturday evening, April 13.

Newhall's Wild Bill Foster, last weeks main event winner will be back in his powerful hemi-powered 64 Plymouth to try and make it two in a row, but will be challenged by 1973 Champion, Mike Fortier, Van Nuys and Jim Thirkettle, Panorama City, both in Chevelles and Bob Hattig, Canoga Park in a 65 Rambler.

VALENCIA — A pair of motocross racing programs, both on the highspeed International track, are expected to attract a large field of professional riders this weekend at Indian Dunes Park.

With both events slated to roll under sanction of American Motocross Enterprises of Hawthorne, a 36-heat show Friday night will carry a guaranteed purse of $500 for the winning pros, while a daylong program Sunday will bring many of the same group back to the starting gate, going in quest of shares in a 100 percent payback of entry money.

Competition Friday, which starts at 8 p.m., is the initial nighttime show of a summer series to be rpomoted by tha AME. All sportsmen divisions will be racing for a 50 percent trophy award in the first program.

Consolation title

'Pack, Damien battle in tourney

Todd Visbal doubled home Bob Cuaron in the bottom of the eighth inning Tuesday night to give Pacific a 2-1 win over Bonita in the semis.

Cuaron singled to lead off the inning and was sacrificed to second by Jack Osborn. Roddy walked and Visbal sent a fastball deep over right fielder Marty Schroedter's head for the two-bagger.

Bonita had reached the semis via a 7-2 win over West Covina in the quarterfinals.

Rick Ortega pitched the complete-game victory and collected two hits to pace the Bearcats. Harold Drake added two hits and two RBI's.

Kevin Abel suffered the Spartan setback despite striking out 10 Bearcats. Jim Knowles had a perfect three-for-three performance.

It will be an all-San Antonio League line-up in today's consolation title game.

For the second year in a row two SAL schools will be battling in the consolation finals. Last year Montclair nipped Ganesha 4-3.

Today at 3 p.m. on the Ralph Welch Park south field, Claremont and Damien squared off.

Damien received outstanding pitching from ace Larry Pekarcik and Frank Pastore in the quarter and semifinals, respectively.

Pekarcik fanned 11 and allowed six hits in the Spartans 3-2 quarterfinal win over Charter Oak.

The big righthander weathered a shaky first inning when he allowed three hits and a walk for two runs and shutout the Lancers on six hits over the final six frames.

The two Charter Oak first inning runs snapped a 23 scoreless inning streak as the unbeaten Spartan (6-0) yielded his first earned runs in the last 30 innings.

Damien stole the ballgame as Robert Alexander singled, moved to second on a walk to Dean Sickles, stole third and scored on a throwing error by catcher Art Malone.

The Spartans played flashback to tie the game 2-2 in the fifth. Billy Karr reached base on an error, stole second and third and scored on another throwing error by Malone.

Alexander, Damien's hitting star of the day, doubled home pinch runner Steve Schiro from second base in th bottom of th seventh to give the Spartns a 3-2 win.

Damien came back in the semis to rout Los Altos 12-1 on four-run rallies in the third, fifth and again in the seventh.

Alexander had three hits in four trips to the plate and drove in four runs. Sickles followed that performance with three hits in three tries, his second three-for-three game of the tourney, and drove in two runs. Dan Monroe contributed two hits.

Pastore, who has been fighting off a food poisoning illness during the tournament, hurled a 12-strikeout, three-hit performance — his best outing of the year.

Claremont scored six unearned runs on seven walks and seven errors in a 6-2 rout of Duarte.

Harry Brown pitched the complete victory and collected two hits in two at bats to lead the offense.

John Huddleston hurled the Wolfpack to a 4-0 win over Workman in the consolation semis with a three-hitter.

Angels slate special lunch-game combo

ANAHEIM — A special luncheon-baseball game combination on Thursday, April 18, will open this season's program of Angeles Sports Luncheons in the Anaheim Stadium Club.

The Angels conclude their first home stand of 1974 that afternoon in a 1 o'clock encounter with the Minnesota Twins. A combination ticket for the noon luncheon and a $4 club level seat will be sold for $6. For those unable to attend the game, luncheon tickets will be sold for $3.50, including tax and tip.

Former Angels general manager Fred Haney will emcee the inaugural gathering. Guest speakers are Angels Manager Bob Winkles and third baseman Bob Oliver, and manager Frank Quilici and pitcher Bert Blyleven of the Twins. Luncheon reservations are requested by calling (714) 633-2000.

Future luncheons will be held every Tuesday noon, beginning April 30. Luncheon chairman Tom Seeberg is lining up an impressive slate of former baseball and other sports stars as subsequent emcees.

Discount for capital gain

By ROGER SPEAR

Q — I am 62 and don't plan to retire for another eight years as I am in excellent health. My holdings include: 2M Potomac Electric 8.85s of 2003, 5M Potomac Edison 9½s of 2000, 10M in First Virginia Mortgage REIT 8s12s of 1980 and 160 Union Electric (NYSE). I have $11,000 to invest and would like your suggestion on a high-interest security for this money. Are the FVM notes safe? —A.L.

A — The First Virginia Mortgage notes entrail a degree of risk. Highly leveraged REITs recently have experienced losses on outstanding loans causing earnings to drop. As of Sept. 30, 1973, FVM was monitoring loans representing about 20 per cent of the funds advanced to that date. Furthermore, earnings coverage of interest and fixed charges on the company's bonds and notes had narrowed to 1.3x. The current coupon rate of 11¼ per cent is high, yet the notes are trading below par, another clue to the extent of the risk the market sees in this FVM issue.

In your position you might be better off investigating deep discount bonds. By sacrificing current yield you would realize a worthwhile capital gain at maturity. For example: AA-rated Virginia Electric & Power 3-⅜s maturing in 1981 — the year you plan to retire — yield 4.8 pr cent currently. Trading at 71, the bonds would generate a 40 per cent capital gain at maturity.

Rent orchard 'in shade of an old apple tree'

SEBASTOPOL, Calif. (UPI) — People who live in cramped city apartments may now buy a taste of country life. Like renting an apple tree.

Michael Martin, 35, is starting a rent-a-tree business in this community about 60 miles north of San Francisco. Depending on tree size, it'll cost from $25 to $150 a year, with climbing privileges thrown in.

However, renters are not allowed to chop down trees or take them home. But they may visit them, sit in their shade, eat their fruit, and, of course, prune and spray them.

He said a $25 tree should yield about 200 pounds of "the juciest and tastiest Gravensteins in creation" while a $150 tree would yield up to 2,000 pounds.

Each tree leased in Martin's 13-acre orchard will carry a redwood plaque bearing the name of the tenant. "I can just picture family after family, on an August day when the fruit is ready, spread out in the shade of their rented tree, gorging themselves on apples," Martin said.

Pistons' coach confident despite being behind 3-2

By United Press International

The Detroit Pistons are only one defeat away from elimination in the National Basketball Association playoffs but coach Ray Scott is still the picture of confidence.

"I think the better team will win in the end," said Scott after the Pistons lost to the Chicago Bulls 98-94 Tuesday night to fall behind 3-2 in the best-of-seven series. "I think we can win two games in a row. I'm confident we can win and the players are confident."

Like the Bulls, the Boston Celtics took a 3-2 lead in their playoff against Buffalo by beating the Braves 100-97 while the defending playoff champion New York Knicks need only a victory tonight over Capital to eliminate the Bullets in six games.

The Bulls opened up a 25-point lead in their nationally televised struggle before Detroit roared back in the final quarter to make things close at the end.

Bulls Coach Dick Motta said he was not surprised at the Pistons' comeback because, "I felt it would be a close game. They're a great team and you know they're going to bust out. They're going to explode."

The Bulls shot nearly 60 per cent from the field in the first half for a 57-40 lead as the Pistons hit at a 35.9 clip. But in the second half, the Bulls turned cold and the Pistons connected on 23 of 42 field goal attempts to whittle the margin to two points with 51 seconds to play.

Norm Van Lier gave the Bulls their insurance when he hit an 18 footer with 30 seconds to go.

"We had the clock with us," Motta said. "We had a two-point lead and the ball. If Norm missed that shot, and they tied it up, we'd have the ball and a chance to win or go into overtime. Now we have to win one of two and Detroit has to win both. Detroit can't make a mistake and we have the opportunity to do so."

Scott said the Pistons "dug our own hole" in falling so far behind. "We had too much to make up. I was surprised they couldn't blow us out. I don't think they can beat us in a seven game series."

Bob Love paced the Bulls with 32 points and Jerry Sloan had 20 while Bob Lanier topped Detroit with 23 points and Dave Bing added 22.

The Bulls could wrap up the series with a win at Detroit Thursday night and should Chicago win, it would open the Western Conference playoff championship at Milwaukee Saturday afternoon. If the Pistons win Thursday, they would meet the Bulls in the decisive game of their semifinal series in Chicago Saturday afternoon.

Boston, despite holding NBA scoring leader Bob McAdoo to 16 points, still had a tough time beating Buffalo.

The Celtics can end the series with a triumph in Buffalo Friday night. If Buffalo wins at home—and both teams have been doing that since the playoff started two weeks ago— the seventh and deciding game would take place in Boston on Sunday.

John Havlicek led the Celtics with 25 points, followed by Jo Jo White with 20 and Dave Cowens with 19.

But the key to victory was Cowens' ability to contain the previously unstoppable McAdoo, who entered the game with a 33.5 playoff scoring average.

McAdoo was way below his shots per-game average. That, according to Cowens, turned the trick.

"The statistics show he didn't shoot as much as he normally does—and if he doesn't shoot, he can't score," said the logically-sound Cowens. "We were playing him tough without the ball."

White's jumper with 1:17 left put the Celtims ahead for good at 97-95 as Buffalo, in the playoffs for the first time, led most of the game, often by as much as seven points. Randy Smith, with 25, and Jim McMillian, with 18, led the Braves' scoring.

Yanks off to fastest start since 1945

By United Press International

You've got to go back to 1945 —even before the Casey Stengel 10-pennant era—to find a faster New York Yankee getaway than this season.

The Yankees, who most observers relegated to also-ran status in the American League East, Tuesday reeled off their fourth straight victory of the young 1974 season, a 3-0 blanking of the Detroit Tigers, and now stand alone as the only unbeaten team in the circuit.

Elsewhere, Minnesota downed Chicago 3-1, Texas belted California from the unbeaten ranks 10-2 and Oakland bested Kansas City 6-4 while snow forced postponement of the Milwaukee-Cleveland and baltimore-Boston games.

In National League games, Houston defeated San Diego 9-5, Los Angeles whipped Atlanta 9-2, Chicago blanked Philadelphia 2-0, Cincinnati topped San Francisco 6-3 and St. Louis-New York, Montreal-Pittsburgh were postponed due to to inclement weather.

In their first encounter with ex-manager Ralph Houk, the streaking (pardon the expression) Yankees touched starter Mickey Lolich for two runs in the first and coasted home behind the combined eight-hit pitching of Steve Kline and Sparky Lyle. Kline, apparently recovered from the elbow miseries that plagued him last season, picked up the win.

A's 6, Royals 4

With the Angels' loss, Oakland climbed into its familiar spot atop the AL West with its win over Kansas City. Joe Rudi's two-run double — his third of the game — came with the bases loaded in the seventh to snap a 4-4 tie and give the A's the finning runs.

Twins 3, White Sox 1

Bill Campbell put down a bases-loaded rally in the top of the ninth as Minnesota handed the winless White Sox their third straight defeat. Bert Blyleven won for the Twins while another 20-game winner from a year ago, Wilbur Wood, was saddled with the loss.

Reds 6, Giants 3

Joe Morgan's run-scoring single in the sixth and Tony Perez' third homer of the season enabled the Reds to knock the Giants from the unbeaten ranks. Jack Billingham, with relief help from Pedro Borbon, was the winner. Pete Rose, Dan Driessen and Merv Rettenmund all had three hits for the Reds.

Cubs 2, Phillies 0

Bill Bonham scattered four hits to pick up his shutout as the Cubs celebrated their home opener. Bonham was treated to both his runs in the first inning as the Cubs bunched three walks, two Phillie errors and Rick Monday's double.

HOUSE EXCITED — Atlanta Braves' relief pitcher Tom House, a former Nogales High and USC star, congratulates Hank Aaron after catching Aaron's 715th career home run in Braves' bullpen.

Nogales product Tom House shares in Aaron's moment

ATLANTA (UPI) — Bill Buckner of the Los Angeles Dodgers was hanging atop the outfield fence, arms outstretched and shouting, "Let me have it! Let me have it!"

But he didn't have a chance. Henry Aaron's home run—the historic 715th home run—was sailing well beyond the fence and into the hands of young relief pitcher Tom House.

"I couldn't believe it," said House in the clubhouse after the game Monday night. "I just kept thinking, 'It's coming to me. It's coming to me.'"

House had played in 72 major league ball games before this game but had performed almost without notice. But Monday night the 26-year-old Seattle native was the center of a mob of sports writers, telling them about his catch of Aaron's home run just beyond the 385-foot sign in the Atlanta bullpen.

"This is the biggest thing that ever happened to me," he said. "When I'm old and have grandchildren I can say I was on the other end of the 715th home run.

"I caught it on the fly. I was right against the base of the wall and I was excited, to say the least. It meant a whole lot to me."

Aaron's quest for the home run record has dominated Braves' thinking for more than a year. House indicated just how important it was when he said, "I was just hoping that I could make the club this spring so I could see the homer."

Before the game House had been joking with Aaron and he told the slugger he intended to catch the home run ball. Although he was aware of the fact that as much as $25,000 had been offered for the ball, he said it never occurred to him to try to collect the reward money offered. Instead, he ran in from the bullpen and personally handed the ball to Aaron.

"I put it right in Henry's hand," he said. Aaron was being embraced by his mother behind home plate at the time.

"He said "Thanks, kid," when I put the ball in his hand," House said. "I don't know if he knew it was me. That's not really important.

"Do I have any second thoughts about the money? not one bit. I think anyone that caught the ball in the bullpen would have done the same thing."

Buckner had made a valiant effort to reach into the bullpen and rob Aaron of the homer. He leaped to the top of the six-foot fence and was balanced at his waist, with his glove reaching deep into the bullpen area. But he was too far away from the falling drive.

Before the game House and Buckner had chatted. "He said to me, 'If we get the ball, do we get to keep it,'" House said. "I told him I really didn't know—we, I mean the Braves, made up our minds that we were going to give it back to Hank."

House will get a television set for his catch. Aaron endorses products of a major television manufacturer and the firm had offered to pay for the ball.

Bowlers aim at D.C. trip in roll-off

POMONA — An all-expense trip to Washington, D.C. will go to the winning man and woman bowler of Saturday's roll-off at Brunswick Pom Lanes.

In making the announcement, Mike Baker, manager of the bowling center, said 50 bowlers will roll three games starting at 5 p.m.

The man and woman bowling the most pins over average in a single game will be sent to the nation's capital to represent the center in the national finals of Brunswick's ninth annual "Bowl Your Way to Europe" finals, May 24, 25, and 26.

Saturday's participants qualified for the roll-off by winning the High Game of the Month award. Each qualified league bowler at the center was placed in one of two classes; men, 150 average and under, and 151 and over; and women, 130 average and under and 131 and over. The bowler rolling the highest game in each class each month received a plaque and was eligible for the local roll-off.

The public is invited to attend Saturday's roll-off free of charge.

Yank boss inactive

NEW YORK (UPI) — George M. Steinbrenner III, indicted in connection with alleged illegal campaign contributions, removed himself Tuesday from his daily duties as general partner of the New York Yankees.

The decision by Steinbrenner assured organized baseball that the Yankees would not be encumbered this season by Steinbrenner's legal difficulties. Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn called Steinbrenneer's action "commendable."

The energetic Steinbrenner, although a partial owner of the Yankee franchise, had taken an active role in running the team last season. The decision to vastly reduce his activities with the team does not affect his share of ownership.

A grand jury in Cleveland returned the indictment against Steinbrenner Friday, and there was some speculative talk about the possibility of Steinbrenner's suspension by Kuhn, although the commissioner apparently would be reluctant to take such action on the basis of an indictment before conviction.

Steinbrenner said, "I am innocent of the charges against me. I expect to be fully vindicated and cleared at trial. At such time I will resume my activities with the Yankees.

Give a guy a break

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

April may seem to be an odd month to talk about skiing (ANY month is odd to talk about skiing, as far as that goes), but the fact is that spring skiing is a sport of rapidly increasing popularity. It is popular with skiers, resort owners, osteopaths and bone surgeons.

In many mountain areas of the country the winter's snow still lies on the slopes, and the warm sun of April and May gleams on bare-chested skiers in shorts (male) and bikini-clad cuties schussing the trails. As many compound fractures occur at Sun Valley in April and May as during January and February. Probably.

There is a sort of ego-trip reward in sitting before an open fire with your leg in a cast if you broke the leg skiing. Something sort of romantic about it. People tend to gather about you. They bring you drinks and ask about your accident. "Well," you say, heroically, the wounded warrior, "I was coming down the East Wall of Old Baldy (all mountains are named Old Baldy) when I went into a tight telemark about 20 feet from a big pine. But the tip of the ski, etc." Boring, but people listen.

Dr. Arthur E. Ellison, former medical adviser to the National Ski Patrol System, agrees with me — isn't that peachy?

"There is an aura of mystique about a ski injury in many cases," he told the recent annual meeting of the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons. "Someone will break a leg and find it humorous." (Not humerus at all.) "Soon you will find him enshrined in some local saloon.'

I'm not sure what Doc means about "An aura of mystique," but the fact remains that some injuries are glamorous and others are not. If you say "I broke my arm coming off that ski jump at Aspen," people are a little awed. If you tell them you broke it in an auto accident, they wonder how much you had to drink.

Backs are most susceptible to a wide range of sympathetic response. People's backs "go out," as they say, on the slightest provocation, but audience reaction varies, no matter how serious the injury, if your back went out when you were hitting a 200-yard drive off the 9th at Mountain Meadows or taking out the garbage. If you were playing golf, they want to know about your injury; if you were taking out the garbage, they want to tell you about THEIR injury.

Tell your listener that you got your back ailment mowing the front lawn, and he won't be a listener very long. Tell him you were water skiing on the Colorado River when suddenly you felt this sort of click, down low — he'll be all attention and sympathy.

The seriousness of the injury has nothing to do with people's interest. It's how you got it. A broken leg sustained falling off a bar stool is hardly worth mentioning; an ankle sprained on the tennis court is worth an hour's interest and response.

If you're going to break your leg, do it skiing.

Monkey may transfer his fleas to a cat

By Dr. Frank Miller

DEAR DR. MILLER: Could Sinbad, our squirrel monkey, give fleas to our cat, Gracious — J. I.

Dear J. I.: He could. More likely, though, fleas would flow from feline to simian. The average squirrel monkey in a human home hardly ever has flea-bitten cronies from which to pick up these pests.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My daughter tried to tell me boric acid powder isn't good for my cat's ears. This is ridiculous. It never causes irritation in the ears and always clears up goopy ears and goopy eyes, too, when they have the problem. I use a dry powder in the ears and a weak solution in the eyes. If it were irritating at all it would certainly show up in the eyes and it never does. It always helps them. In fact, it is so good you can pass this along as a tip to other people with cats if you want to. — G. T.

Dear G. T.: Sorry. Though your intentions are good I can't pass your letter along as a good tip.

True, boric acid powder will often relieve ear problems. A boric acid solution can clear up minor eye problems, too. Still, boric acid should never be used on cats in any way, nor should borax even be used as a cleaner around them, for felines are particularly susceptible to poisoning from boron compounds. On a one-time basis, these products are comparatively low in toxicity, but they accumulate in the cat's system and, if used repeatedly, can build to lethal doses.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The current dispute between brother and sister in our family concerns the relative intelligence of brother's dog and sister's guinea pig. Sister has just read the major increase in brain size occurs before birth in man and guinea pig but after birth in dogs and rats. She claims this indicates guinea pigs, being so close to humans, are more intelligent than dogs. I can't comment on this because she has lost me but she'd appreciate your comment, I am sure. — G. C.

Dear G. C.: Her observation is correct. Brain size increase occurs primarily after birth in dogs and rats and before birth in man and guinea pig. However, this cannot be the main criterion for development of intelligence. The before birth group also includes sheep and neither little lambs nor ewes and rams are noted for an overabundance of gray matter. While guinea pigs are greater pets, they can't quite be rated equal to canines as far as intelligence is concerned.

For Thursday, April 11

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Plans will not go as smoothly as anticipated today, but don't be irritated with others because you can't move as freely as you'd like.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Material demands will be heavier than usual today. You may get a little peeved with ones who look to you to come up with what's needed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The other party to an agreement is not holding up his end of the bargain. This could lead to heated words.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's best you put off doing a task for another that you resent doing. No one will be pleased with the results.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Keep your temper in check with those with whom you'll be socializing this evening. Someone will rub you the wrong way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You won't take kindly to an outsider who'll try to tell you how to run your family. Frankly, it's none of her business.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Being overly impulsive and trying to get quick commitments at this time will get you more rejections than acceptance. Be patient.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be sure the plans you've made for this evening are acceptable to your mate. Don't pull any last-minute surprise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try not to duck any responsibilities you have today. It won't work. Tthey will catch up with you at the last minute.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An outside activity that you usually look upon as fun-and-games will be anything but that today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be sure your energies and efforts are channeled in a specific direction else much of today's hard work will be in vain.

This year will find you exploring new interests and meeting types of people that you haven't associated with before. Travel is likely for you, too.

Tenants pile scorn, trash on landlord

AMBLER, Pa. (UPI) — "It's his trash. We're just giving it back to him," explained the president of a tenants' association which dumped cans of brick and rubble on the lawn of their landlord's suburban Philadelphia home during the weekend.

Ken Marshall said the Saturday protest at the home of George Pittman resulted from the city's condemnation of the three-story, nine-unit apartment building owned by Pittman in the Germantown section of Philadelphia.

Marshall said the building twice was declared unfit for human habitation, but that Pittman had appealed after making minor repairs.

Bridge

Think tank is only half full

By Oswald & James Jacoby

A little knowledge is likely to be a dangerous thing to possess.

The ordinary bridge player would count 10 tricks in top cards and see that the club suit would give him his slam as long as it broke 3-2. He knows that suits are supposed to break 3-2 and after winning the spade lead our ordinary player would bang down dummy's ace and king of clubs and take the slam to the bank.

Opening lead—♠Q

A man with a little knowledge would know that suits break 3-2 68 per cent of the time. He would also note that if East should hold either the king or queen of hearts or both of those cards that two heart finesses would lead to 12 tricks without having to try the clubs and that the chance of that play succeeding would be 76 per cent.

He would say to himself a 76 per cent chance is better than a 68 per cent chance and try two heart finesses. This time he would lose both finesses and his slam.

An expert would use the same line of play as the ordinary player. He would cash one club and when both opponents followed he would know that the chance of a 3-2 break had risen to 71 per cent. Then he would cash the second high club.

The reason is that if clubs failed to break all might not be lost. He could still try the hearts. If East held the four clubs the slam would still make if the heart honors were divided. If West held the four clubs the slam would make if East held both heart honors. All in all the chance for success on the combination play would be 82 per cent.

Flat-chested girl troubled

By JEAN ADAMS

FLAT: (Q.) I am 16 and flat-chested. My boy friend has never said anything about it but I am always self-conscious about it.

I have read magazines of all the different ways to grow a bigger bosom but they cost so much. I get no allowance and babysit very rarely. Do you know of any place I could send to for help? — Not Much Hope in Alabama

(A.) I doubt that your boy friend will say anything. The emphasis on big bosoms is gradually disappearing along with the marked decline of male chauvinism. This is good news to small-breasted girls, as there's not too much they can do about it anyway.

Don't send for anything. Be content with what you have — including your boy friend.

DISAPPROVAL: (Q.) I've got a big problem. I've been going around with Melanie for six months and the problem is that her mother and dad don't like me because I am black. Please don't tell me to talk to her parents because I already have and it didn't work. — Help Needed in Texas

(A.) It is evident that Melanie's parents have strong feelings about black-white dating and are going to continue to give her trouble about you.

For her happiness and yours, I suggest you look for someone else with more understanding parents — no matter what their color may be.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Gasoline shortages have caused some motorists to carry cans of gasoline in their cars, creating a great danger to themselves and others. Safety officials report that an exploding can of gasoline is equal to several sticks of exploding dynamite, The World Almanac says. Some turnpikes and parkways have announced that anyone found carrying extra gas would be forbidden to use the road and subject to a fine.

Oryx extinct?

Another wildlife disaster

LONDON (UPI) — In the last flicker of sunlight before dusk last Oct. 20, a British naturalist came upon the carcass of an Arabian oryx in a remote desert area of the Sultanate of Oman.

The magnificent beast gave every sign of having been pursued to exhaustion — perhaps for two or more days — until its mighty heart burst.

The date and time may, sadly, be of historic significance.

Naturalist D.S. Henderson, writing in ORYX, the organ of the Fauna Preservation Society, believes it possible he was looking upon the last Arabian oryx in the wild.

The Arabian oryx is so remarkable an animal, so swift and strong, there are legends in the desert that the hunter who kills one inherits its warriorlike virtues. Those legends arose in the days when hunters carried spears or arrows or, at best, ancient muzzle-loading rifles and often tracked the beasts on foot or camels.

The Arab who succeeded under those circumstances was worthy of his prey. The legends were not intended to cover those brave hunters who since the war have pursued the oryx in jeeps and gunned them down with automatic weapons.

Henderson went to Oman where the last survivors of the species in the wild were known to be. Under the headline: "Were They The Last Arabian Oryx?" he told of finding three dead animals and some evidence that four others were captured alive and taken away.

"My oryx photographic safari in October 1972," he wrote, "produced irrefutable evidence that a very recent poaching party, at first thought to be from Abu Dhabi but almost centainly from a northern state, had killed and or removed the last of Oman's and possibly the world's wild Arabian oryx."

He then told of his search and of hearing from a guide that a Sheikh from Abu Dhabi had moved into the area eight days previously "with the announced intention of capturing, as opposed to killing, all the oryx he could find." He saw no trace of the sheikh and his subsequent findings may not have had anything to do with him.

"Just before dark (on Oct. 20), returning to Heima to refuel, we found more fresh vehicle tracks," Henderson said. "Then in minutes, literally just before the sun set, we found a dead mature male oryx lying between converging landrover tracks. It had bled heavily from the head and mouth and appeared to have been hit by (or to have hit) a vehicle . . .

"For the next seven days, with an increasing sense of frustration, we searched as much of the area as possible and found no evidence whatver to suggest any oryx had ever to suggest any oryx had escaped. Admittedly the area is vast and little traveled but . . . the fear grows that the Oryx killed and captured could well have been the last wild Arabian oryx.

"Even if a handful remain, what we have found undoubtedly ranks as a major wildlife disaster."

Nepal looking to China for trading ties

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — The 54,000 square-mile kingdom of Nepal, sandwiched between China and India, is trying hard to develop trade ties with China and the adjoining region of Tibet in addition to those it already has with India.

A five-member delegation from the world's only Hindu kingdom has been in the forbidden Tibetan capital city of Lhasa since March 20 to study prospects for trade.

After the Chinese takeover of Tibet in 1950, Nepal was the only country permitted to maintain a consulate in Lhasa after India was ordered out.

The Nepalese trade team, which has the cooperation of China, also is seeking the return of goods left behind in Tibet by Nepalese merchants when the Chinese Army marched in. Officials here decline to speculate on the value of the goods.

Trade figured prominently in talks Nepal's 29-year-old king Birenda had with Chinese leaders during his state visit last December. He said then that Nepal was "trying to build up" its trade. A trade mission from Tibet is expected here next month.

The formidable Himalayan heights have always acted as a barrier to Nepal's foreign trade. Goods shipped between Nepal and Tibet are funneled through the 72-mile Katmandu-Lhasa road which was built in the early 1960s with Chinese aid. Border trade is conducted through high mountain passes.

It is difficult to determine the exact amount of Sino-Nepalese trade since no accounting is made of free and open dealings along the 500 miles of border. State to state trading is estimated at less than $1 million annually. This does not include commodity aid to Nepal under which Chinese goods are sold here to meet the local costs of Chinese-aided projects.

Nepal exports consumer goods to China, including soap and food. China sends Nepal about 25,000 sacrificial sheep and goats a year (they are sacrificed each October to pacify the goddess Bhagwati) and receives dried red pepper in return.

The Katmandu Valley has become known as "China's chili farm."

Today, 90 per cent of Nepal's trade is with India, its southern neighbor. But India has not been able to meet Nepal's growing needs, particularly for construction material.

In the past, New Delhi would have looked with suspicion on any Nepalese moves to develop trade with China. But now the Indian government has overcome to a great extent the China phobia which earlier characterized relations with Nepal.

India also is aware that it is in no position to meet all of landlocked Nepal's growing needs. So while India may harbor suspicions about the latest Nepalese trade moves, it is unlikely to raise any obstacles.

Doing her dance not for judge

CHICAGO (UPI) — Melinda Zollicoffer offered to do her thing for Circuit Rourt Judge F. Emmett Morrisey Monday. He asked her to save it for a younger man.

Miss Zollicoffer's thing is dancing naked in the Upstairs Lounge in suburban Golf Mill.

The 24-year-old brunette was up on a charge of obscenity. She offered to give Morrissey proof there was nothing obscene about her. Morrissey begged off.

He said he was hearing, or watching, the case only because the regular judge, Walter P. Dahl, was away. Morrissey protested he is a bikini man, at most. Dahl is a bit younger, he said, and might have a more judicial view.

The case was postponed until Thursday, when Dahl is scheduled to take it on.

The attorney for the Upstairs Lounge, Julius L. Echeles, a Chicago criminal attorney, argued that dancing naked "is no different from the art in the nudes which can be seen in the Art Institute of Chicago."

Morrissey agreed, but with a reservation.

"They don't wriggle in the Art Institute," he said.

Luxury liner will remain in service

PARIS (UPI) — The luxury liner France has won a reprieve and isn't going out of service after all.

The French Line said the liner will resume its normal transatlantic sailings between Le Havre and New York May 24 upon completion of its spring cruises.

The ship is now on a round-the-world cruise that ends May 20.

The parent company of the France, at 66,300 tons the largest passenger liner in the world, gave no explanation for the decisions. It had announced only last month that the ship would be taken out of service in May because the French government, which owns two-thirds of the parent company, would cut its subsidy for the ship.

Brown accused of oil 'sellout'

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund Brown Jr. "sold out his independence" to international oil interests by accepting a $21,000 campaign contribution from a petroleum importing firm, Mayor Joseph Alioto said Tuesday.

He said Brown reported the contribution from Perta Oil Marketing Inc. as simply "Perta Marketing Inc." in his official filing of campaign contributors.

Brown's father, the former governor, held a 31 per cent interest in the company until last December and is now chairman of the board of U.S. International Investment Corp. which exports steel to Indonesia. Perta imports oil from Indonesia. The elder Brown said he gave his daughters and grandchildren 40 per cent of his interest in Perta five months ago but that Brown Jr. rejected the offer for a share.

The younger Brown's campaign denied Alioto's assertions of a sell-out. Campaign manager Tom Quinn said the world "oil" was mistakenly ommited from the official campaign filing but that Brown identified the company fully in a voluntary finance statement in November.

"Brown's acceptance of large contributions from Perta interests raises serious questions of conflict of interest that impair his present state position and would certainly cast doubt on his ability to be independent in dealing with oil companies," Alioto said.

Alioto said foreign oil has a "stranglehold" on California's energy industry. He said Perta markets Indonesian oil directly or indirectly to Pacific Gas and Electric, Los Angeles City Power and Water Department, and "possibly other Southern California utilities at a healthy profit."

Alioto was asked whether he had accepted any oil money for his campaign. He said "no," but that he may accept contributions from "little servicestation operators."

Quinn said Alioto's campaign contribution reports were "sprinkled" with names of oil executives, including $6,500 from George Ballou, a vice president of Standard Oil of California.

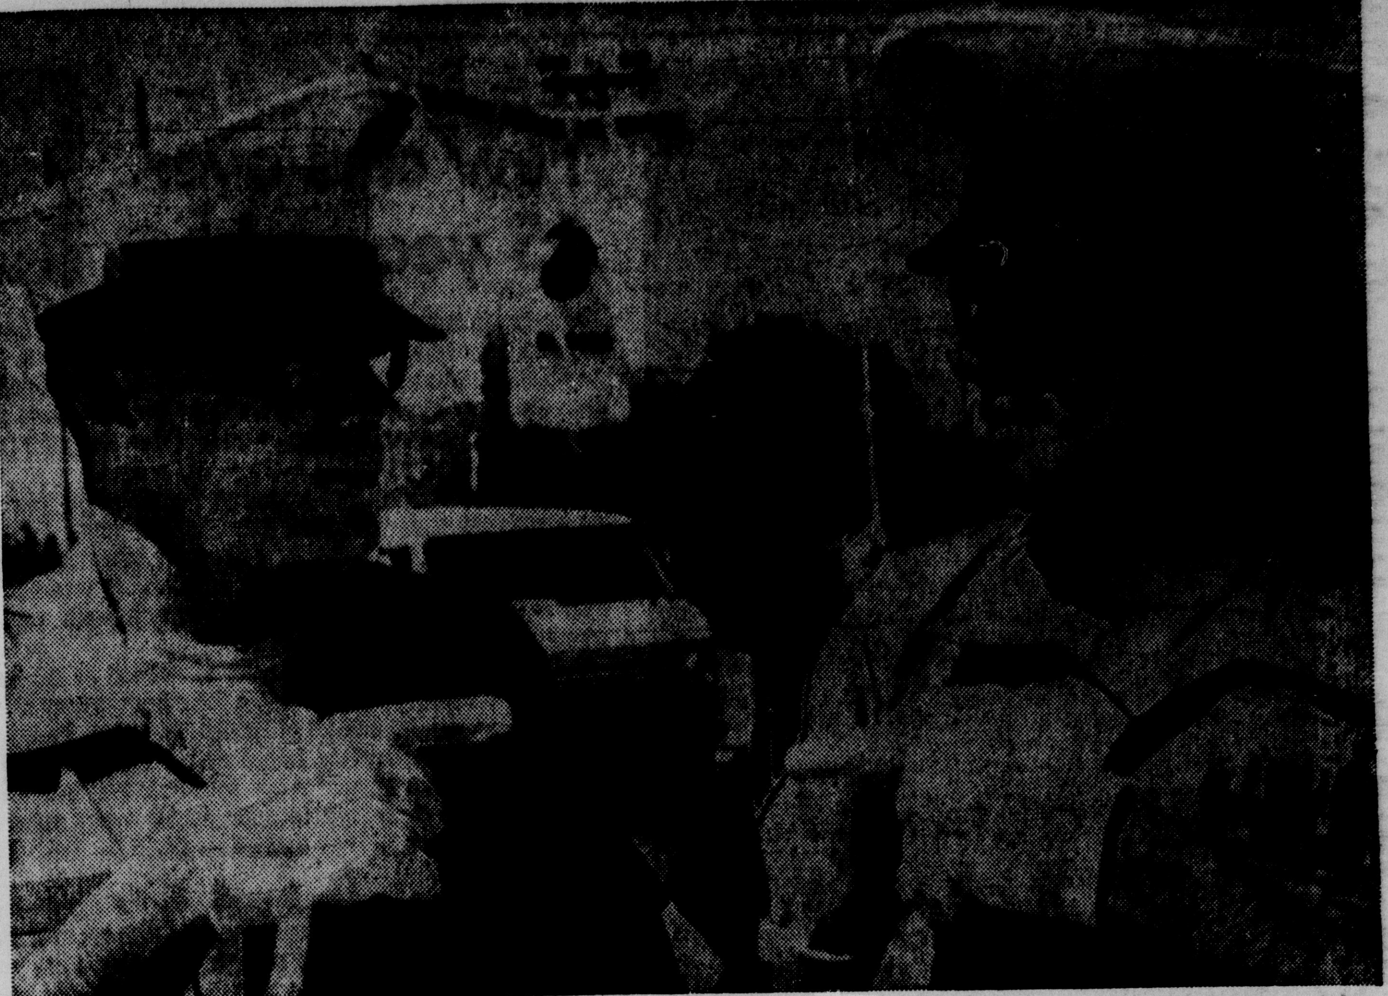
YEARNS TO BE A MOTHER — Sheba, a Chihuahua and terrier mix, has strongly developed maternal instincts, according to her owner, Mrs. Mike Capelety of Elyria, Ohio. Sheba raised 17 puppies in several litters, but another litter, born last month, died. Ever since, she has been bringing all sorts of orphans home and even went so far as to kidnap two beagle puppies from a neighbor's house. Now, as a substitute for her lost pups, she has taken over the job of mothering this kitten.



WHY BE HALF SAFE? ASK MARINES — When a Marine gets stopped by the Soper brothers, he's in trouble. The twin sergeants share quarters at El Toro Marine Corps Air Station where they serve as military policemen. Both are veterans of action in Vietnam where they both were wounded in the left leg. Larry, left, joined the Marines in 1966, a year before his brother, Gary. Since Gary joined, they have been running into each other at spots all over the globe. No one can tell the two apart unless they are standing at attention when Larry, 5 feet 4, towers an inch over his brother.

BIG SHOE TO FILL — If the shoe fits, wear it, as the saying goes. But Luciano Fabiani, 11, of Bologna, Italy, finds this 1.2 meter-long monstrosity somewhat ungainly to trot around in. The oversized shoe weighing 331 pounds was a shoemaker's exhibit.

Few cars over 15 years old

Life expectancy of the cars on the roads herabouts is exactly 10 years 3 months. Or so says the National Automobile Dealers Association. That expectancy, however, is something other than the fact. Most of the cars aren't even 5 years old yet. Only about 11 per cent are 10 years or older. Only 2.2 per cent are more than 15 years old.

It has been written that marriage begins when you sink in his arms and ends with your arms in the sink. . .If a man regards his wife as his better half, then marries twice, he's just about had it, mathematically, what?. . .It was none other than Disraeli who said, "I have always thought that every woman should marry and no man."

Q. "What's the name of that town advertised as the beautiful city where elderly people live with their grandparents?"

A. That's Victoria, capital of British Columbia. Pretty place.

It was that vocalist Nora Bayes who made famous the song "Shine on Harvest Moon." After she died, her five husbands used to meet in New York City for dinner every year on her birthday anniversary. They toasted — clink! — their departed wife in common.

Takes about two weeks for those nicotine stains on your fingers to go away after you quit smoking. That's how long the old skin cells last before they're replaced by the new.

When a man folds his arms across his chest, it's generally understood to be a defensive gesture. He may do it in an argument, for instance, to show he intends to stand his ground. But when a gorilla folds his arms across his chest, that's something else. It's a gesture of submission, say the animal experts. Means the gorilla is giving up won't fight back, intends no harm.

When the economy is flourishing, people with pains go to doctors. But when a recession hits, they're more likely to treat themselves with aspirin, then wait. Thus, according to a medico who's made a lengthy study of the matter, the sale of aspirin is a fair economic barometer. Rising sales means bad times. This is just the opposite to the significance of the sales of pencils. When they go up, good times are thought to be at hand.

Just 25 years ago, there were about 900 professional roof thatchers in England. Ten years ago, there were only 400. Today, there are 600. And apprentices abound.

The doctor comments

Overuse of alcohol can inflame stomach

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband vomits all the time. He's got so he can't even hold water, besides food, in his stomach. He's quick tempered, very nervous and upset. He's a heavy drinker, beer by the quarts and whiskey and vodka all in one evening. Could this be why he's upset all the time, because he has too much in his system? He won't got to a doctor. But, he needs help. He yells for no reason. How can one help this person?

DEAR READER — Regular overuse of alcohol can cause inflammation of the stomach, a condition called alcoholic gastritis. This will lead to pain in the upper abdomen and nausea and vomiting. Of course, he could have an ulcer which can also occur. He would need an examination of his stomach to see what the problem really is.

Because of the obvious medical problems you mention, he does need to see a doctor. If you have a family doctor you should talk to him about this. Another source of help is for you to contact the Alcoholics Anonymous organization and see if they can talk to your husband, and perhaps he will listen to them. I would expect, though, that they too would want him to receive proper medical attention. My hunch is, from your letter, that he needs medical treatment for his stomach and possibly other medical problems; psychiatric counseling for underlying problems related to his overuse of alcohol, and all the support he can get from you and such sources as Alcoholics Anonymous.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Concerning myself. I had suspected that I had high blood pressure for about a year. I recently had a physical and found my blood pressure at 158 over 108. I am a 36-year-old male.

The doctor put me on a low fat, 1,500 calorie diet. I am five feet and weigh 204 clothed, or about 40 pounds overweight. My cholesterol was 246 and triglycerides were 846. What do these terms mean?

DEAR READER — Your doctor did exactly right in starting you on a weight reducing, low fat diet. Many people with moderately high blood pressure readings can be treated by simply getting rid of the excess fat. Anyone with even moderately high blood pressure should try to get rid of every pound of fat they can.

The cholesterol is a subsetance made by the liver. It is not strictly a fat, but it is the waxy substance that sticks in the arteries and leads to fatty deposits in the arteries. This leads to heart attacks, strokes and many other problems.

The triglycerides are the fat. Your reading is really high, if you have quoted it correctly. I suspect that a loss of at least 40 pounds, probably more, will do you a lot of good. You may need to do it gradually. You didn't gain it all at once. I think you should help yourself along with starting a regular walking program. The more you can walk daily, the faster you will get results. You will feel better if you exercise while you are dieting, too.

For more information on cholesterol send for the booklet I have prepared for readers on this subject. Send 50 cents to "Cholesterol," in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Dr. Lamb welcomes questions from his readers, but because of the volume of mail he cannot answer personally. Questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns. Write to Dr. Lamb in care of The Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Broadcaster claims record

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — Disc jockey Bill Smith of Radio Station WLIT claimed a world's record for broadcasting underwater Sunday after being submerged for 59 hours in a special pool built for a home-garden-sports show here.

"As far as we can tell from looking in the books of records, this is a record for broadcasting under water," said Smith, 24, who had been confined since Friday morning in a metal cylinder six feet long and 38 inches in diameter.

Progress-Bulletin Food and Recipes

A good egg helps to satisfy family

Eggs to the rescue! The budget is tight, family appetites are hearty . . . and you want a supper dish that happily solves both problems. Here it is . . . a minutes-easy, oven-baked "hot pot" with herb-seasoned cream sauce layered between diced cooked potatoes and sliced hard-cooked eggs and a topping of cheese to produce a nutritious, satisfying full-meal entree brought to the table bubbly and golden brown from the oven.

This "hot pot" is not a left-over casserole "surprise". It starts with fine full-flavored eggs which give your family an excellent source of highest quality protein, vitamins A and D., essential minerals, and notable amounts of B-complex vitamins. Its other ingredients also add hearty, stick-to-the-ribs nourishment thought to belong only to far more costly foods. However, if you have Easter ham bits to use up, by all means add them to the "hot pot." Or, serve this savory casserole with frankfurters. With a tossed green vegetable or fruit salad, what a well-rounded meal you will have.

Never have large, farm-fresh eggs been of greater help to the homemaker. They are friendly food, well liked by all ages in all walks of life. Eggs go with anything and combine tastefully with other foods. More and more newsworthy recipes are becoming available using eggs in bigger and better ways beyond the traditional "ham and . . ." Eggs know no season. Your market has them and you can buy them with guaranteed freshness and quality the year around.

Using this "hot pot" recipe as a starter, invent some other combinations of your own . . . other vegetables, other sauces, but always with those dependable, handy, low cost, nourishing eggs.

EGG BONANZA CASSEROLE

½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 chicken bouillon cubes
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon basil leaves, crumbled
¼ teaspoon thyme leaves, crumbled
¾ teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
1-3rd cup sifted flour
2½ cups milk
1 teaspoon prepared horseradish
1 tablespoon freeze-dried chives
2 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 quart diced sliced cooked potatoes
6 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
¼ cup grated cheddar cheese

Saute onion in butter until soft, but not browned. Add bouillon cubes, mustard, herbs, salt and pepper. Blend in flour. Stir in milk, and cook, stirring until sauce boils and thickens. Add horseradish, chives and parsley. Turn half the potatoes into a shallow 2-quart baking dish, and cover with half the eggs and half the sauce. Repeat layers. Sprinkle cheese over top. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 30 minutes, until hot and bubbly. Makes 6 generous servings.

For this recipe, cook 5 medium size potatoes (about 1¾ lbs) in 1 quart boiling water with 3 teaspoons salt and 1 bay leaf, just until tender Drain, cool sufficiently to handle; remove skins and cut potatoes in ¾-inch cubes or slices.

What's in a name? plenty--on a label

Happier days are in sight for meat shoppers since something has been done to help solve the mysteries of meat cut identification. Under the recently introduced standard meat nomenclature system, the contents of each package is clearly specified on the label.

The standardization of meat cut names was a challenge since over a thousand names, some meaningless, appear on meat labels, and in some instances the same meat cut is sold under a half dozen different names. But the challenge was met effectively by an Industrywide Cooperative Meat Identification Standards Committee, consisting of representatives of food store and packer-processor operations and coordinated by the National Live Stock and Meat Board. The new meat nomenclature and procedures for implementing its use on labels have been completed in form of a manual for retailers.

What is the new nomenclature? How does it work?

It's an organized, logical and informative system of naming and labeling meat cuts. It is anticipated that this standard label language will be used by retailers throughout the country to aid consumers in identifying meat cuts.

Under this new nomenclature system, the label on each package of meat will bear the name of the meat by species (beef, veal, pork or lamb), the primal or wholesale cut (chuck, loin, round, etc.) and the standard retail name used throughout the nation.

When the label is for a smoked pork cut, the word "smoked" appears before the species name "pork." This informative labeling will be especially valuable when applied to less familiar or less easily recognized cuts.

Here's how it works. Consider, for example, the smoked pork chops. First on the new standard label for this cut would appear "smoked pork"; next and on the same line — "loin", designating the wholesale or primal cut yielding these chops. The second line of the label would read "rib chops." This information could be supplemented with the store's own customized name (such as the "fanciful" name Windsor Chops, in this case), but only if the standard name appears on the label. Thus the store or chain can maintain its own identity name without confusing the customer.

Both rib and loin chops are cut from smoked pork loins, just as they are from fresh loins. Therefore, if the chops included a portion of the tenderloin on the other side of the rib bone, they would be labeled "smoked pork loin chops."

Be sure to look for these chops if you have not already tried them. Once served, they will become established as a regular selection on the dinner menu repertory. Packed with that popular smoked pork flavor, these chops both spark and satisfy appetites. It's truly a happy day when they come to the table to be shared with family or friends.

Since these chops are generally "fully cooked" before being marketed,. they need only be thoroughly heated through, thus making them an ideal selection for the cook with a limited time budget. They can be panfried, broiled in pan, oven broiler or on outdoor grill or baked.

A collection of custards is a good mother's helper

If you're a homemaker who's interested in feeding your family right — you'll want to add these tasty custard recipes to your collection. The basic ingredients of eggs and milk supply high quality protein along with calicum, iron, vitamin A and riboflavin.

Realizing that young appetites don't always like what's good for them, the Advisory Council for Jams, Jellies and Preserves has created enticing recipes with the youngsters in mind. Delicately flavored custards are more inviting when they are generously swirled and layered with the concentrated fruit flavor of jams and preserves.

Here are three recipes for custards using a variety of fruit flavors. A thin layer of preserves between the crust and filling gives a distinctive orange flavor to the custard pie. After cooking is complete, the stirred custard is swirled with rich grape jam and poured into parfait or dessert dishes. A dainty garnish of candied violets or grated lemon rind gives it appeal beyond compare. Warm strawberry or currant jelly coats the bottom of individual baked custards (not shown) which makes its own topping when inverted.

Select the recipe which suits your time schedule and mood. As you begin the preparation remember the one cooking principle which applies to all three — keep the temperature relatively low and do not overcook.

Please your family tonight by serving one of these luscious desserts!

ORANGE CUSTARD PIE

4 whole eggs, beaten
2 and 2-3 rds cups milk
2-3rds cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell
1-3rd cup orange marmalade
1 tablespoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon ground cinnamon
Whipped cream
Extra orange marmalade

Combine eggs, milk, sugar, salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, orange peel and vanilla extract; stir until smooth and well blended.

Spoon Oranges Marmalade into pastry shell and spread evenly. Slowly pour egg mixture into pie shell. Combine remaining 1 tablespoon sugar and ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon. Sprinkle on top of pie.

Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minuts. Reduce oven to 350 degrees and bake about 30 minutes or until knife inserted into filling about 1-inch from edge of pastry comes out clean. Remove from oven and cool. To garnish drop mounds of whipped cream on pie and drizzle with extra preserves.

CONCORDGRAPE PARFAIT

3 whole eggs, slightly beaten
¼ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 cups scalded milk
½ cup heavy cream, whipped
1 teaspoon lemon extract
½ cup Concord-grape jam
Whipped cream
Candied violets or slivered lemon peel

In top of double boiler combine beaten eggs, sugar and salt; gradually stir in milk. Cook over hot, but not boiling, water stirring constantly until custard coats the back of a spoon. Chill.

Gently fold whipped cream and lemon extract into custard. Stir until mixture is smooth. Swirl jam into custard and spoon into parfait dishes or layer it alternately with the custard. Chill until ready to serve. Garnish with additional whipped cream and candied violets or lemon peel.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

STRAWBERRY CUSTARD TREATS

3 eggs, slightly beaten
1-3rd cup sugar
Dash salt
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2½ cups scalded milk
½ cup + 1 tablespoon strawberry or currant jelly

Blend beaten eggs, sugar, salt and vanilla. Gradually stir in milk.

Heat and stir jelly in small saucepan until smooth. Spoon 1½ tablespoons warm jelly into six 6-ounce custard cups twisting each to coat bottom and sides. Pour in custard.

Place custard cups into large shallow baking dish, pour in very hot tap water to depth of custard. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes or until knife inserted comes out clean. Remove from oven and cool.

This sardine sandwich is almost pizza

Norway sardines are particularly enjoyed by men and provide a savory base for many easy and economical ideas to serve for Sunday afternoon meals.

The easiest idea, of course, is to just open a can of sardines, packed either in olive oil, tomato or mustard sauce, and offering them with thick slices of French or rye bread or crusty rolls, some cheese, fresh fruit and a favorite beverage. You'll have a good nutritious meal for under a dollar a can. According to the United States Department of Agricilture, "Sardines are one of the best low-cost sources of protein food for human consumption."

For something a little different, though, there's Nordic Omelet Sandwich. It's almost a pizza without a crust and can be ready to eat in 15 minutes! Serve this savory egg-cheese-tomato-sardine mixture over warm rolls or toasted English muffins for hearty open-face sandwiches. It's an easy and nutritious omelet for weekend brunches and midnight suppers, too.

NORDIC OMELET SANDWICH

1 tablespoon butter
1 large tomato, sliced
Salt and pepper
¼ teaspoon oregano
5 eggs, slightly beaten
1 can (3¾ ounces) Norway sardines, drained
½ cup shredded cheese (Mozzarella, provolone, Jack)
Chopped green onions
4 buns or English muffins

Melt butter in 9-inch skillet. Arrange tomato slices in butter; season with salt, pepper and oregano. Pour eggs over tomatoes; cover pan and cook over medium-low heat 4 minutes. Uncover pan and arrange sardines spoke-fashion on eggs and sprinkle cheese between sardines.

Cover pan again and continue cooking 4 minutes longer, or until eggs are set in the center and cheese melts. Garnish with green onions. Spoon onto warm buns or toasted English muffins for open-face sandwich. Makes 4 servings.

Ingenuity serves instead of money

The high cost of food is bringing ingenuity to the kitchen forefront! Entertaining is almosh prohibitive unless you use some of the less expensive types of meat. Guests are understanding. . .and even appreciate tasting some of the truly delicious meals that are possible.

Barbecued One-Dish Meal is an especially flavorful, low-cost dish. Use smoked sausage (or the regular kind if you can't get smoked), rice and green beans as the main ingredients. Then season with liquid smoke, catsup, and mustard plus a touch of brown sugar. You'll have created a dish with outstanding taste. It's pretty and colorful, too. A dish you'll be proud to serve. Double or triple the recipes if you like to serve a group.

One thing to watch when cutting corners on the budget: make sure that nothing is cut from the nutritional value. Here, the combination of sausage and rice makes a dish of good-quality protein without anyone realizing that you are serving less sausage than you would. . .had you sauteed and served the sausage links all by themselves. So nutritionally nothing has been lost . . .but economically, your pocketbook has gained.

BARBECUED ONE-DISH MEAL

1 pound smoked link sausage
1 can (16 ounces) cut green beans
1 cup chopped onions
1 tablespoon bacon drippings or vegetable oil
¾ cup catsup
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1-½ teaspoons liquid smoke
2 bouillon cubes
3 cups cooked rice

Cover and cook sausage in ½ cup water about 5 minutes. Remove from water and cut in 1-inch pieces. Drain beans, reserving liquid. Saute onions in bacon drippings. Add ½ cup bean liquid and remaining ingredients except rice. Simmer 10 minutes. Stir in rice. Season to taste. Cover and continue simmering 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Little-fuss Salmon Suey makes a show

Every so often there comes a time in a young woman's life when she is anxious to show a special young man that she is a gracious hostess and an imaginative cook.

Certainly a little extra effort is needed to set an attractive table, to arrange a few flowers as a centerpiece and to create a warm, intimate atmosphere. But little additional time is needed to prepare a dish, such as Salmon Suey, which suits the occasion. It's a simple to prepare and needs the least amount of last-minute fussing in the kitchen, yet it's different and delicious, and it shows you really care.

There's nothing ordinary about such a dish, and there's nothing ordinary about canned salmon, a product which is recognized throughout the world as the "King of Fish." Its color is appetizingly pink, and its flavor is mild and sweet. It's easy and quick to use. These are the qualities of canned salmon that solve any woman's entertaining problem for intimate dinners for two.

Serve Samon Suey on a bed of crisp Chinese noodles; a pot of steaming tea is the perfect beverage, and for an imaginative final touch to an imaginative dish, serve a few preserved kumquats and a Chinese fortune cooky for dessert. Who knows? That fortune cooky may hold your fate within.

SALMON SUEY FOR TWO

1 tablespoon peanut oil
¼ cup chopped onion
¼ chopped celery
7¾ ounce can salmon
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ green pepper, cut into strips
¼ tablespoon cornstarch
¼ cup water
¼ cup sliced water chestnuts
8 -ounce can bean sprouts, drained
8 ounces Chinese noodles

In a skillet heat the oil and in it saute the onion and celery for 5 minutes, or until onion is golden. Add salmon liquid from the can, the salt, pepper, sugar, soy sauce and green pepper. Cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Blend cornstarch with water and stir into mixture in skillet. Cook over low heat, stirring until sauce is slightly thickened. Stir in water chestnuts and bean sprouts. Drain, flake and add the salmon. Cover and simmer for 5 minutes longer. Serve with Chinese noodles.

To prepare this dish in advance, follow recipe up to the point where you add the salmon. Cover partially and set aside. When ready to serve, bring mixture to a simmer, cover and cook for 5 minutes. Serve while piping hot.

Two-room dens

Mother polar bears often carve two-room dens in deep snowdrifts; the entranceway is located so that cold air does not blow into the inner rooms. The earliest igloos may have been modeled after polar-bear dens.

Plan leftover turkey for a new treat

Many wise food shoppers make it a point to select a larger turkey than will serve their family or guests for a special occasion. In the meantime, they plan ahead just what delicious dishes they can make with left-over turkey, so that left-over turkey really becomes "planned over" turkey.

In planning a big dinner, allow ¾ to 1 pound ready-to-cook turkey weight for each serving. What's remaining then becomes the basis for any of many delicious meals.

Here's an example: a casserole using sliced turkey with a delicious turkey dressing that's as easy to eat as it is to make. The secret of its ease of preparation is the use of a ready-to-use prepared dressing such as Melba Toasted Dressing or Corn Bread Stuffing. Each of these dressings is made from especially formulated bread and contains an artful blend of selected fine spices and seasonings. They come in conventient 6½ ounce stay-fresh bags, two to a box.

SLICE O TURKEY CASSEROLE

1 package (2-6½ ounce bags) Melba Toasted Dressing or Corn Bread Stuffing
1 package (10 ounces) frozen mixed vegetables
1 large onion, chopped and sauteed in 2 tablespoons butter
1 cup melted butter or margarine
1¼ cups condensed chicken broth (1 can 10½ ounces)
8 thick slices turkey
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk
2 cups grated sharp cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper

Mix dressing, vegetables, onions, butter and broth. Spoon mixture into a greased 2-quart shallow baking pan. Top with turkey slices. Melt butter and stir in flour. Gradually stir in milk. Cook while stirring until sauce bubbles and thickens. Stir in 1½ cups of the cheese until it melts and sauce is smooth. Season to taste with salt and pepper and spoon over turkey. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake in a preheated moderate 350-degree oven for 1 hour or until brown and bubbly. Makes 8 servings.

The lettuce capital observes a birthday

Salinas, California, the "Lettuce Capital of the World," celebrates its 100th anniversary this year, with a fiesta-feeling that brings back memories of the early days of haciendas and vaqueros. Now, where horses romped and fields of waving grain stretched as far as the eye could see, acres of vegetable crops fan out from the city hailed as a modern frontier of the west.

While the history of Salinas goes back to the fateful day when a broken wagon axle forced an enterprising merchant to make his camp, and eventually his headquarters on that exact spot, it took another half century for Salinas to experiment with one of the crops that have made it famous . . . western iceberg lettuce. From April through November the harvest of this green gold keeps the valley humming, supplying more than 80 per cent of the nation's lettuce.

So familiar a salad ingredient is western iceberg lettuce that it's difficult to tell whether salads became popular because lettuce was available, or whether the increase in lettuce acreage is necessary because salads are so popular. And it doesn't really matter when you can put together such crisp and zesty combinations as Spring Chicken Salad.

Cook tender young chicken breasts for the slender strips of meat which contrast so well with the brilliant rings of green pepper and the bright red apple wedges, or cut strips of left-over ham, roast beef or turkey. Select a firm head of western iceberg lettuce, but one that feels slightly "springy" when you squeeze it gently. Core, rinse and drain it as soon as you get it home and store it in a tightly-closed plastic bag until you are ready ot tear it into bite-sized chunks for the salad. Save the large, more-highly colored outer leaves to line individual salad bowls, or to use in soups or when cooking other vegetables. They contain the highest amounts of vitamins and minerals.

Toss your light-in-calories Spring Chicken Salad with a cheese and basil flavored dressing just before serving and pass along with crackers or hot rolls.

SPRING CHICKEN SALAD

1 head western iceberg lettuce
1½ cups cooked chicken strips
1 red-skinned apple, cut in thin wedges
¼ cup thin slices green pepper
½ cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons corn oil
¾ teaspoon onion salt
½ teaspoon basil, crushed
¼ teaspoon salt
teaspoon paprika
Dash pepper

Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce; chill in disposable plastic bag or lettuce crisper. Shortly before serving, tear lettuce leaves into bite-size pieces to measure 1½ quarts and place in chilled salad bowl. Arrange chicken, apple and green pepper on lettuce. Blend together all remaining ingredients, pour over salad, and toss lightly. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

3 desserts whipped up conveniently

The piece de resistance of a luncheon or dinner is dessert. Smooth and creamy . . . cool and refreshing . . . sweet and rich . . . an elegant dessert makes any meal a special occasion.

But many women no longer have hours to spend in the kitchen preparing desserts. They rely heavily on convenience foods and partially prepared products to save time and energy.

You can become a kitchen magician in a matter of minutes by using a little imagination. Suggested here are three elegant desserts made in a jiffy with the help of convenient, versatile concordgrape products.

Grape Mallobet is a smooth, creamy blend with a lavender tint. The recipe uses marshmallows, apricot nectar and Concord grape juice along with such stables as lemon juice, egg whites, salt and sugar. This luscius mixture can be kept forzen in refrigerator freezing trays and served on a moment's notice.

Looking for a cool, refreshing dessert—something light to serve after a hearty meal? Concord Frappe is a frozen blend of three fruit juices—Concord grape, apple and lemon. Keep a batch in the freezer and scoop into glasses at serving time.

It's amazing what you can do with frozen pound cake. Keep two or three on hand for emergency desserts like Easy Elegant Torte. Just split the cake into three layers, then spread layers and frost sides with a mixture of whipped cream, Concord grape jam and nuts.

GRAPE MALLOBET

20 marshmallows
1 cup Concord grape juice
1-3rd cup apricot nectar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
2 egg whites
Generous dash salt
2 tablespoons sugar

Heat marshmallows and ½ cup Concord grape juice in top of double boiler, folding over and over until marhmallows are half melted. Remove from heat and add remaining grape juice, nectar, lemon juice and lemon peel. Fold over and over until mixture is smooth and spongy. Cool. Beat egg whites to soft peaks, then beat in sugar and salt. Fold into fruit mixure and pour into frezing tray. Freeze until half frozen. Stir and freeze until firm. Makes 6 servings.

CONCORD FRAPPE

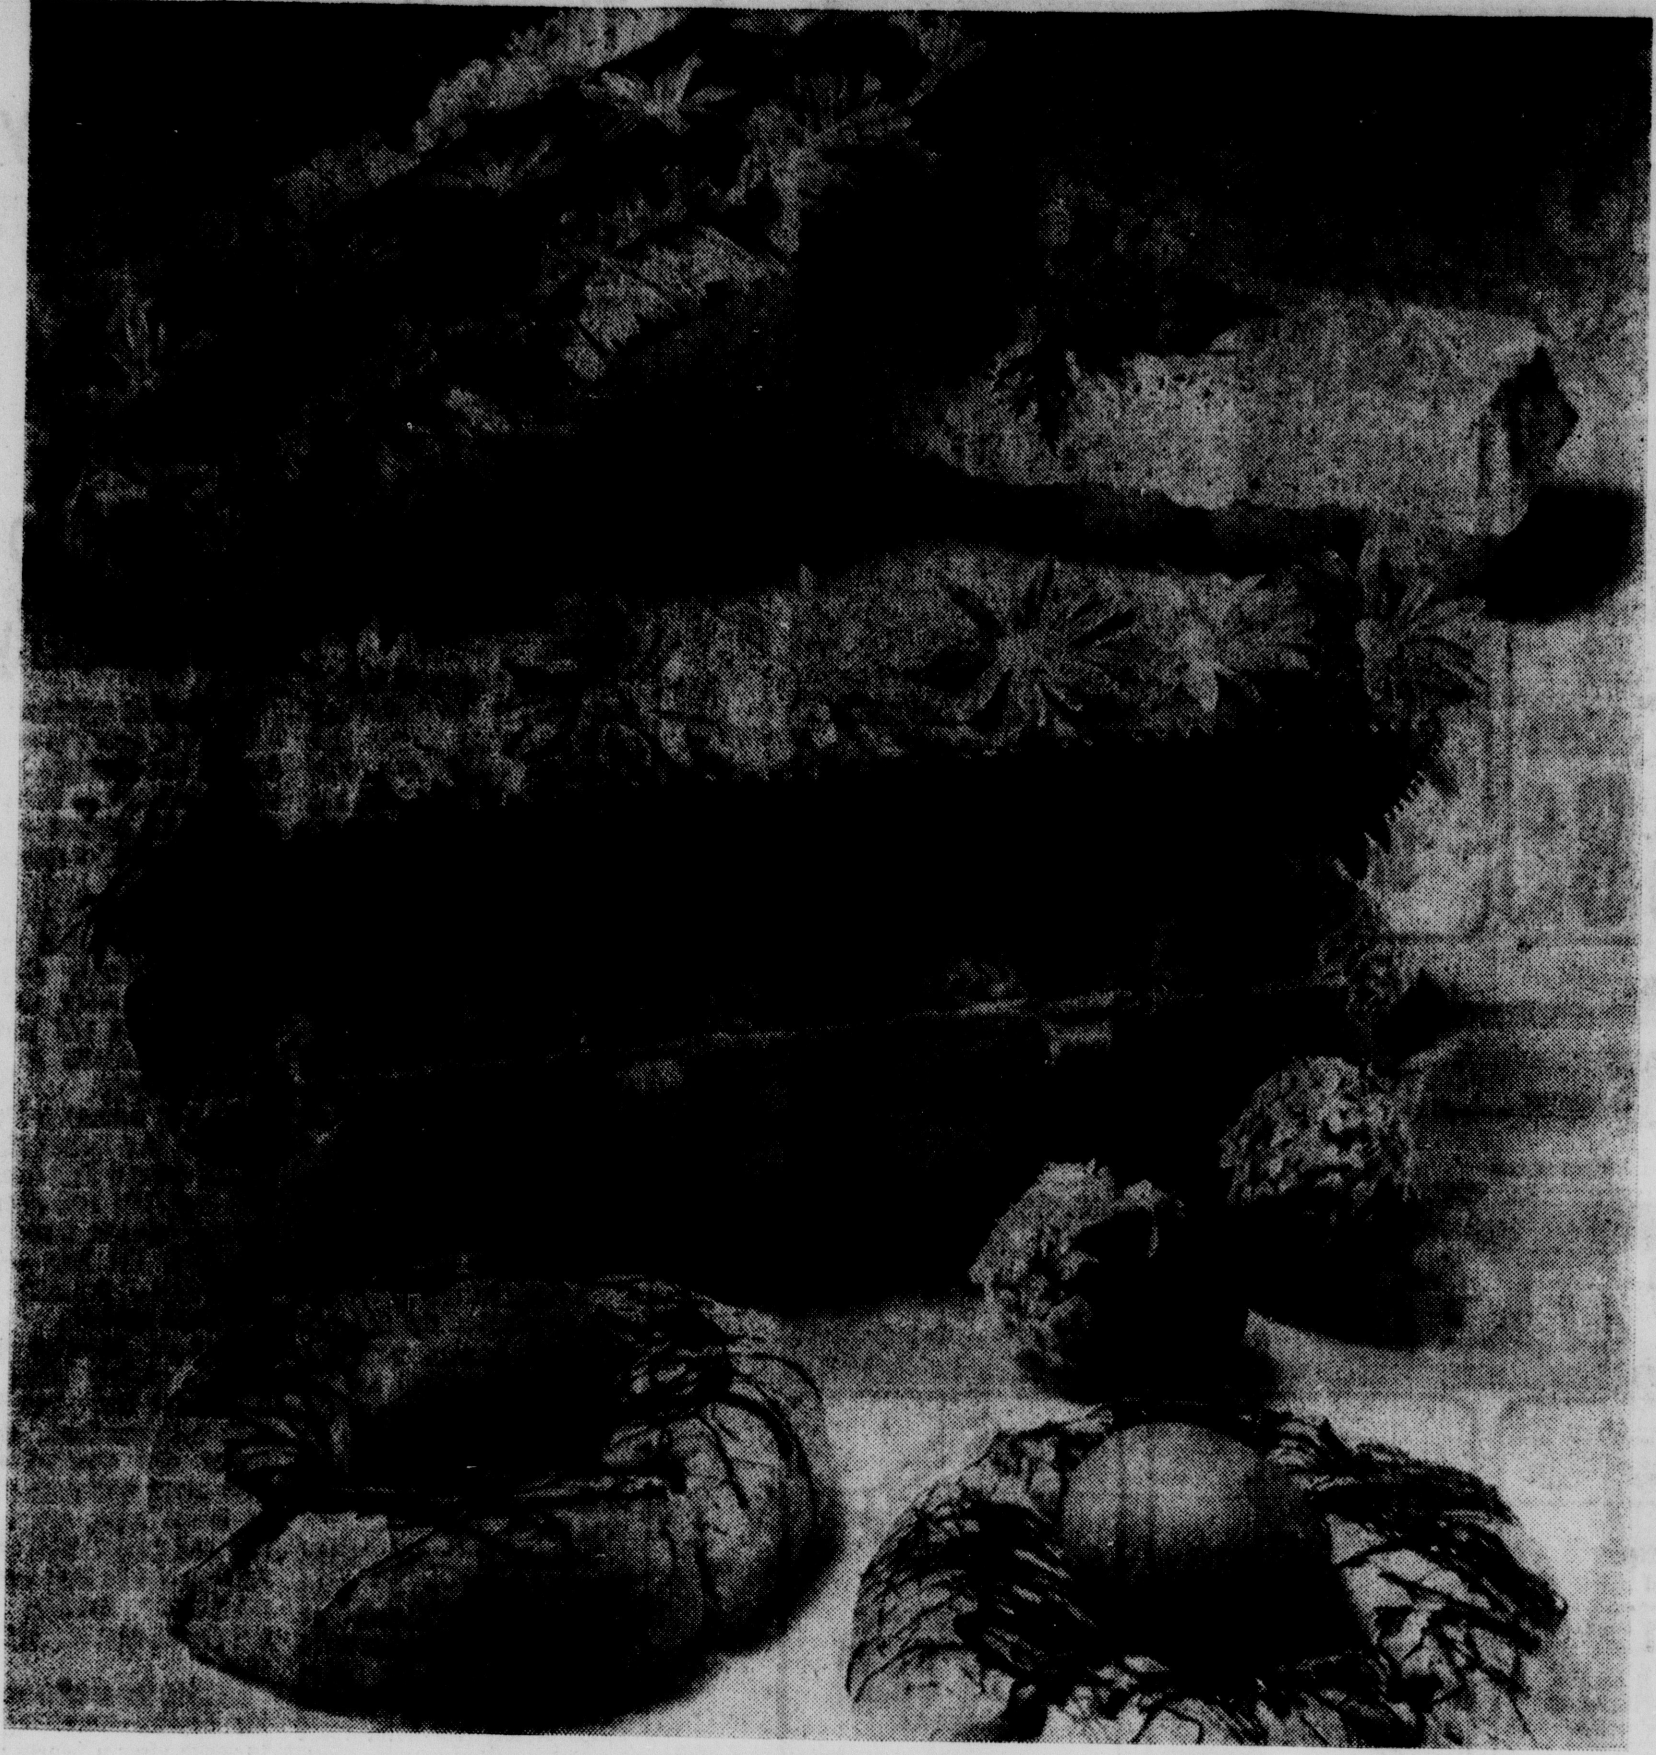
1 can (6-ounces) frozen Concord grape juice concentrated, thawed and undiluted
1 can (6-ounces) frozen apple juice concentrate, thawed and undiluted
3 cups water
¼ cup lemon juice

In a bowl or pitcher, combine all ingredients and blend thoroughly. Pour into freezer container and freeze until mushy. Beat with a fork and return to freezer. Freeze until firm. Scoop into glasses to serve. Makes 8 servings.

EASY ELEGANT TORTE

1 package (11¼-ounces) frozen pound cake, thawed
2 cups prepared whipped cream or whipped dessert topping
1 cup Concord grape jam
½ cup chopped filberts or pecans
Concord grape jam
Chopped nuts

Split cake into 3 layers. Combine whipped cream, Concord grape jam and nuts. Spread 1-3rd cup between layers. Use remaining whipped cream mixture to frost sides and top of cake. Decorate with Concord grape jam and nuts. Makes 8 servings.



EASTER EGG SURPRISE

An Easter project for whole family

What a delight this Easter when you get the entire family involved in making delicious tasting crispy chocolate eggs and decorating empty egg cartons with colorful crepe paper, ribbon and artificial flowers. The decorated egg cartons filled with the cholcoate eggs become delightful gift give-aways for your neighbors and friends.

And another unusual treat this Easter are the homemade egg drop nests. The egg drop nest is easy to make using two important ingredients: semi-sweet real chocolate morsels and refrigerated crescent dinner rolls.

Enjoy this Easter by making these special homemade Easter egg surprises.

EGG DROP NEST

- 1 6 ounce package (1 cup) semi-sweet real chocolate morsels, divided
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar
- ½ cup finely chopped blanched almonds
- 2 8-ounce packages refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
- 4 decorated hard-cooked eggs

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Melt over hot (not boiling) water, ¾ package (¾ cup) chocolate morsels and butter. Remove from heat. Add brown sugar and almonds; mix thoroughly; set aside. Separate crescent rolls. On greased cookie sheets, arrange four of the crescent roll triangles to form a star. Bases should overlap with long ends pointing out in opposite directions. Spread each triangle with 1 heaping teaspoonful of chocolate mixture. Starting from point, roll up triangles, toward the center; secure sides together. Repeat with reamining triangles. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes.

Place colored Easter egg in center of each ring. Melt over hot (not boiling) water, remaining quarter package chocolate morsels. Drizzle chocolate over each ring to resemble bird's nest. Makes 4 nests.

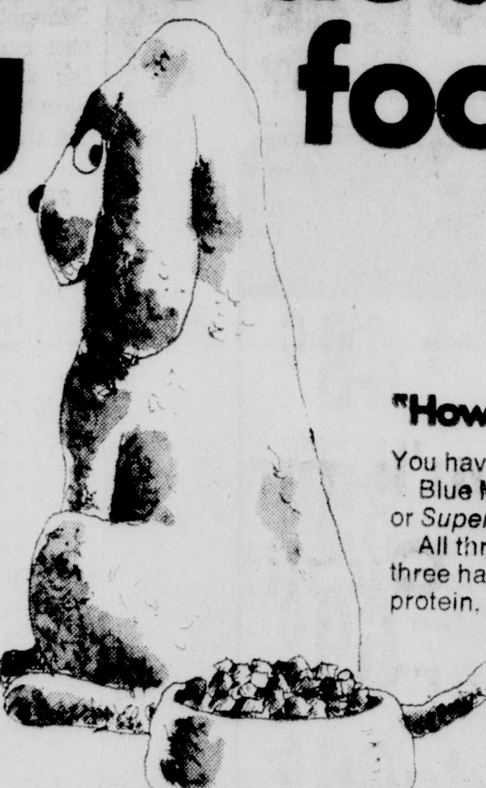
CRISPY CHOCOLATE EGGS

- ½ cup light corn syrup
- 1 6 ounce package (1 cup) semi-sweet real chocolate morsels
- 4 cups oven toasted rice cereal
- 1 6 ounce package (1 cup) butterscotch morsels
- 1 tablespoon shortening
- ½ cup shredded coconut

In small saucepan, bring corn syrup to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in chocolate morsels until morsels melt and mixture is smooth. In large greased bowl, combine oven-toasted rice cereal with chocolate mixture, stir until well coated. With greased hands, shape by heaping teaspoonfuls into egg shapes. Place in decorated egg carton or Easter basket.

Combine over hot (not boiling) water, butterscotch morsels and shortening; heat until morsels melt and mixture is smooth. Top each chocolate egg with 1 level teaspoonful melted butterscotch. Sprinkle with shredded coconut. Chill in refrigerator (at least 30 minutes) or until ready to serve. Makes 1½ dozen candies.

"What do I feed a dog who doesn't like dog food?"



If your dog won't eat anything unless it came from your table, try this.
First, open a can of Blue Mountain Beef Chunks or Mixed Foursome.
These two varieties will make even the most finicky dog think he's eating people food.
Then, don't let your dog see you open the can. (We're serious.)
Put the dog food on a plate, then with your dog watching, take it off your table and set it before him.
He'll think he's getting table scraps. But what he's really getting is the complete nutrition he needs. Food that meets the traditional standards established by the National Research Council—recognized authority on dog nutrition.

"What do I feed an expectant mother?"

Give her good quality protein.
Blue Mountain Horsemeat Chunks and Burger Grind are high in digestible proteins, with all the other nutrients—and good taste—an expectant mother needs.

"How can I fill up a big, big dog?"

You have three choices.
Blue Mountain Chicken Liver'n' Egg, Home Style Stew, or Super Meat Loaf.
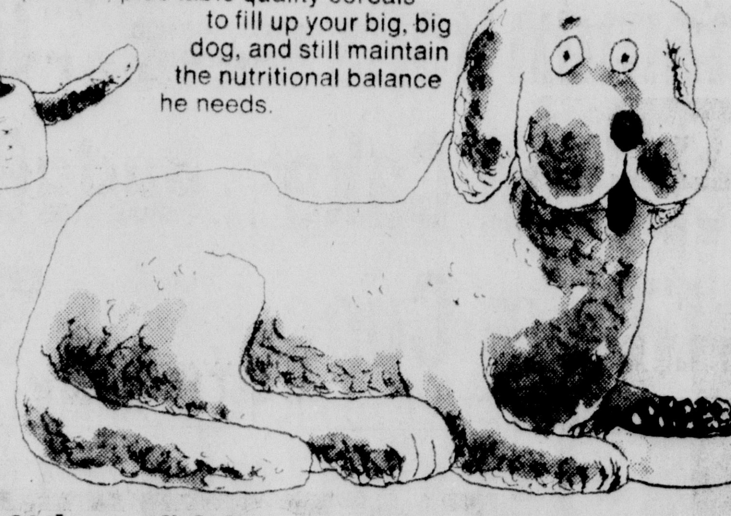
All three are less expensive foods. And yet, all three have lots of meat and vegetable protein, plus table quality cereals to fill up your big, big dog, and still maintain the nutritional balance he needs.



Where did these questions come from?

These are some of the questions people asked our pet food consultants in California grocery stores.
Why are we telling you all this?
Because what your pet eats has a lot to do with the way he feels and how long he lives.
That's why all Blue Mountain pet food is formulated with the help of true professionals: kennel-operators, breeders and animal nutrition experts at leading universities.
And we believe once you know the importance of feeding your dog the right foods, the dog food that's made good in Oregon will make good in California.

Fem streaker complains of police 'care'

DENVER (UPI) — "Macy" didn't give her real name to officers when arrested for indecent exposure during a streak with two male friends. Nor did she give her real name to the judge who fined her $100.

But "Mary" did give her story to the Denver news media.

She claimed she and her friends were interrogated naked for 30 minutes in a brightly lit room while a heavy stream of officers walked by. Finally, she said, a policeman gave her a newspaper because her red bandanna "didn't help much."

Police Chief Art Dill Sunday defended officers who refused the teen-agers permission to return to their car for clothes after a pre-dawn streak last month near downtown Denver. "Mary" said they decided to streak after smoking marijuana.

Dill said the patrolmen "had no way of knowing whose car it really was. If they had gone into that car themselves, it might have been an unlawful entry."

Dill said the girl and her companions stood naked in a room next to one where suspected drunk drivers were given sobriety tests. He said the "parade" of patrolmen the girl complained about merely were walking through halls of department headquarters on normal business.

"They took us right in the front door (of headquarters)," the 19-year-old girl said, "and down the hall. It seemed like every cop in the place came down on us.

"One of the guys that arrested us had me by the arm and another cop came down the hall, looked at me and asked, 'Wow, where did you pick that up?'"

The girl, who said she was advised by her attorney not to give her real name, said the arresting officers wouldn't let them get their clothes.

Wheat germ gives boost in nutrition

One of the beauties about this easy, uncomplicated ham loaf recipe is that you can buy just enough ham to make it—or use leftover ham should you have it on hand. Toasted wheat germ is always ready to use. Simply pour out a cup from its vacuum packed jar and combine with the other ingredients. Dry mustard and a bit of marjoram round out the flavors and a couple of fresh eggs bind the whole thing together. You can easily mold the mixture into any-shape you wish. Then bake it in an open shallow pan. Frozen orange juice concentrate accents both the handsome glaze and the loaf itself. After the loaf has had a chance to brown add the orange glaze and continue baking. Use fresh orange slices for garnish and the rest of the glaze as an add it yourself sauce to serve with the ham loaf.

The attractive deviled eggs ringing the platter may serve as predinner snack, first course appetizer or even for the salad course. Wheat germ and parsley mix with mayonnaise and the mashed egg yolks to fill the whites. These are at their best when made shortly before serving—then you get full benefit of the flaky wheat germ texture.

The ways of cooking with wheat germ and wheat germ sweetened with sugar and honey are many. Their reputation stands on being the world's most nutritious natural cereal.

GLAZED HAM AND WHEAT GERM LOAF

1½ pounds bonelss ham, finely ground
1 (6-ounce) can frozen orange juice concentrate
1 cup regular wheat germ
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon marjoram leaves, crushed
Orange Glaze
1 orange

Grind ham with medium blade of food chopper. Dilute orange juice concentrate with water to make 3 cups orange juice. Combine 1½ cups orange juice (use remainder in Orange Glaze) with ham, wheat germ, eggs, mustard and marjoram. Shape into round or oval loaf in shallow baking pan.

Bake uncovered in 350 degree oven 1 hour. Pour about ¼ cup Orange Glaze evenly over loaf. Bake 20 minutes longer. Cut orange into thin half slices. Arrange on top of loaf. Baste with Orange Glaze. Bake 10 minutes longer. Slice and serve with remaining hot Orange Glaze. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

ORANGE GLAZE: Mix 1 tablespoon cornstarch with ¼ cup sugar. Stir in 1½ cups orange juice and pinch salt. Cook, stirring, until mixture boils and thickens.

WHEAT GERM DEVILED EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs
3 tablespoons regular wheat germ
½ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon minced parsley
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
⅛ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper

Cut eggs into halves lengthwise. Remove yolks. Mash yolks and mix in wheat germ, mayonnaise, parsley, mustard, salt and pepper. Pipe or spoon into egg white halves. Chill until ready to serve. Serve same day. Makes 12 deviled egg halves.

Boy, 15, loses finger in blast

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 15-year-old boy experimenting with magnesium lost a finger in an explosion Monday.

John Sigoloff was crushing the magnesium in the bathroom of his home when it exploded. He was in serious condition at Santa Monica Hospital with many cuts and the hand injury. His parents were not injured, but the blast did about $1,000 damage to the bathroom, firemen said.

Tuna maintains its name a budget saver

Tuna for dinner? Sure . . . all you need is the right recipe. Imaginatively shaped like a giant dinner roll, Tuna Crescent is actually a hot and hearty main dish that can be baked and served in less than half an hour. Don't worry about the crust. It's simple, using refrigerated dinner rolls.

An extra touch is the savory sauce easily stirred together with a package of chicken gravy mix and seasoned with dill weed.

A second pinch-penny recipe with flair is Baked Tuna Fondue. The tuna is baked in a custard, made hearty with bread crumbs, then given an unusual topping of canned pear halves. The finishing touch is a lightly spiced sauce quickly prepared with a packaged cheese sauce.

Serve either of these tuna dishes with brussels sprouts, a relish tray, glasses of milk, fruited jello and cookies. Both meals will provide you servings from each of the four food groups needed daily to maintain good health.

TUNA CRESCENT ROLL

1 can (7 ounces) tuna, drained
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
2 tablespooons chopped pimiento
1 package (8 ounces) refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
1 envelope (1¼ ounces) chicken gravy mix
½ teaspoon dill weed

Stir together tuna, mayonnaise, onion, and pimiento. Unroll dinner roll dough; do not separate into triangles. Pinch edges together to form one large rectangle of dough. Spread with tuna mixture. Roll as for jelly roll, starting with longest side. Place seam side down on greased baking sheet, curving edges to form crescent shape. Bake at 360 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes until golden brown. Prepare gravy mix as directed on envelope; stir in dill weed. Slice Crescent and serve with gravy. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

BAKED TUNA FONDUE

3 eggs, separated
1 cup milk
2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 can (7 ounces) tuna, drained
1 teaspoon salt
1 can (1 pound) pear halves, drained
1 envelope (1¼ ounces) cheese sauce mix
Pinch ground nutmeg

Lightly beat together egg yolks and milk; stir in bread crumbs, tuna, and salt. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form; fold into tuna mixture. Spoon into well-greased 8 or 9-inch square baking pan. Arrange pears, cut side down, on top of tuna mixture.

Bake at 325 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes, until firm. Prepare cheese sauce mix as directed on envelope; stir in nutmeg. Cut Fondue in squares and serve with Cheese Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Chicken is remarkable protein buy

Chicken remains one of the more remarkable protein buys. Those who use chicken serveral times a week to help stretch the budget can vary this dish with some seasoning sleight of hand. Chicken breasts become a new treat when prepared with yogurt or dairy sour cream and a touch of curry powder. Serve with rice and a green vegetable.

CURRIED CHICKEN BREASTS

1 tablespoon flour
3 chicken breasts, split
salt and pepper
1 cup plain yogurt or dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons curry powder
1 teaspoon paprika
3 tablespoons melted butter
Lemon or lime wedges

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Shake 1 tablespoon flour in family size (14 x 20 inch) brown-in-bag and place in two-inch deep roasting pan. Skin chicken breasts; season with salt and pepper. Place chicken pieces close together in oven bag. Combine remaining ingredients, except lemon or lime, and pour over chicken. Close bag with twist tie and make six half-inch slits on top. Cook 45 minutes or until tested tender. Squeeze lemon or lime over chicken before serving.

Woman opens bank account for President

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — Mrs. Ann McDaniel, a retired school teacher, has opened a bank account for President Nixon and deposited $4.50 in it.

Mrs. McDaniel wants 99,999 other people to contribute $4.50 each so that a fund of $450,000 can be turned over to the President to help him pay his income taxes.

When she opened the account Friday at the First National Bank of Martinsville she said the fund would be a sort of belated Valentine for Mr. Nixon.

Skiing introduced

Skiing was introduced to America in 1856 by "Snowshoe" Thompson of Norway.

The gourmet cook's secret is seasoning

Less-expensive beef roasts turn into delicious dinner cuts when braised and simmered with special seasonings to make them more tender. In other words, the pot roast is at the top of the list as an economical and flavorful dish to serve the family or guests. Add vegetables during the last 20 minutes to avoid overcooking and loss of flavor and nutrients. This recipe calls for prune juice which gives a tart-sweet, almost wine-like flavor to meats.

TANGY POT ROAST

1½ cups prune juice
1 medium onion, sliced
1 tablespoon vinegar
¼ cup soy sauce
1 3-to-4 pound chuck roast
6 or 8 new potatoes
6 or 8 small carrots
1 can sliced beets
1 tablespoon cornstarch
Green peas, canned
Whole onions (optional)

Combine 1 cup prune juice, onion, vinegar and soy sauce in saucepan and bring to boil. Pour over chuck roast in dutch oven, cover and simmer on top of stove about 2½ to 3 hours or until meat is tender. Boil new potatoes and add with carrots during last 20 minutes. Heat beets separately. When pot roast is done, remove to serving platter, keep warm. Combine liquid from beets with pan juices. Dissolve cornstarch in ½ cup prune juice and add to hot mixture. Stir constantly until mixture thickens. Spoon over pot roast and serve with vegetables.

Supply and demand set fruit and vegetable prices

The consumer who buys lettuce for 19 cents a head one week and finds the price at 29 cents a week or two later, may well think that supermarkets pull prices for fresh produce out of a hat.

Not so, says Bernard J. Imming, executive vice president, United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. Retail prices for all fresh produce are determined, he states, by a known chain of cirumstances.

The law of supply and demand operating from grower to supermarket utlimately determines price, Imming points out, adding that the retail price also reflects labor, transportation and supply costs.

Increasing costs in these areas will be reflected in retail prices for fresh fruits and vegetables as in all other consumer goods in an inflationary economy. But, a generally rising price line will be bent from time to time, sometimes substantially downward and occasionally upward as supplies vary.

In simplest terms, the supply-demand theory means that when growers of a commodity have a short crop, buyers are willing to pay more in order to have a supply of what is avilable. This drives prices up.

While some economists have expressed doubt that the law of supply and demand is valid in determinung some retail prices, there is general agreement that the law still operates in the produce industry. The reasons are the perishability of the products and the fact that there are so many marketers of fresh produce that none is in a position to manipulate the nation's market prices, Imming points out.

One critical factor influencing supply in the produce industry is weather. When bad weather causes a short supply, demand for that limited supply can push prices much above the typical price for that commodity. However, working in the consumer's interest, Imming observes, is the fact that produce growers have a clearly limited time in which to sell their products. "Alternately," he said, "they have garbage on their hands."

The Law at Work

The drastic fluctuation in lettuce prices during the last year provides a good example of the way in which the law of supply and demand works. While the commodity in this instance was lettuce, the same principles apply to all fresh produce.

Last May, a head of lettuce was selling for 59 cents to 69 cents, with prices even higher in some areas. The reason was a severely curtailed supply, far too small to meet the normal demand.

The short supply was the result of some of the worst weather conditions in history in the areas which produced the lettuce to be marketed at that time. The immediate result was a drastic drop in the supply. As a result of this condition—and not because of general inflationary pressures—the price of lettuce soared far beyond usual levels.

Moreover, the same law of supply and demand worked the other way. As soon as more lettuce from other growing areas came on the market, the prices started dropping almost immediately, until by summer lettuce was selling for 23 cents to 25 cents a head, despite increasing inflationary pressures.

Where Does the Money Go?

It takes about 35 per cent of the normal retail price to plant, harvest, pack and laod the lettuce onto a boxcar in California, according to a recent study. An additional 20 per cent of the retail price goes to pay for transporting the fresh lettuce across the U.S.

Another 10 per cent of the retail price covers warehousing the lettuce and delivering it to the store. In other words, 65 per cent of the shelf price pays for getting the lettuce into the store.

In the supermarket, overhead, labor, supplies and other costs account for 25 per cent of the retail price. The remaining ten per cent of the retail price is the store's profit before taxes which takes about half of what is left.

The store's actual profit on a head of lettuce priced at 29 cents is less than 1.5 cents.

Throughout the entire chain of distribution, from field to consumer, the largest single cost factor is labor. Each operation in growing, transporting, and marketing a food product adds labor costs, and they have been rising steadily. That means that whenever a wage increase takes effect anyplace along the line of distribution, it generally has to be reflected in the retail cost.

Good Food Value

According to crop forecasts, it is expected that most fresh fruit and vegetable prices will hew more closely to normal this year. However, until the new fall crops are harvested, a severe shortage of potatoes will inevitably be reflected in

Pest control a 'must' for sufficient food

Americans have a choice when it comes to the foods they eat: they can learn to live without eating, or they can accept the fact that chemical pesticides, properly used, are essential to produce adequate quantities of high quality, uncontaminated and unblemished food.

"Our crops are under constant threat from countless millions of insects, bacteria, fungi, nematodes (a type of worm) molluscs such as snails and slugs, rodents, weeds viruses and other pests," says Bernard J. Imming, executive vice president of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. He adds that many of these pests are also harmful to man and his animals.

Experts estimate that one-third of our potential crop production each year is lost to pests. At the same time, our population is increasing and expecting more and better quality fresh produce. "No consumer today will settle willingly for scrubby, misshapen, poorly colored insect-damaged and disease-damaged produce," Imming observes.

Nearly all agriculturists agree that it is impossible to grow profitable crops of fresh fruits and vegetables of the quality demanded by consumers without the application of chemical pesticides.

Our crops today are more vulnerable to attack than were the same crops a century ago. Part of the reason is the methods needed to grow the supply of fruits and vegetables our population requires.

Plants are grown closer together than previously, and they are grown as a single crop on larger tracts of land. These and other conditions combine to provide certain insects a version of paradise. With a plentiful supply of their staple food, these harmful bugs and pests can multiply enormously in a brief time if unchecked.

Further aiding the dispersal of plant pests is modern transportation. Like the harvesting crews, the pests can "hitch" to the next field—also, they can leapfrog states on trucks and trains and hop oceans on planes. The Japanese beetle is such an example of a transoceanic import.

Some environemental groups have spoken against pesticides, citing damage to the ecology and overkill as reasons for abandoning the use of these products. The fact is, most pesticide contaimination to the environment has resulted from careless use of pesticides. Through educational programs and strict enformcement of regulations, such contamination is being reduced. Were chemical pesticides eliminated from agricultural use, more than a quarter of our population would face starvation, according to predictions made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

There is no way that the fresh fruit and vegetable industry can meet its commitments to the consumer in the foreseeable future without the use of pesticides. However, the produce undustry believes that pesticides should be used with extreme care and as directed. Further, it believes that the use of all such chemicals should continue to be strictly regulated by government agencies.

Reliable estimates say that only approximately one per cent of the chemical industry's sales are in pesticides. Sales of these products are measured in the millions of dollars annually; but they save consumers untold billions of dollars in food and health costs.

Continuing research and education, which is encouraged and supported by the produce industry, is finding more and more refined ways to control pets. The new generation of farmers is generally more selective, eliminating only the harmful pests while leaving the balance of nature otherwise undistrubed. Such pesticides are directed particularly against pests that have no natural enemies in the existing environment.

Biological control which uses living organisms to control pets has been effective in some instances, and this method is currently being more thoroughly studied. However, at this moment, biological controls effective enough to insure commercial crops are rare.

Pesticides will continue to be important servants of American consumers, helping bring not only adequate quantities but also good quality fresh fruits and vegetables to the marketplace.

Prices set by supply and demand

high prices. Supplies now are at near record lows.

A plus for the consumer, however, is that prices of fresh fruits and vegetables are more often than not, lower than other food prices. In the last few weeks, for example, prices of a good many fresh produce items were at the same level or lower than a year ago. Their prices reflect chaning supply factors much more rapidly than processed foods. Fresh produce is a good buy when supplies are normal or better. When conditions produce bumper crops, then produce is an outright bargain for the consumer.

Robbery suspect faces new count

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — James Hoskins, 24, of South Laguna Beach, already held in connection with a bank robbery here, faces arraignment on charges of robbing two banks in San Diego.

Hoskins was arrested last week by the FBI in connection with the holdup April 1 of a Crocker Bank branch on Wilshire Boulevard. He will be taken to San Diego to face charges there of holding up a branch of the Union Bank March 4 and Southern California First National Bank Jan. 25, the FBI said Monday.

SPRING.

Although we don't have much in the way of seasons, when spring arrives, we know it! The otherwise brown hills turn green overnight, and the flowering fruit trees burst into bloom.

Springtime always seems to bring back memories. When I was a child, our family looked forward to the announcement of the appearance of the massive displays of spring wildflowers. We packed a huge picnic lunch into our old Hudson and headed toward the Ridge Route to see the vivid orange-purple-pink splashed hillsides. Our picnicground was usually in the midst of a field of blue lupine.

When the masses of spring blossoms arrive in our produce warehouse, it is also a brilliant display. Aisles of lilies, hydrangeas, azaleas, stock and glads are gathered for the big spring flower sale.

Through the efforts of our produce merchandiser, Dick Gladden, Alpha Beta has become one of the world's largest flower retailers. For several years the Company has led the way in both cut and potted flowers, offering quality blossoms at low prices. He tells me that the lilies, hydrangeas and azaleas all come from the area around Half Moon Bay, the stocks are grown near Ventura, and the gladiolas come from Oceanside.

Flowers for a loved one; what better way to celebrate Easter and welcome spring?

Easter ham, asparagus and strawberries are other sure signs of spring. Our buyers have done an exceptional job in acquiring the finest at the best prices for your holiday table. I've included one of my favorite ways to use the small pieces from the shank of a baked ham and still have a "company" dinner.

Old Fashioned Baked Ham Loaf

3 c. ground ham (tightly packed)
1 c. cracker crumbs (24 single)
1 8 oz. can tomato sauce
2 eggs
1 c. milk

Method

Mix well and pack into a 9" x 5" loaf pan. Glaze with 3 tbsp. catsup. Bake at 350° for 1-1/4 hour. Serves 6. Serve with sour cream horseradish sauce, green salad, fresh asparagus, brown and serve rolls, and strawberry shortcake.

Using A Bit Of Nature To Color Your Easter Eggs

Pick sprigs of grass, fern, or dainty leaves and arrange them on a white egg. Carefully place the egg inside a clean "retired" nylon and draw nylon tight. Cut nylon, and fasten securely with a rubber band. Put into a 2 quart saucepan with the dry skins from four brown onions and cold water to cover. Heat until water just comes to boil, and simmer over low heat until eggs are deep rust color. Remove egg with a spoon, cool and remove nylon.

Beat the shortages with an old-fashioned supper

A hearty old-fashioned supper served up with traditional hot rum and cider will make your family and friends forget about energy and food shortages. Everyone is looking for menus that are not only nutritious, but substantial and economical, too.

For an informal party supper, try starting off your meal with a baked ham topped with a savory crust or mustard sauce. A cheesy macaroni ring garnished with sliced tomatoes is the only accompaniment to the entree you'll need.

Have a pitcher of hot rum and cider on the table, so that guests can help themselves during the meal, which can be served either buffet or sit-down style. Use lots of candles to conserve electricity: you'll be surprised how much nicer everyone looks and feels, too. Finish off the meal with apple-raisin pie and a second helping of cider.

HOT RUM AND CIDER PUNCH

1 quart apple cider
2 tablespoons maple syrup
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
4 ounces lemon juice
1 quart rum
lemon slices, cloves
cinnamon sticks

Heat the cider and stir in syrup and sugar. Add lemon juice and rum; garnish with lemon slices stuck with cloves. Place a cinnamon stick "stirrer" in each punch cup. Serves 12 with a few seconds.

BAKED HAM WITH SAVORY CRUST

1 ready-to-eat ham, 6 to 8 pounds
1 cup brown sugar
2 tablespoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
½ cup rum
1-3rd to ½ cup packaged plain bread crumbs

Bake or heat ham as directed on wrapping, usually about 15 minutes per pound.

Combine remaining ingredients and spread over scored fat surface of ham about 45 minutes before ham is done. Continue baking until done. Serves 12 to 14.

MUSTARD SAUCE FOR HAM

1-3rd cup vinegar
1-3rd cup rum
2 tablespoons butter
2 egg yolks
cup brown sugar
4 tablespoons prepared mustard
Water as needed

Combine ingredients and mix very well. Cook and stir over low heat until thickened. If desired, stir in a little water 1 teaspoon at a time until sauce consistency is to taste. Makes about 1 cup.

Some people prefer their baked ham unadorned with glazes or crusts. In this case, serve your ham with mustard sauce on the side. Do not use both crust and sauce with the same ham.

BAKED MACARONI AND CHEESE

1 pound elbow macaroni
1 pound sharp cheese, grated
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup flour
3 cups milk
teaspoon seasoned pepper
Salt to taste
¼ cup chopped onion

Cook and drain macaroni, turn into a large bowl. Add cheese and mix.

Melt the butter or margarine, stir in flour. Add milk and seasonings, stir until smooth. Add onions. Continue to cook and stir until very thick. Add the sauce to the macaroni and mix well. Spoon into a large greased ring mold, or a casserole. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, 35-40 minutes. If using ring mold, let stand about 20 minutes before turning out.

Serve with a garnish of sliced tomatoes dipped in French dressing, then sprinkled with basil or oregano. Makes 12 or more servings.

DEEP DISH APPLE-RAISIN PIE

Rich pastry for 1-crust pie
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) pie sliced apples, well drained
½ cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
3 tablespoons white or dark rum
1-3rd cup heavy cream
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) raisin pie filling
1 egg yolk

Prepare pastry from your favorite recipe and refrigerate until ready to use. Turn the well-drained apples into a bowl and toss with mixed sugar, flour and spices. Add the rum and cream and mix well. Turn into a buttered shallow 2-quart casserole. Spread the raisin pie filling over the apple filling.

Roll out the pastry and fit over top of casserole. Flute edge. Make a few vents in crust using point of paring knife. Brush the crust with the egg yolk beaten with 1 tablespoon rum.

Bake in a preheated hot oven, 400 degrees, about 1 hour, or until crust is golden and apple filling tender. Serve warm with ice cream, pour cream, or plain as desired. Also good with rum hard sauce or with cheese. Makes 8 servings.

Woman's magazine picks top recipes

Frozen Banana Velvet made with Dole bananas is the top winner in the Woman's Day Easy-Does-It Recipe Contest.

The winner, Mrs. Margaret R. Weiss of Elkhart, Ind., will be awarded the "best in contest" prize of $6,000 plus the "best in category" prize of $1,000.

The contest invited readers to create easy-to-do dishes using one of the five participating companies' products. The top winner in each of the five categories will receive $1,000; the runner-up in each category receives a five-piece set of Samsonite ActionPak luggage.

All finalists in the contest were tested in the Woman's Day kitchens and the winners were selected by Home Economists Unlimited.

Recipes were judged on the basis of originality, appetite appeal and ease of preparation. Nearly 10,000 entries were received.

Following is a list of the top winners in each of the other categories:

Mrs. Edward Hake of Cincinnati, Ohio, for Hearty and Hot Meat Dip, made with Heinz 57 Steak Sauce.

Mrs. Mary Swan Bolliger of Abilene, Kan., for Wham-Span Pie, made with Spam.

Mrs. Jean W. Sanderson of Leawood, Kan., for Onion Lovers Treat, made with Holland House Cooking Wine.

Mrs. Sarah Paul of Philadelphia, Penn., for Skillet Sausage and Pears, made with Swift's Brown and Serve Sausage.

FROZEN BANANA VELVET

2 cups mashed ripe bananas
1½ cups buttermilk
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 9-ounce container whipped topping

Mix mashed bananas, buttermilk, sugar and vanilla. Freeze until slightly thickened. Fold in topping. Return to freezer.

HEARTY AND HOT MEAT DIP

1 medium onion, chopped
1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
½ pound sliced fresh mushrooms

Brown these 4 ingredients together over medium temperature in an electric skillet, until the meat is no longer red. Reduce to simmer. Add:

1 6-ounce can tomato paste
½ can consumme (with gelatin)
½ teaspoon celery salt
1 tablespoon steak sauce
1 8-ounce package cream cheese
Salt and pepper to taste

Blend together at lowest heat until cheese melts and mixture begins to bubble. Serve hot in chafing dish as dip for chips, Doritos, French bread, rye sticks or vegetables.

May be frozen and reheated.

WHAM—SPAM PIE

1½ cups finely crushed onion crackers
6 tablespoons butter
1 can (12-ounce size) canned meat, chop one-half and puree other half (blender may be used if desired)
3 eggs
1 cup evaporated milk
¼ to ½ teaspoon marjoram
1 can shredded sharp cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons toasted slivered almonds.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Use deep 9-inch pie pan. Melt butter in the pie pan. Add cracker crumbs and mix thoroughly. Press crumbs into bottom and sides of pie pan evenly and firmly. Bake for 5 minutes at 375 degrees. Prepare filling by mixing eggs, milk, and marjoram together thoroughly (use blender for this if it has been used for meat preparation); add pureed meat. Add cheese evenly to baked crust, then chopped meat, then filling. Sprinkle almonds over top of pie. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 minutes. Reduce temperature to 325 degrees and bake another 15 minutes or until lightly browned and firm.

ONION LOVERS TREAT

8 medium size onions (yellow or white)
½ stick butter
½ cup cooking sherry
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Slice onions and separate into rings. Melt butter and saute in large skillet until onions are soft. Add sherry and saute for 3 minutes. Sprinkle Parmesan cheese over all and serve.

SKILLET SAUSAGE AND PEARS

2 packages (8-ounce size) brown and serve sausage
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 cup water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon honey
1 tablespoon brown sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
3 large fresh pears
2 teaspoons cornstarch

Brown sausages in skillet; remove. Melt butter, combine with water, lemon juice, honey, brown sugar, cinnamon and salt. Bring to simmering. Pare, halve and core pears. Add fruit to pan and cook, covered, 5 minutes; turn and cook 5 minutes longer. Blend cornstarch with 1 teaspoon water; stir into pan liquid. Add sausages and simmer 2 or 3 minutes until heated and sauce thickens.

Study shows half who win can't collect

NEW YORK (UPI) — Half of the people who win judgments in New York City's small claims courts are unable to collect their money, according to a study by the Community Service Society.

CSS said in the study published Monday that the winner of a small claims case is expected to collect his own money. If he seeks the assistance of the sheriff's office or the city marshals, he must put down a $10 deposit which is not returned unless the money is collected.

"It is a hollow victory to obtain a fair hearing if, after winning his case, the person can't collect his money," said CSS General Director Alvin L. Schorr. "Weak enforcement drastically reduces the effectiveness of the small claims courts."

S.F. supervisors urge repeal of penny sales tax

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A resolution urging the state to repeal the new one-cent sales tax immediately was approved by the Board of Supervisors Monday.

A resolution by Supervisor Robert Mendelsohn, who also is a candidate for State Controller, was approved unanimously.

"It's time the legislature stopped picking the pockets of the people who can afford it least," Mendelsohn said. "If new funds are needed—and I have my doubts about that—they should re-examine the corporate income tax structure and plug the loopholes that cost the treasury more than $300 million a year."

The state sales tax was raised by one cent April 1 to 6 cents per dollar.

Try a rice crust for pizza-making

For care-free pizza-making, try one with a rice crust! It's not that the traditional bread crust isn't good, but yeast breads take a long time to make, require special techniques in shaping, and sometimes puff into irregular bubbles.

When a rice crust is substituted, you eliminate any such worries. And, even more important in these days of diminishing dollar values, your rice crust provides more nutrition than the traditional yeast bread base.

Rice pizza gets its goodness from three sources: eggs, cheese and rice. Baked together, these nutritious ingredients emerge as a tender base for your favorite pizza toppings. And so firm you can even pick up and eat by hand!

With its rice crust, this pizza provides added protein value and you can serve six entree wedges or eight smaller cuts for snacks.

RICE PIZZA

3 cups cooked rice
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup grated Mozzarella cheese

Topping

2 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce
½ teaspoon each oregano, basil, garlic powder, and salt
1 cup grated Mozzarella cheese
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

To make crust, combine rice, eggs, and cheese. Press firmly into a 12-inch greased pizza pan or two 9-inch pie pans by spreading evenly with a spatula. Bake at 450 degrees for 20 minutes. For the topping, combine tomato sauce and seasonings. Spread evenly over rice crust. Top with Mozzarella and Parmesan cheeses. Bake 10 minutes longer. To serve, cut in wedges. Makes 6 servings.

QUICK RICE PIZZA. Use a canned or bottled pizza sauce or spaghetti sauce for the topping.

BEST LEFTOVER MEAL OF ALL. Dice any leftover meat or seafood and sprinkle on pizza before adding cheese topping. If it doesn't look like enough topping, add a few onion rings, mushrooms, and diced green pepper, too.

PIZZA PARTY FOR A RAINY DAY. You'll be surprised at the number of different age groups that will enjoy this one. Each person will need a greased baking sheet or pie pan. From a central bowl of the rice-cheese-egg mixture, direct each to ladle some onto his individual baking sheet or pan. This mixture can be spread into any number of shapes with a push of a spoon or rubber spatula. As the contestants decide that their design is ready, the crust can be prebaked and then returned for sauces and topping. Here enters the second area for creativity! Olives, onion rings, green pepper pieces, pepperonio slices, etc. can be placed for yes, ear, nose, mouth or whatever. Judging comes after final baking.

Art school coed missing in canyon

NEWHALL (UPI) — A group of students joined the search Monday by sheriff's deputies for an art school coed who disappeared last week when she took her easel and paints into the rough Pico Canyon area west of here.

Constance Marsh, 21, a student at the California Institute of Arts in Valencia, drove her late model Fiat up a dirt road into the canyon. Sheriff's deputies found the car abandoned.

Her roommate reported the girl missing Thursday afternoon. Miss Marsh was last seen at 6 a.m. Wednesday.

She was described as being 5 feet, 2 inches tall, 110 pounds, with blue eyes and long brown hair

Salmon is still affordable luxury

Canned salmon is back on grocers' shelf in limited quantity. It has increased rather alarmingly in price, but what food product hasn't? There are few protein foods today which do not fall into the luxury category when it comes to the price tag. But comparatively speaking, for appealing flavor and many other important qualities that canned salmon offers, it remains an exceedingly good buy for not only a family stand-by, but for an elegant gourmet food which can be served with confidence to guests.

Canned salmon offers variety in your diet, and extra nutrition, the kind of nutrition that experts get very serious about. It is an excellent source of complete, easily digested protein, has desirable unsaturated fatty acids and a low salt content. It's an important natural food product to remember in menu-planning, for the salmon that goes into each can is ocean-fresh. It is cooked in its own natural juices, with nothing added but a pinch of salt. It combines well with most other foods, vegetables and diary products, loving a pinch of spice, a dash of a herb, and it can be combined with inexpensive filler-foods without fear of dissipating its flavor or nutritional contributions. It lends character and color to an infinite variety of dishes from salads to loaves, croquettes, and casseroles.

Be sure to use the liquid in the can, for it contains important vitamins and minerals, and adds additional flavor accent to any dish.

Salmon may be more expensive than it used to be, but try it once again in these cutlet croquettes, and you'll agree it tastes like a million!

SALMON CUTLETS SUPREME

¼ pound fresh mushrooms, finely chopped
1 teaspoon minced onion
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups hot riced potatoes
7 ¾-ounce can salmon
Salt to taste
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
⅛ teaspoon mace or nutmeg
Flour
1 egg lightly beaten with 1 tablespoon milk
Fine dry bread crumbs or cornflake crumbs

In skillet saute mushrooms and onion in butter for 5 minutes, or until mushrooms are tender and most of the liquid has evaporated. Combine the mushroom mixture with the potatoes, the canned salmon, including liquid, salt, cayenne and mace or nutmeg. Chill thoroughly.

When ready to cook, carefully shape the mixture into flat cutlet-shaped croquettes. Coat the cutlets with flour and brush thoroughly with the egg beaten with the milk. Coat well with crumbs.

Pan fry the cutlets in ½ inch hot oil for 2 to 3 minutes on each side, or until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper and serve hot garnished with lemon slices and parsley.

Price in work-hours of some items falls

In spite of skyrocketing prices since 1968, it now takes less time at work for the typical factory worker to earn enough money to buy many of his favorite grocery products. According to data from the U.S. Dapartments of Labor, Commerce and Health, Education and Welfare, because take-home pay has risen faster than prices, many items are actually proportionately lower in price. These four items were among a list of fourteen household costs that have decreased or stayed even, as reported in the December issue of U.S. News and World Report:

. . . . It takes 20 per cent less time today than in 1968 to earn the money to buy a dozen oranges.

. . . . A large tube of toothpaste takes 42 per cent less time to earn.

. . . . A pound of white bread and a half gallon of milk take the same amount of work time today as in 1968.

Listed in the same story was a comparable list of goods and services that spiraled in price and have forced consumers to tighten their belts. Actually, this tightening of belts has a very positive aspect.

For example, a Virginia housewife "has taken to saving leftover meat and combining it with leavings from three or four days to make a meal." Think of all the money squandered in thrown-away leftovers prior to her sharpened awareness.

In the U.S. News and World Report a Washington, D.C., woman was quoted: "I can't gain weight because if I grow out of my clothes, I'm in trouble." She might well have added that her figure and health are in less trouble than her budget by maintaining her normal weight.

A Bedouin belly-dancing teacher in San Francisco suggested this solution: Get land and produce your own food — a seemingly simple solution to a teacher of belly-dancing, but people who have tried it find that when all the costs are added, it's cheaper to buy food in the marketplace.

John M. Van Horn, of Sunkist Growers, Inc., strongly disagrees with the belly dancer's remedy. He should know, because he's vice president in charge of Field Services and Research and Development for the marketing cooperative which represents over 8,000 citrus growers in the states of California and Arizona. Van Horn says that no home grower can compete price-wise or guality-wise with the expertise of professional growers. "New developments in citriculture are enabling grower-members of Sunkist to produce high quality fruit at a proportionately lower cost than at any time in history." Considering this, it seems wise to leave certain things to the experts — belly-dancing to the San Francisco teacher and the production of high quality produce to the agricultural experts.

The added expertise of Western growers is paying off this season with a fine crop of navel oranges. They are referring to it as a vintage crop, hich means the fruit is of excellent quality with delicious flavor and lots of juice. Remember that navel oranges are the seedless variety, sometimes called "eating oranges." You can tell it's a navel orange by the navel formation opposite the stem end. It's the perfect mid-winter snack.

There is an abundance of western navel oranges in your market. They will continue through the first part of May.

Southern California lemon growers have produced "one of the best looking and balanced lemon crops in recent seasons" according to Ted J. Matuska, Lemon Sales Manager, Sunkist Growers, Inc. That means there will be a variety of popular sizes to meet your total lemon needs during the winter months and throughout the summer.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Unmarried bliss

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I've been living with this man for eight months and we have almost as many fights as we would if we were married. We both know we have short fuses, and this is one of the many reasons we decided to keep our lives flexible and unfettered. We don't seem to have solved much, though, because we can't ever settle any of our battles. They just go on and on. Though we both have separate financial accounts, we're always arguing about money and who spent how much for what. One of the big arguments is about how much each of us spends for liquor when it is not evenly shared. We're both fairly heavy drinkers and our liquor bills can be enormous.

My mother adds to the problem. She feels he should be paying for more than half of the expenses because, as she says, he's not the one who's going to get pregnant if there's an accident and he should therefore have greater financial responsibility. He feels we should split everything equally and he won't change his mind. — J. O.

Dear J. O.: Living with another person is a kind of marriage even though there is no legal bond. Unmarried couples who live together for any period of time soon discover that there are often just as many quarrels, just as many other problems as there would be in a formal marriage. Living together implies sharing of responsibilities — and bills.

Forming a happy union also requires a certain amount of maturity in both partners. One facet of maturity is the ability to express irritation and anger in a constructive way that leads to positive results. If you keep repeating the same old battles, you both need to learn how to quarrel constructively, especially so if either of you has a quick temper. There's nothing wrong with differences of opinion, provided anger doesn't stifle your ability to express the nature of the problem and its possible solution.

Money is the number one cause of husband-wife arguments so it's not surprising that you and your partner find it a source of contention. The big factor is not how much money, but how well partners agree on how to use it.

Heavy drinking may be adding to your troubles. You might enjoy your relationship more if you both consumed less. Analyze why each of you feels the need to drink so much. You both may be trying to escape problems or guilts via alcohol. If you drank less, your dispositions might improve and you might have less inclination to quarrel.

Your mother's suggestion doesn't seem realistic in light of the pill. While reliable methods of birth control have given women new freedom, they have also imposed new responsibilities.

Deciding how your money is pooled might best be determined by earning power. If you are earning more, you might contribute more. If his salary is higher, it seems only fair that he should add a little extra.

Sharing money and material possessions are problems you will have to live with for the rest of your lives, whether you live with each other or new partners.

It would be wise for you both to sit down and make a serious analysis of your problems now. They can be solved, but it will require patience, effort and discipline from both of you. You might begin by making a budget and sticking to it unless you both agree to make alterations.

Discretion

Only the leanest figures can wear a leotard instead of a blouse with a pair of slacks. If you want to make sure you are in that category try this simple test. Lightly pinch the skin on your side between your thumb and forefinger. If you grab more than an inch of fat — don't wear the leotard

Fleming and Sanders vows are exchanged

Newlywed Mr. and Mrs. David Lee Fleming were honored at a reception at the First Church of God in Pomona.

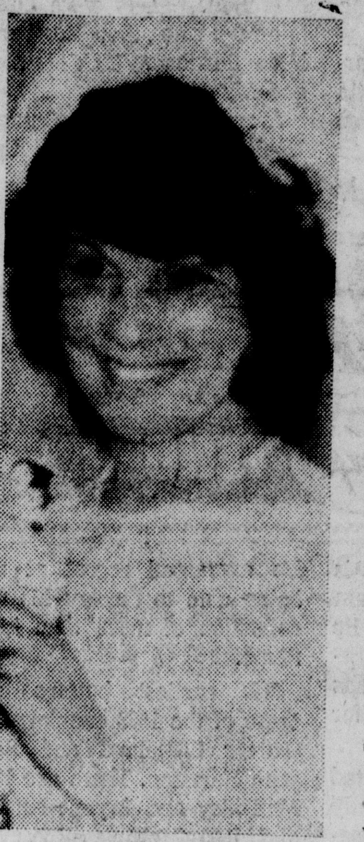
Mr. Fleming and the former Deborah Sanders were married at the Temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Elder George C. Christenson officiated at the double-ring rites which united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H.J. Sanders of Idaho Falls and the son of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Fleming of Pomona.

The bride's sister, Miss Kathleen Sanders of El Monte, was maid of honor. Kenneth Sanders, brother of the bride, was best man.

A reception at the Idaho Falls LDS hall honored the newlyweds.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming will make their home in Auburn.



MRS. DAVID FLEMING

Amy Vanderbilt

Teen drinkers

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: My husband died from alchoholism, and now my sons and daughters are coming into their teens, not old enough yet to drink officially, but I'm sure they have been experimenting with beer and wine at least.

"The sad example of their father doesn't seem to deter them. They seem to think that they can 'handle' it. I am sure they won't be able to and would like to do everything I can to discourage them from further experimentation. I feel they are in a high-risk group and that even so-called social drinking is not for them. How can I help? —Mrs. T.J., Douglaston, N.Y."

A new booklet called "Preventing Alcoholism," published by the Christopher D. Smithers Foundation (Dept. A, 41 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022—$1) has a section on this very subject.

"Research," the booklet says, "strongly indicates that alcoholism runs noticeably in certain families, to the extent that approximately 50 per cent of all alchoholic men and women state that either a parent, a brother, a sister or a grandparent became a victim of this illness in the past.

"This sensitivity to the drug, alcohol, is also in line with notable research in recent years by biochemists and pharmacologists. These scientists in their investigations of heredity factors inherent in the genes and enzymes of the human body in many instances have found an extreme sensitivity to the effects of ingested alcohol in succeeding generations of the same family bloodlines."

"Thus it seems necessary," the booklet says, "to especially emphasize caution in drinking—if they so choose—among younger people from this high-risk group."

I suggest that you send for this authoritative booklet.

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: My husband's associate and his wife have his mother living with them. On first meeting, it is obvious she is a dominant force and frankly overpowering at times. We would like to invite the couple to join us at times. Is it necessary to always include the mother in our invitations? If invited, I am sure she would accept. —Mrs. T.C., Albany, N.Y."

Especially as she seems to be a dominant force, I'm sure this couple would greatly appreciate an invitation for the two of them. As this will undoubtedly be considered business entertaining for you, the mother should not expect to be invited. She must have her own social interests.

(Miss Amy Vanderbilt welcomes your post cards and strives to answer all those of general interest in her column. Send your questions and comments to Miss Vanderbilt in care of Progress-Bulletin.)

Home preparation

If you like to experiment with making your own cosmetics at home, remember these two things. Try not to make too much of an experimental batch. If it turns out unsuccessfully, your natural, sometimes expensive, ingredients, will be wasted. Also, your homemade cosmetics won't have the preservatives that commercially prepared ones do and bacteria will grow if they are kept too long.

Depression Glass group sets display

Pat Carrado and Virginia Wagner will be hostesses for the Thursday meeting of the Montclair Depression Glass Society.

The 7:30 p.m. meeting will be at the Montclair Public Library.

As their chosen pattern for the month they will display a collection of Crystal Manhattan Depression glassware. Table decorations will feature springtime colors. There will also be a display of "Dolphin Collectibles."

Graduation dance set Saturday

The Star Steppers Square Dance Club will celebrate the graduation of its class at a Saturday evening dance at Washington Park Clubhouse.

All square dancers are invited to the 8 p.m. dance to be called by Howard McCreery.

Tom Miller will be the caller for the May 11 dance and Lou Sperling will call for dancing on June 8 at Washington Park. On Nov. 9, the club will celebrate its 13th anniversary with Larry McBee at the mike.

Debra Bartz is wed in Ontario ceremony

Miss Debra Ann Bartz and Jeffrey Michael Ketchum were united in marriage in a Saturday afternoon ceremony at the First United Methodist Church of Ontario.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bartz of Pomona was given in marriage by her father when she recited vows with the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ketchum of Upland.

The Rev. Marshall Ketchum performed the double-ring rites.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin with a lace bodice. The short bell sleeves were trimmed with lace and three rows of lace bordered the skirt. A headpiece of white flowers and pearls held the cathedral-length veil.

Blue and yellow daisy mums, white carnations and pink baby roses were carried by the bride.

Mrs. Cathy Rice was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Sue Compton, Miss Ginny Winter, Miss Julie Ketchum, Mrs. Helen Vander Heuvel and Mrs. Rosemarie Allred.

Loren Vander Heuvel was best man. Ushers were Louie Mercurio, Ken Ketchum, Mike Furlone, Rick Larned and Bill Allred.

A reception at the Ontario Eagles Club honored the newlyweds.

Mr. and Mrs. Ketchum will reside in Ontario.

Yesterday's Discards-- TODAY'S TREASURES

by Jean Barnes

Visiting with Barry Paris is like receiving a short cram course in American history. He is an enthusiastic and knowledgeable "teacher" who has collected political buttons for more than 10 years.

His collection started inadvertently. "My family was active in the 1960 Kennedy campaign in Pennsylvania and I acquired a lot of things from that election." By 1964, Barry had relocated in Kansas and his interest was captured by "good old Alf Landon." He had met Landon on several occasions and has many specimens from the 1936 Landon campaign.

On trips between Kansas and the East Coast, Barry made it a standard practice to stop at junk shops and antique stores to look for political memorabilia. He usually was successful and his collection grew.

That was in the days when people didn't collect it and it was easy to find. He explained that he belongs to the American Political Items Collectors. "When I joined I was member No. 800. Now there are 9,000 and it is difficult to get anything from campaigns earlier than the forties."

Paris, a young bachelor, is publisher of the Prairie Journal, a weekly newspaper in Wichita, Kans. For our visit he had brought a third of his collection to his office His buttons are mounted on boards, packed in small boxes or encased in plastic sleeves.

He expressed regret at not being able to display his full collection of more than 1,500 items.

His earliest buttons are those of the 1888 campaign of Grover Cleveland and Benjaim Harrison. There are 1896 McKinley and Bryant buttons and 1900 McKinley-Roosevelt and Bryant buttons.

"I've got a lot of real kitchie TR buttons," he said, holding up a teddy bear stickpin. "If you know what you're looking for you can find things like this."

Pointing to another button he said, "This poor guy down here is Alto B. Parker, a Democrat running against Teddy Roosevelt. They knew there wasn't any chance that he would win so they didn't campaign for him. As a result there are hardly any campaign items for him."

He said that Andrew Jackson was the first president to campaign publicly. Beginning with Quincy Adams, campaigns were more lively. Campaign ribbons were used during the years between Jackson and the advent of celluloid buttons in 1896. Very few ribbons have survived the years, he added.

His advice to beginners?

"Familiarize yourself with the candidiates, especially the losers. It's traditionally true that there were many more political items made for the winning candidates than for the losing ones"

For Helen Thomas

It's a ringside seat on history

WASHINGTON, D. C. (MW) — "Miss Thomas, I believe you're first — as usual," said the President of the United States, singling out the small dark-haired woman from the rest of the reporters noisily vying for his attention.

At 53, Helen Thomas of United Press International is at her professional peak, no longer a "non-entity" writing for a wire service. And although she prides herself on covering "the straight story, the plain facts" on her White House post, it was "soft news" — the Martha Mitchell midnight phone calls and the "pants incident" that made her known by the public.

Talking with this warm, friendly woman, it's easy to see why the wife of the former attorney general would seek her sympathetic ear. Or why President Nixon would kiddingly chide Helen Thomas for wearing slacks instead of skirts.

"The President got a bad rap on that. He was just trying to be friendly to the press. I didn't take offense but a lot of women in the country did. In my job, jumping on and off helicopters, running to planes with your tape recorder, typewriter, papers and bags — you have to have pants in your wardrobe."

Covering the White House from the Kennedy years ("I got in the back door by writing about Jackie and the kids") through the present administration, gives her "a ring-side seat on history," marvels Helen Thomas. "You're on call all the time — like a doctor. You live the life the President leads."

In 1971 her job took her to China and "the greatest story I ever covered. It was like landing on the moon. Everything was new and everything was news.

"Time was short. I resented even the two or three hours a night I was sleeping because I thought this was once in a lifetime — I could always sleep later. My one regret was I didn't get to the hotel hairdresser which was open 24 hours a day. That's an experience I didn't have — and I needed it!"

Women reporters are very much aware of the way they look, says this correspondent who favors simple attractive clothes and lots of chunky gold bracelets on both wrists. But such things take a back seat when it comes to getting her stories. "You may not seem feminine elbowing your way to the front or running to the phone, but you've got to be first. That's the name of the game for a wire service," she exclaims.

"I try to be aggressive. And when I'm not . . ." she laughs, "I tell myself, Helen, you've got to be more aggressive!"

In October 1971, Helen Thomas married her opposite number at the White House, Douglas Cornell of the rival Associated Press wire service. "I married late in life — to put it mildly!" Before that journalism had been her first love. "I never really wanted to get married. But I didn't have that many opportunities either. So it was no big conflict!"

Cornell, 68, is now retired. He spends his time reading and shopping for family groceries. They usually eat together ("Doug complains I cook with too many spices"), unless she must cover a gala in evening clothes with her constant accessories — a pad and pencil.

Although Helen Thomas won't express herself politically ("UPI doesn't pay me for my opinions"), she believes her job is "to keep the American people informed. If they aren't, we'll live in a runaway country. It's the responsibility of the press to maintain eternal vigilance."

Midwest cops, truckers waging electronic war

CHICAGO (UPI) — In Illinois, and perhaps elsewhere, the police are having trouble with truckers who use short wave radio equipment to spread speed trap warnings.

Illinois authorities have begun to fight back, and if things go the way they often do it won't be long before the truckers fight back even harder and the whole affair may get escalated into a highly uncivil war.

As it stands now, the state highway patrolmen rarely can get close enough to a speeding truck to cite the driver for breaking the law. And violations of the speed limit may be at a record high, simply because the speed limit is so low—55 miles per hour at the most.

Some of these long-distance truck drivers don't even go that slow to change a tire. Energy crisis or not, they've been passing everything that moves below 80.

This is especially true on the Interstates. A truck driver headed south can warn those headed north about troopers just ahead. They'll broadcast something like, "Red Rat, this is Cute Sam saying boy in blue two miles ahead of you."

These radio warnings were perfected during the recent truck boycotts and they've been so effective the boss troopers don't have to get out anymore to see where their men are— they just monitor the truckers. Whether this situation has annoyed or pleased the troopers is speculative but it has irritated the motorists who don't have short-wave sets and who get caught by the troopers and passed by the truckers.

Motorists sometimes vote and this fact may have inspired activity on the part of Illinois officials, both Republican and Democrat. They've decided to find out if the Federal Communications Commission's rules permit the truckers to use the public air waves to tell each other where the cops are hiding.

Assuming normal mail delivery, the FCC lawyers in Washington should get the request for information next fall and there will be extensive exploration of law books to find out if, indeed, the truckers are broadcasting illegally. If the lawyers say they are, the question then—and possibly now—is: "What can be done"

The answer is available from at least three decades of military operations: It is no trick to jam a frequency.

Each trooper could be supplied with electronic equipment that would prevent the speeding trucker from receiving a shortwave warning from another trucker. Those in charge of hiring troopers may wish to put a radioman in each squad car.

But the truckers will not be left to the mercy of the lawmen. There also is available equipment that jams the jammers. This, of course, requires the services of a radioman in each truck. There could be a jurisdictional dispute as to which union he should belong to, but once that's settled the way is clear for more vigorous warfare.

For instance, did you know that a heat-seeking missile can be mounted on top of a motor vehicle? Simply by pressing a button the missile will go right up a tail pipe and whooommmmmm!

Aramco board OKs expansion in oil output

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A plan to expand oil production in Saudi Arabia from nine million barrels a day to 11 million has been approved by the board of directors of the ArabianAmerican Oil Co., (Aramco) a spokesman for Standard Oil of California said Monday.

The spokesman, who said the agreement was reached during a secret meeting of the Aramco board here this weekend, pointed out the agreement does not mean the actual oil production would increase that much. The Saudi government has the power to determine actual production levels.

Aramco is composed of Standard, Exxon, Texaco, Mobil and the Saudi Arabia government.

The announcement indicates the American companies plan to increase their investment in Saudi Arabia. The country sought several years ago to increase Aramco's production but was rebuffed. The Arab embargo has left the companies with little negotiating power, however, the spokesman said.

Shortage of jelly beans?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jelly beans, a traditional Easter candy, will be in short supply this year, according to R.E. Ferguson of the F.W. Woolworth Co.

He said Monday that the scarcity is due to difficulties manufacturers are having with the rise in the cost of sugar, syrup flavoring and packaging of the candy.

Letters 'O.N.T.'

The letters "O.N.T." on spools of thread manufactured by the Coats and Clark Company date back to the company's advertisement of "Our New Thread," a more durable thread which could be used in the new sewing machines being marketed.

MANAGEMENT

$500 WEEK
4 HRS. A DAY
NEW CAD. FURN.

YOU'VE READ RIDICULOUS ADS LIKE THIS BEFORE

How ever, we are only half kidding. Many of our management people drive Cadillacs and do make considerably more than $500 a week.

We are part of 1 of the nation's largest holding companies with interests in hotels, import and export, steel, printing, insurance, cable TV and the largest merchandizing mart west of Chicago. Our company has been in business since 1928.

The parent company has given us unlimited financing for the purpose of hiring and training young men and women, to assume management positions as soon as they can qualify. Compensation averages $14,750 per year — plus bonuses and good fringe benefits.

Right now we need 6 men or women to help us manage our expanding chain of offices in the Upland-Ontario areas. If you are a man or a woman of integrity, bondable and have a good automobile, call for an interview. You look us over — We'll look you over — we'll see where we go from there.

Stumping for GOP candidate

Nixon given rousing Michigan welcome in test of popularity

BAD AXE, Mich. (UPI) — President Nixon flew to Michigan's "Thumb" area today for his first political campaigning since 1972, a rural motorcade in behalf of a Republican congressional hopeful that also was a test of his own Watergate-scarred popularity.

The President's plane put down at the Tri-City Airport near Saginaw 80 miles northwest of Detroit at the start of a fast-moving visit. Some of the 11 towns on the agenda for his 4½ hour visit are so small they do not even appear on state maps.

The President's bulletproof, bubble-top limousine was also flown from Washington for him to use in his tour of Michigan's 8th Congressional District to campaign for James M. Sparling Jr. who is facing Democrat Robert Traxler in a special election April 16.

The district has been a strong Republican area and Sparling is seeking to keep the seat in GOP hands. The seat was vacated when Republican James Harvey, who served since 1961, resigned to accept appointment as a U.S. district judge.

More than 5,000 persons, many of them school children on a special holiday, were among the airport welcoming crowd who turned out in sunny weather with the temperature in the 40s.

Signs attacking and supporting the President were in ample evidence. They included a 25-foot banner reading "God Love Nixon" and another reading "Nixon is the Nation's No. 1 Crook."

The welcoming committee at Tri-City Airport included Republican Gov. William G. Milliken and Sparling, but Milliken did not join Nixon in the motorcade. Instead he decided to go ahead with plans to attend a meeting in Toronto on water pollution.

In brief remarks on his arrival at Tri-City Airport, Nixon assailed what he called "the bottleneck in Congress" for not supporting his programs and called for the election of people who will work with him, such as Sparling.

Nixon mingled with members of five high school marching bands among the welcomers and after 33 minutes, boarded a helicopter and flew to Bad Axe.

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., the minority whip, also greeted the President. Griffin has thrown his political weight behind the Sparling campaign in recent days and his staff members have been in the district helping to prepare for the presidential swing.

Nixon appeared in a jaunty mood as he boarded his plane at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., for the 90-minute flight to Michigan. He was accompanied by top aides, a speech writer, two White House physicians but not wife Pat, a usual companion. An aide said Michigan was a testing ground for Nixon and it was not necessary for the first lady's presence.

1 dead, 8 missing in ship blast

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Greek oil tanker exploded at dockside while unloading its cargo Tuesday night, killing one crewman and leaving eight other persons missing.

Thirteen crewmembers, including a woman, and a pier guard were injured in the explosion which left the 650-foot tanker Elias, chartered to the Atlantic Richfield Oil Co. (ARCO), looking like "a twisted beer can."

The Elias was pumping off its cargo of Venezuelan crude oil at ARCO's Fort Mifflin depot when the center section of the ship exploded shortly before 10 p.m.

After the explosion the ship broke into two burning sections and a witness said "it looks like a twisted beer can."

The Coast Guard today launched air and river search efforts to locate five crewmen and a woman and two children —the latter three visitors to the ship—reported missing following the blast and fire. Some of the missing were feared still aboard the tanker which settled to the bottom of the Delaware River about one mile south of the Philadelphia Naval Yard.

The dead crewman, found near the concrete and steel dock, had not been identified. He was burned beyond recognition, police said.

Three of the injured crewmen and the pier guard were reported in critical condition. Three others were admitted to city hospitals with lesser injuries and the balance of the injured were treated and released.

The Coast Guard said 14 members of the tanker's 33-man crew were on shore leave at the time of the explosion.

Philadelphia fire officials said cause of the blast was still undetermined. Firefighters, who brought the flames under control just before midnight, were still on the scene at daybreak hosing down the partially submerged tanker.

Stephen Saliga, 35, a trainee cook who was asleep in a block house 500 feet from the ship when the explosion occurred, said the force of the blast blew in the windows and caved in the roof.

"I was in Vietnam for 18 months and never saw anything like this," he said. "I'm just glad to be alive."

A priest who speaks Greek was able to talk to one of the injured crewmen and quoted him as saying:

"I was asleep and then everything happened. We shinnied down a rope to get to the dock, but it burned through and we fell into the water.

Damage $40,000

Arson suspected in Covina school fires

COVINA — Fire officials are investigating the possibility of arson in fires that heavily damaged portions of Northview High School and Valencia Elementary School early this morning.

Damage to the boys shower and locker room in the Northview High gym, 1016 W. Cypress St., was estimated at $30,000 in equipment and structure. That fire, which broke out about 2:30 a.m., was spotted by a passing police unit. Firemen were able to contain the blaze within 10 minutes of their arrival, preventing a total loss.

The 20 by 14 foot room contained athletic equipment, linen and student lockers.

The second fire at nearby Valencia Elementary, 758 W. Grondahl St., started about 4 a.m. in two adjoining sixth grade classrooms. A call from a passing motorist enabled firemen to contain the blaze within 15 minutes.

Damage to walls, cabinetry and portions of the attic and roof was estimated in the $8,000 to $10,000 range.

Fire officials said both fires were incendiary in nature. Although there is no hard evidence of arson, the fact that both schools were within a mile of each other and were secured led to suspicions of arson. There was also no evidence of forced entry at either school.

Asst. Fire Chief Carl R. Johnson said the Valencia fire apparently started in a cabinet where several Sterno cans were found along with what appeared to be chemistry equipment.

The location of the start of the Northview blaze has not been pinpointed yet, he said.

Covina Valley Unified School District Supt. Erwin Jones said he suspected vandalism in both fires. He said there have been no recent labor disputes, gang or racial problems that might have provided a motive for either fire.

Both fires "were very surprising," he said, since the district has had no major fires in four to five years.

White House says panel to get additional material

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House says additional material requested by the House Judiciary Committee will be provided for its impeachment inquiry by the end of the month. Rep. Peter Rodino, DN.J., committee chairman, says it may be the end of June before there is a report.

President Nixon, through his attorney, sent word to Capitol Hill Tuesday that a review is under way of 41 additional tape recordings requested by the committee and should be completed by the end of the congressional Easter recess which runs to April 22.

At that time, the White House said it will furnish additional material, but it did not say how much, if any, of the extra information would be turned over. Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Tuesday the White House will "respond affimatively to all requests for tapes and other material which it considers relevant."

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said today the time required to listen to the tapes would delay any committee action. He said the average length of each tape is eight hours and it would require 336 hours of listening time to go through the tapes requested by the committee.

Rodino said the full House likely will get the committee report late in June. "We hope in the first week of May to take up the evidence concerning impeachment," Rodino said. "We may have to call other witnesses.

"I think it will be a matter of maybe a month or five weeks or so before we complete the committee work. So I hope some time in late June it will be ready to go to the House. But we are going to do it as expeditiously as we possibly can."

Scott said one of the President's lawyers has been assigned to monitor the tapes but added that he has "suggested that they assign more people to the task."

To illustrate the time consuming chore, Scott said it took one person a full day to decipher only six minutes of one tape. He said it took that long "to find out who was saying what to whom."

Supervisors now mulling $2.4 million proposal for commuter train services

LOS ANGELES — The Board of Supervisors is considering a $2.4 million proposal to provide commuter trains on existing tracks between San Bernardino and Los Angeles.

The trains, to run three times a day on the Santa Fe tracks, would have about 10 interim stops, including those at Upland, Claremont, Pomona and Glendora.

The proposal is part of a package presented to the board Tuesday by Fifth District Supervisor Baxter Ward. The plan also includes three runs daily between Los Angeles and San Diego.

Ward urged the board to underwrite a $2.4 million annual expense for the operation of the commuter service—$1,095,000 a year for the San Bernardino line, and $939,000 a year for the San Diego run.

In addition, the county also would have to find, or buy, locomotives and coaches to be used in the service.

Ward said he was gathering enough information to present this plan to the rest of the supervisors for action in two weeks.

The plan itself is not new. It is patterned after one first proposed last year by the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG). Similar plans also have been suggested by State Sen. Ruben Ayala of Chino when he was chairman of the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors and Montclair Mayor Harold Hayes.

What makes it significant at this time is that it is now being sponsored by a Los Angeles county supervisor and that money may be available for financing it through the county's revenue-sharing funds.

Although the trains, making the run between Pomona and Los Angeles in 59 minutes, are not expected to save much time over the buses, Ward pointed out that they would be more comfortable in that passengers would be able to walk around.

He said the trains would not replace the buses operated by the Southern California Rapid Transit System (RTD), but would be an addition to them. The buses now run every hour.

He said that although fares should be charged to the riding public, the county should subsidize some of the costs to encourage motorists to leave their cars home and use the commuters.

The board already is underwriting a three-month experiment with RTD buses that is providing 25 cents a ride anywhere in the county. The subsidy is costing the county $9.6 million and comes from revenue sharing.

'Reached end of road'

Golda tells Labor party she'll resign Thursday

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Prime Minister Golda Meir told her Labor party today she will resign Thursday.

The Israeli political crisis blew up over growing demands that Defense Minister Moshe Dayan resign because of Israel's unpreparedness when Egypt and Syria attacked last Oct. 6, Yom Kippur.

Mrs. Meir had formed a shaky coalition following the October War with Dayan remaining as Defense Minister, but calls for his resignation persisted. The Israeli chief of Staff, Gen. David Elazar, resigned last week.

The 75-year-old prime minister told her party's leaders that she had definitely made up her mind and she could not be convinced to stay in the post she has held since 1969, an official source said.

"I have reached the end of the road," Mrs. Meir said. "I can go on no longer. This has nothing to do with Moshe Dayan but only with myself."

There has been a series of political crises since the October war and in January both Mrs. Meir and Dayan had threatened to resign.

The cabinet crisis deepened earlier today with a legal opinion hinting at Dayan's responsibitity for Israel's unpreparedness for the October war. Political sources said it could force him to quit and thus topple the government.

The opinion by Justice Minister Haim Zadok said Dayan is not legally bound to resign. Dayan requested the opinion.

"The opinion said that a minister is responsible for what is done in his ministry," one source said. "That's why if you read the opinion correctly you have to reach the conclusion that Dayan must go."

Gasoline near normal, says Simon

Cheer for vacationers!

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy chief William E. Simon said today there will be enough gasoline available for Americans to take their normal summer trips this year.

Simon said that with rapidly improving gasoline supplies — as oil is again reaching this country from the Middle East — the situation has returned to "near normal."

"As the supplies again begin to land on this shore, we'll have a sufficiency of gasoline with the production levels that have been established certainly by the end of May," Simon said.

Simon also predicted that first quarter profits of major oil companies will be so high as to be "embarrassing" to them when compared to the first three months of 1973.

Simons was asked to comment during an interview on the NBC-TV Today Show on a statement by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash. that oil company profits would be "obscene."

"I don't think that I'd use that adjective," Simon said. "I would say that in the traditional way of financial reporting as compared to the first quarter of last year that they're going to be embarrassing because of the gasoline shortfall and the experience that the American people have had.

"But . . . we have to sit back and take a look at how the oil company profits have measured against all other companies over a long period of time and you'll see that they fall in the middle range."

As for gasoline supplies, he said: "If the American people continue to abide by normal conservation practices, we'll be able to live in a normal fashion."

Simon said he was "encouraging the American people to take a normal summer vacation, not to postpone going to New England or down to Florida if that has been there traditional practice. There is going to be gasoline out there."

But he cautioned that it is going to cost more to go on the trips because "prices are going to be higher, especially among gasoline stations that rely on foreign imports."

Accused of lying to Senate panel

Reinecke denies guilt in court appearance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke of California pleaded "absolutely not guilty" today to three counts of lying to the Senate Judiciary Committee during testimony concerning financing of the 1972 Republican National Convention.

A tentative trial date of June 19, was set by U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker. That is two weeks after a June 4 California Republican primary in which Reinecke is a candidate for the nomination to succeed Ronald Reagan as governor.

Reinecke's lawyers asked Parker for an earlier trial date "so his innocence may be established before the primary." Parker said he had a "crowded court calendar but would consider the request."

Reinecke's lawyer, F. Joseph Donahue, also asked that the trial be moved to California. Parker took that request under consideration and said he would rule later on it.

Reinecke was indicted on perjury charges for testimony about an offer by International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT) to help finance the GOP convention then scheduled for San Diego during hearings on Richard G. Kleindienst's nomination for attorney general.

Speaking with reporters shortly before his court appearance, Reinecke said of the case against him: "It appears nonprofessional. It's a flimsy charge. There is something very strange about the whole thing —I can't help but question the whole motivation behind it."

Asked if he thought the indictment was politically motivated' Reinecke observed that it came "very close" to the primary.

Parker gave Reinecke's lawyer until April 17 to file other motions in the case and gave the Watergate prosecutor's office until April 24 to respond. A hearing on the motions was set for Saturday.

Both sides indicated they would be prepared for trial by May 20 if Parker could find room on his calendar for an earlier date.

"The lieutenant governor is at the moment a candidate for governor of California in a primary that will be held June 4," Donahue told the judge. "It is my desire to set trial on May 20 so his innocence may be established before the primary."

Parker said, "I have a calendar where defendants are languishing in custody and I imagine that other defendants would like a similar fast disposal of their cases. I will have to let it stay as it is for now but I will reconsider my calendar."

Regional Park damaged by people going to Jam

CUCAMOGA — Damage caused by some persons going to the California Jam could cause a delay in the opening of the Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park.

Hundreds of persons tore down chain link fences and gates, trampled three acres of newly sown grass and damaged trees and shrubbery as they crossed the parksite to get to the Ontario Motor Speedway.

The park is located east of Archibald Avenue and north of the San Bernardino Freeway — about 1.5 miles northwest of the speedway.

The site was overrun by persons who parked along Archibald then took a shortcut across the enclosed property to reach the concert.

They climbed over and through two fences and removed two or three gates, officials reported.

Many also stopped off at the recently completed restrooms, clogging the plumbing.

Officials had proposed a dedication program on May 18, with the park then opening in June.

"But should the grass have to be replanted, we would have to delay the opening," said Gary Patton, county regional parks director. "We want the grass established before we open the park to the public."

It may, however, take several weeks to determine if the grass area has to be replanted.

"We plan to keep the area well watered and should know in two weeks if it has to be reseeded," said Rick Wilkins, president of C&R Construction Co., the park contractor.

Wilkins was at the park Saturday and attempted to keep concertgoers from crossing the property. "They parked along Archibald Avnue then crossed the west and east perimeter fences along Archibald and Haven avenues."

He said it looked like a "string of ants" going across the park. "They trampled down the grass we had just planted and 18 to 20 trees and shrubbery were torn down."

Several of the chain-link fence gates also were taken down by persons who removed the pins, he added.

Wilkins said he attempted to stop the pedestrian flow. "But I was just one man talking to a mob like that. I was simply outnumbered."

Wilkins said he was pleased however, that damage was limited to what it was. "It could have been much worse. It just got out of hand."

He said it is difficult to estimate the loss until it is determined if the grass had to be reseeded.

Meanwhile, county officials estimated the damage to the fences and gates at $4,000 to $5,000. "I think the county should be reimbursed for damage costs by the promoters of the concert," said Patton. He also urged steps be taken to prevent any future park damages should other concerts be held at the speedway.

'Too high' milk prices assailed by Moretti

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, a candidate for governor, said Tuesday that state officials had authorized too high milk prices, which should be reduced immediately by five cents a half-gallon.

The present price structure guarantees a profit even to badly run milk selling operations, and an exorbitant profit to the efficient ones, Moretti said.

Moretti, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, blamed C.B. Christensen, state food and agriculture director, for allowing retailers to pass on higher milk prices to consumers "when retailers haven't even requested it."

The state sets a minimum price for milk. The minimum rose by 10 cents a gallon last month—bringing increases in the past year to 30 cents—when dairymen complained that soaring feed costs had driven the expenses of their operations so high that they would slaughter their cows for beef unless they could charge more for milk.

State milk prices at retail now range from 68 cents a half gallon in Los Angeles County to 73 cents in Siskiyou County.

"Milk is too high and it doesn't need to be," Moretti told a news conference. "I have spoken to retailers and they assured us they could sell milk at a lower minimum price and still make a profit." The Berkeley Co-op said "They can reduce the minimum price of milk a dime and still make a profit," he said.

"The law is not designed or intended to insure a fair profit to even an inefficient or incompetent retailer ... or to assure an exorbitant profit to an efficient, competent retailer," he said.

He said the Assembly would investigate milk pricing and he will ask Christensen to reduce the minimum required price "so the large companies can reduce their prices."

UPI Guild votes to accept offer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wire Service Guild members returned to work at United Press International today, ending a 23-day strike, the first by editorial employes in the news agency's 67-year history.

Striking newsmen, newswomen, photographers, editors and other Guild-covered employes returned to work at midnight, six hours after the Guild announced that Guild members, in a national referendum, aproved a new two-year contract.

The approval, on a vote of 323 to 245, came just one day after 58 per cent of striking Guild members voted to reject the same proposed contract. But the four-member Guild negotiating committee, which had unanimously asked members to reject the offer, resubmitted the proposal with a unanimous recommendation that it be approved. The committee said a 58 per cent rejection vote was not strong enough to maintain a hard bargaining position.

The settlement provides pay raises of 5.67 per cent in each year, raising minimum salaries for the most experienced editorial employes from the $300 provided in the contract that expired at midnight March 15 to $317 immediately and to $335 on Jan. 1, 1975.

The Guild had sought pay raises of 10 per cent in each year of the contract.

Parks and recreation meeting is canceled

POMONA — The Pomona Parks and Recreation Commission has canceled its regular Thursday night meeting due to a lack of a quorum. The session had been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the City Council chambers.

17-year-old girl forced into van by 2 men, raped

MONTCLAIR — A 17-year-old Chino girl was forced into a car at knifepoint by two men at the Montclair Plaza parking lot Tuesday night, driven to the Padua Hills area above Claremont and raped, police reported.

Police said the girl was walking to her car parked in the lot north of the main entrance of the Montclair Plaza when she was approached by two men, both Caucasians. One of the men produced a knife and forced her into a van truck. The girl was then driven to the Padua Hills where the men raped her. The girl was later released by the men.

The girl reported the incident about 11:10 p.m. nearly two hours after she was abducted.

The girl described the men as Caucasians. One was 16 or 17, 6 feet tall, of slender build, with light blond hair wearing a green and gold Pendleton type shirt and blue Levis. The other man was described as about 19, 6 feet 1, with blond curly hair and a "pointed nose." The second man was wearing blue jeans.

The girl was taken to Montclair Doctors Hospital with minor injuries following the incident.

Garey and Arrow collision injures wife of judge

POMONA — Patricia S. Piatt, wife of Pomona Municipal Court Judge James H. Piatt, was injured this morning in a two-car collision at Garey Avenue and Arrow Highway.

Mrs. Piat, 37, suffered head, neck and chest injuries and was to be admitted at Pomona Valley Community Hospital, for observation. The other driver, Mildred M. Wrentsch, 54, Arcadia, had chest and neck injuries and was to be referred to her own physician after being released from the hospital.

Police reported that Mrs. Piatt was southbound on Garey Avenue shortly after 7:30 and Mrs. Wrentsch was eastbound on Arrow when the collision occurred. Officer Bill Laszlo said that early examination of Mrs. Piatt's small car indicated that crossing over a set of railroad tracks north of the intersection may have shaken the car's brake fluid line loose, resulting in a loss of the vehicles brakes.

3rd murder suspect arrested in court

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — One of two men charged with the slaying of a park ranger in Marin County turned state's evidence Tuesday and a third suspect was arrested when he showed up as a spectator at the trial.

Charged in the shooting death of National Park Service ranger Kenneth C. Patrick, 40, are Alan W. Veale, 24, and Veronza Bowers, 28.

FBI agents arrested Jonathan Z. Shoher, 28, when he tried to attend the trial at the Federal Building. He was charged with murder and bail was set at $100,000.

New Mexico fire nearly controlled

CLOUDCROFT, N.M. (UPI) — Firefighters halted a blaze in the Lincoln National Forest Tuesday after flames started by a small boy playing with matches surged for three days through 14,470 acres and two small resort towns.

California

Seat of government posted on a bicycle

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The seat of government of the nation's most populous state today was a bicycle seat.

The acting governor of California, James R. Mills, was leading a caravan of 40 bicyclists on a 600 mile run from Sacramento to San Diego to rally support for Proposition 5, a ballot initiative to allow highway funds to be used for public transportation systems and pollution control.

Mills, a Democrat from San Diego, is usually president pro tem of the state senate.

But as he and his fellow bicyclists were munching sandwiches outside Santa Barbara Tuesday, Mills was informed that he was about to become the highest executive officer in the state.

Gov. Ronald Reagan is vacationing in Arizona, and Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke was about to fly to Washington to be arraigned on federal charges of perjury.

Mills said that rather than cut short his trip, he would govern from his bicycle seat.

As acting governor, he immediately got an escort of state police and highway patrol officers. They drove while he pedalled, and the patrol car radios served as his link to the capitol, Mills said. "There's no problem," Mills said. "Anything that needs to be done, I can do from here."

A Reagan aide said there was one bit of pending business, a school financing bill that is awaiting signature by some governor. But it is not worth buying an airline ticket for someone to carry the bill to Southern California and hunt up the acting governor on his bicycle to sign it, so it will await the return of Reagan or Reinecke.

Mills planned to make an appearance at City Hall here today.

He said he has no plans to take any official actions at all before his "term" comes to an end tonight when Reinecke is scheduled to return.

If there is an emergency, he said, Reagan left him with the instructions "to do nothing that would be distasteful to him or to me."

The only worry for the bicycle-borne governor was expressed by those who noted that two years ago Mills, on his bicycle, crashed into a San Francisco County supervisor, breaking a collarbone and a rib.

Columnist charges Connally took $10,000 bribe from Milk Products

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The Watergate prosecutors are investigating bribery charges against former Treasury Secretary John Connally.

The crack FBI squad, which is assigned to the special prosecutor's office, has dug up evidence that Connally pocketed $10,000 from the Associated Milk Products, Inc., and hastily returned the cash after the dairy lobby came under investigation.

This dramatic development could finish Connally as a presidential contender. For the past six months, he has barnstormed through more than 30 states addressing Republican audiences and courting party leaders in hot pursuit, presumably, of the 1976 presidential nomination.

Our FBI sources say the alleged $10,000 bribe was passed by AMPI official Robert Lilly to lobbyist Jake Jacobsen, who delivered it to Connally. Jacobsen already has been indicted for perjury for testifying that he stashed the $10,000 in a safe deposit box and never removed it until the FBI opened the box last November.

Connally has emphatically denied that he ever received the money. An associate has said that Jacobsen offered the $10,000 as a campaign contribution for distribution to GOP candidates but that Connally turned down the offer.

The FBI's Watergate squad has painstakingly tracked down evidence, however, that the $10,000 not only was accepted by Connally but that he made two trips to return the money after it became hot.

The first time, according to our FBI sources, Connally gave back the money in $100 bills. Later, he allegedly became worried that the bills could be traced and brought a second batch of smaller bills, which he exchanged for the first $10,000.

He took pains, say our sources, to select bills that had been issued before the $10,000 payment was made. He allegedly didn't want the FBI to find any new bills among those Jacobsen said had remained untouched in a safe deposit box.

Ironically, the former Treasury head forgot that Federal Reserve banks don't necessarily issue currency during the year it is dated. FBI agents have established that some of the bills in the bank box were not issued until after Jacobsen claimed the money had been deposited.

A methodical FBI check of deposit slips, telephone tolls and travel records have poked other damaging holes in Connally's alibi. Our sources say witnesses have also given the FBI statements which contradict Connally.

After Connally pocketed the $10,000 from the milk producers, according to the FBI evidence, he juggled his schedule on March 16, 1972, to meet with AMPI officials George Mehren and Harold Nelson. They were brought over to the Treasury by Jacobsen.

Connally was then at the height of his power and prestige. He listened carefully to the dairymen's appeal for greater dairy subsidies and for settling an antitrust action against AMPI.

Then in the presence of the dairy lobbyists, according to sworn testimony, he telephoned former Attorney General John Mitchell and told him in blunt Texas language:

"John, get off your — and find out what is going on in the Midwest. There is discontent among the dairy farmers, and I have a group of them here."

A year earlier, Connally huddled with the AMPI's Robert Lilly at Washington's Page terminal, where the private planes tie up. The Treasury Secretary allegedly told Lilly that a dairy subsidy increase was "in the bag."

This was the same Lilly who later handed over $10,000 to Jacobsen for delivery to Connally.

A few days after the airport meeting, Connally attended a White House meeting with the dairy lobbyists. They promised to raise a campaign chest for President Nixon's reelection.

The White House has acknowledged that "Secretary Connally said that their votes would be important in several Midwestern states, and he noted that the industry had political funds which would be distributed among House and Senate candidates in the coming election."

The following day, the White House ordered a price support increase — which the Agriculture Department had just rejected — worth approximately $500 million a year to the dairy industry.

Not long afterwards, Connally threw a barbecue at his Texas ranch for President Nixon. High on the guest list was Leon Jaworski, who as special prosecutor must now prosecute his friend Connally.

Renting to Weight Watchers costing tax exempt status

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — At least five churches and synagogues will lose their tax exempt status because they rent space for Weight Watchers meetings at $25 a session, the county assessor's office said Tuesday.

Churches and synagogues are exempt from property taxes, under state law, only if they are used "solely and exclusively for religious worship," said Sheldon Paris, who is in charge of religious and welfare exemptions in the county assessor's office.

He said 21 churches and synagogues had been warned they might lose their exemption, and eight had notified him they would not allow Weight Watchers to meet in their buildings anymore and "will retain their exemptions."

"Five said Weight Watchers will stay, and they will take the tax consequences," he said, meaning tax bills of from $100 to $1000.

Eight congregations are yet to be heard from.

A spokeswoman for Weight Watchers said the organization favored use of churches for meetings, held one to three times a week, because they charged low rent, were favorably located and had plenty of parking.

The tax ruling is driving the rents up to as much as $2,400 a year however, she said, so the group will "ease out" of churches.

Christians in valley prepare Maundy Thursday rites

Christians throughout the Pomona Valley will gather Thursday evening to celebrate the night on which Jesus and His Disciples were in the Upper Room breaking bread together.

Maundy Thursday commemorates the events of Christ's last days on earth. Holy Thursday will be observed in Pomona Valley churches with the celebration of Holy Communion, prayer services and, in some denominations, foot-washing ceremonies.

The word Maundy refers to Christ's commandment to His Disciples in the Upper Room: "A new commandment I give unto you: That ye love one another" — John 13:34.

The events of the Maundy Thursday celebration are Christ's washing of His disciples' feet and His last meal with the disciples.

Only a few denominations conduct the foot-washing ritual or Love Feast.

Court order halts fertilizer plant

CHINO — A proposed fertilizer processing plant, bitterly opposed by local residents here, has been ordered halted by a Superior Court judge for lack of proper environmental considerations.

In issuing a stay order against Red Star Plant Foods Co., Judge James E. Cunningham's order is also directly critical of the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors' failure to intervene and demand a full environmental impact report, even after residents had petitioned the supervisors to do so

The court order culminated a class action suit brought by Shirley Swierstra of Chino on behalf of all residents living in the southeast Chino area.

Attorney Bill McVittie, representing the residents from resenting the residents, noted that the county failed to make proper notice for public hearings on the matter, and thereby prevented resident from exercising their rights to oppose the fertilizer company's plans.

"More important is the failure of the county to prepare an environmental impact report covering the effect that the proposed manure processing and stock-piling operation will have on the surrounding community," McVittie said.

The basis for the residents' case was the landmark Friends of Mammoth decision of 1972, which requires environmental impact reports for projects that may adversely effect the surrounding community.

Judge Cunningham scheduled a hearing for April 19 at 10 a.m. when the fertilizer company will be given the opportunity to show cause why the stay order should be lifted.

Paul Bernhard, president of the Downey-based company, was not available for comment on the court decision or what course the company will pursue.

In the past, however, Bernhard has adamantly contended that the fertilizer plant would not adversely affect the community.

The company has operated a fertilizer plant in Downey since 1927, Bernhard has publicly stated, and has never been the target of community complaints even though surrounded by restaurants and a variety of retail commercial operations.

Meanwhile, residents of the area are intent on keeping the fertilizer plant out and preventing similar ventures in the future.

Banding together, the residents have formed the Committee to Protect the Chino Valley Environment and will hold a meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Building.

McVittie, who is also the Chino city attorney, is scheduled to address the group concerning the present legal situation. In addition, city planning director Gale Carr will review the city and county general plans for the area

Two fires reported in empty homes

POMONA — Arson investigators are looking into the causes of fires started in kitchen sinks in vacant homes at 1744 and 1752 Aralia Ave. Tuesday night.

Fire units responded to an alarm at 6:03 p.m. Tuesday and were fighting a blaze at 1744 Aralia Ave. when they discovered a fire next door at 1752 Aralia Ave.

Firemen reported $5,000 damage to the structure at 1744 Aralia Ave., but none at 1752.

Department officials reported it was "touch and go" for a while at 909 Carson Lane at 9:36 p.m. where someone had spilled gasoline on a garage floor.

Mrs. Phyllis Christian told officials she arrived home to discover the spilled gasoline and noted the odor of gas throughout her house.

Mrs. Christian reportedly opened the door from her service porch to the garage, but luckily the gas flame in the water heater in the porch failed to ignite the fumes.

Fiddle concert expects 100,000

UNION GROVE, N.C. (UPI) — About 1,000 early arrivals were "picking and fiddling around" Tuesday in preparation for the 50th annual old-time fiddlers' festival that is expected to attract 100,000 persons.

The three-day gettogether begins Thursday with competition in seven categories, including the best "old-time band," the best "bluegrass band" and the "best single performance."

A festival spokesman said crowds began arriving early this week and by Tuesday about 1,000 persons had arrived. The convention last year drew about 75,000 persons during the three days.

Assistant superintendent resigns

School administration is reorganized

By PATRICK Spencer
P-B Staff Writer

UPLAND — School trustees authorized a major reorganization of the district's administrative system Tuesday following the resignation of Asst. Supt. Darrel Dawes.

Under the new reorganization, the position of assistant superintendent, which Dawes has held since 1971, will be retitled personnel administrator.

The new position carries a different range of duties, according to Supt. Bill Plaster. Rather than have responsibility for both certificated personnel matters and instructional programs, the personnel administrator will be solely responsible for both classified and certificated personnel matters.

Plaster will assume responsibility for the management of the district's instructional program under the new system, while Business Manager Glenn Hardy will be relieved of his current additional duties as classified personnel manager.

Plaster said the new arrangement "is an effort to bring better service to the district and to employes." Employes personnel questions and problems requiring professional advice and counsel should get immediate response from district administrators, he said, and the arrangement will provide employes with someone who can devote his full time and attention to employe matters.

Plaster said he had been dissatisfied with the old arrangement under which personnel matters were split between Dawes and Hardy He felt the new organization would be more streamlined and effective.

Plaster said the new position will become effective July 1 and that he would begin a search Monday for someone to fill it.

Dawes' resignation becomes effective June 30. He has been with the district in a variety of teaching and administrative posts for some 20 years. In 1970 he served as acting superintendent, but turned down the board's offer of the full position to return to teaching.

In his new post, Dawes will act as both district superintendent and principal of the 500-student Pollock Pines Elementary School District in Northern California's El Dorado County, east of Sacramento.

In other action, the board authorized Supt. Plaster to meet with Roy C. Hill, county superintendent of schools, to discuss a county welfare department plan to set up a 25-member Child Development Services Advisory-Action Committee.

The committee would function to implement Assembly Bill 99, the "Child Development Act" which places responsibility upon educational systems to develop an integrated plan for the care and development of children in the absence of their parents.

Such services as preschool programs, day care centers, children's centers, emergency homemaker services, social services and health screening and treatment are to be administered at the district level under the supervision of county and state education officials by 1978.

The board wants to obtain the county schools administration reaction to the proposal and obtain additional information on the scope and activities of the new committee before an official endorsement is given.

Syria envoys on way to Washington

By United Press International

A Syrian delegation headed for Washington today carrying proposals for troop disengagement with Israel in the Golan Heights where the two countries have waged a daily war of attrition for nearly a month.

The nine-man Syrian team, headed by military intelligence chief Brig. Hikmat Chehabi, spent the night in London en route before flying on to present the Syrian proposals to U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and receive in return the Israeli plan for disengagement.

It will then return to Damascus with the Israeli plan which Kissinger got earlier this month from Defense Minister Moshe Dayan.

Arab press reports said Chehabi was not authorized to negotiate with Kissinger.

The Beirut newspaper An Nahar said that the outcome of the disengagement talks may be determined by the three hills that dominate Quneitra, the largest town in the Golan Heights.

The Israelis are ready to withdraw from the town, provided they keep the hills, the newspaper said, but the Syrians want Israel to pull off the hills as well.

After talking to Chehabi and studying the Syrian plan, Kissinger may visit the Middle East later this month in an attempt to bring about Golan disengagement in the same way he negotiated diesengagement between Egypt and Israel by shuttling back and forth between the two countries.

Israeli and Syrian forces exchanged artillery and tank fire in the Golan Heights Tuesday for the 29th consecutive day, with skirmishes reported on the slopes of Mt. Hermon, 22 miles from Damascus.

Syria said it inflicted "heavy losses" on an Israeli tank unit. Israel reported no casualties.

In Israel, there were new calls for the resignation of Dayan as a result of of an Israeli report charging that Israel was unprepared for the October Middle East War.

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir said: "If I were Moshe Dayan, I think the best thing for me to do would be for me to resign."

Leaders of Prime Minister Golda Meir's Labor party decided to empower a committee to prepare suggestions for parliamentary debate Thursday on the whole issue of Israeli unpreparedness.

In another development, Syria and Lebanon were at odds over the Lebanese refusal to turn over to Syria two Israeli pilots who bailed out from the Phantom jet over south Lebanaon Monday before it went down in flames.

I'm laughing, but I hurt

By ERMA BOMBECK

A reader who signs herself "Ann," has threatened to send me her 2½-year-old son and 1½-year-old daughter because, "You seem to be able to laugh at children."

She goes on to sreport that they are a "handful," having put a loaf of bread in a pitcher of Kool-Aid, smeared mayonnaise all over themselves, dumped baby powder in their ears and (Devilish Danny) emptied his potty down the floor furnace all in one morning.

I don't know how to tell you, Ann, but March and April are not the months to test a woman's humor. Let me spell it out for you.

I've been on a diet for two weeks and have gained three pounds. I broke my bottom getting to a White Sale, only to discover that all that was left were double top sheets, single contour bottoms, and king pillowcases. My checkbook balanced. (I was hoping I was not $63 overdrawn.)

My best friend (whom I always trusted) just learned how to bake bread. The school called and said they are suspicious my son posted a sign in the restroom that read, "Flush twice. It's a long way to the cafeteria." (He not only signed his work, but he misspelled cafeteria.) Some wise guy wrote "HELP" in the dust on my draperies.

My world is falling apart, Ann. Lucy is leaving TV. Miss Kitty quit at the Long Branch, Rhoda is leaving Mary Tyler Moore, and a magazine in the supermarket had a blaring headline, "Jackie Onassis Spending Habits Suggest Mental Disorder." (I've had the same disorder for years and my husband says the only cure is the penitentiary.)

The cheerleader on my high school cheer squad just became a grandmother. The supermarket just discontinued my silverware pattern and I had five place setings to go. I just found my Christmas cards and a roll of eight-cent stamps. My daughter is 20 and doesn't know how to turn on the stove and I spent 40 minutes ironing a linen dress and then discovered it doesn't fit me anymore. The other day I drove into a drive-in bank and the car ahead of me got a flat.

I like you, Ann, and I want to assure you that you are doing a splendid job with those children and that psychologists recommend a child belongs with his mother. Besides, if I laugh anymore I will surely hurt myself.

(What do you wanta bet? With my luck, the kids will arrive with postage due.)

Minimum wage bill

Nixon signed it, but reluctantly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When a president is particularly pleased with a piece of legislation, he throws open the doors to his Oval Office and invites congressional leaders, cabinet members and television cameras to record the historic signing.

He manipulates dozens of pens with grand flourishes, and the assembled onlookers eagerly await the gift of the presidential ballpoints.

He has a speech about the surpassing public good that will accrue from the legislation.

And it rarely is a time for partisanship. Accolades are heaped equally upon the congressional guests, Democrat and Republican alike. It is a time for jolly good will, and the political differences are laid aside in the super abundance of cooperation.

On Monday, President Nixon signed a bill he was not particularly pleased with.

The doors on the Oval Office were opened, no mem fice were opened, no members of Congress were present. There was only one cabinet official, Labor Secretary Peter Brennan.

There was only one pen. Nixon affixed his signature quickly, skidded the pen across the presidential desk to Brennan, and flipped the completed bill like a frisbee into the outbox in the right hand corner of his desk.

The reporters let in moments before were whisked out. There had been no presidential speech, although Nixon murmered a few words as he signed, and the White House issued a lukewarm statement afterwards.

The "ceremony" was over. The provisions of the new law said that in three weeks the minimum wage for about 54 million Americans would be $2 per hour.

The nation had its first new minimum wage bill since 1967. About 7 to 8 million new workers were brought under the minimum wage umbrella. And Congress had a political victory over a reluctant president.

It was just seven months ago that Nixon vetoed as inflationary and too liberal an almost identical bill. Efforts to override the veto failed, but the massive majority by which both the House and Senate approved the new bill two weeks ago made it a certainty a second veto could be nullified.

So, with his standings low in the popularity polls and the House of Representatives studying his possible impeachment, Nixon apparently felt that though some segments of the bill clearly were distasteful to him, nothing could be gained by another veto.

The minimum wage will be raised to $2 an hour May 1, to $2.10 an hour Jan. 1, 1975, and to $2.30 an hour Jan. 1, 1976.

Included in minimum wage coverage for the first time were domestic service employes — except babysitters and paid companions; all state and local government workers; and retail service workers employed by chain stores.

The law also will extend provisions requiring payment of overtime in excess of 40 hours a week to 8 million workers not now covered —mostly in hotels, restaurants, nursing homes, bowling alleys and similar businesses.

In his written statement, Nixon said, "On the whole, S2747 contains more good than bad and I have concluded that the best interests of the American people will be served by signing it into law."

"Although I have some reservations about portions of this legislation, its basic purpose —to increase the minimum wage for working men and women of this country — deserves the support of all Americans," Nixon said.

"The federally legislated minimum wage for most American workers has remained static for six years, despite a number of inccreases in the cost of living, raising the minimum wage is now a matter of justice that can no longer be fairly delayed."

Two dollars an hour comes out to $80 a week, $4,160 a year —before taxes.

Brennan, who said the signing "marks a great day for American working men and women," put the presidential pen in a box embossed with a presidential seal, and left the Oval Office.

U. of Minnesota hires president

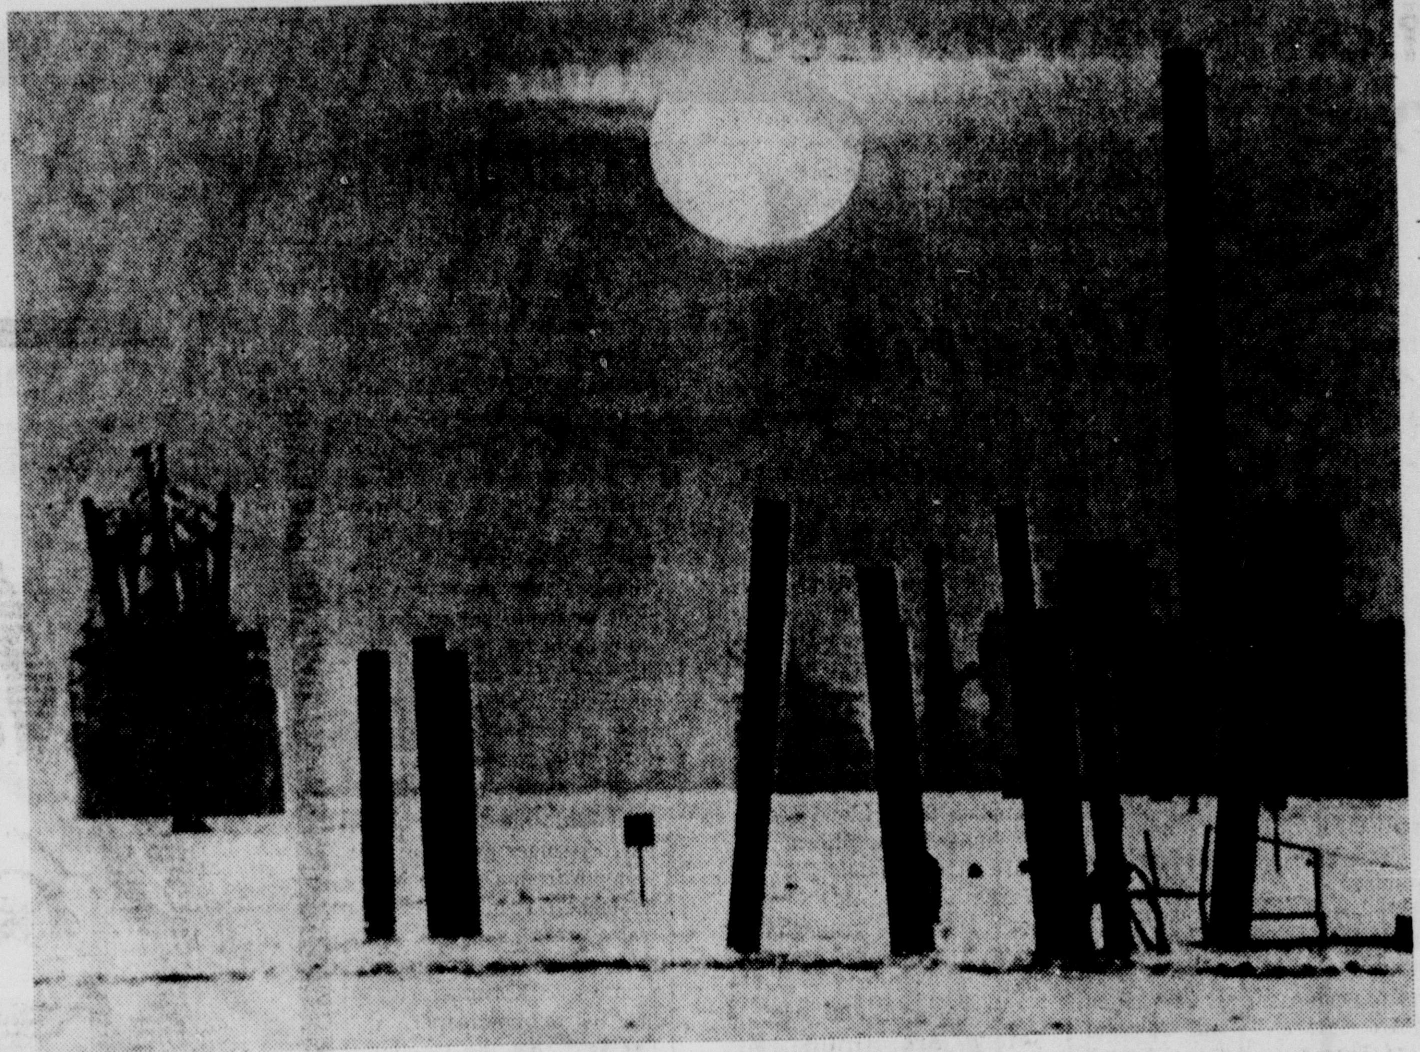
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — C. Peter Magrath, 40, president of the State University of New York at Binghamton, has been hired as president of the University of Minnesota at $60,000 per year.

Magrath will succeed Malcolm Moos, who is scheduled to leave in July to head the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

Before going to the Binghampton institutton, Magrath was employed by the University of Nebraska as vice chancellor for academic affairs at the Lincoln campus.

'The necessary'

The privy or outhouse of Colonial Virginia was aptly called "the necessary."



SUNSET UP NORTH — The sun, which starts to set in the North Sea, gives a picturesque impression of the River Elbe mouth near Hamburg, Germany. In foreground are pilings in the river.

Indian canoe

The Indian word canoe was introduced into the English language by John Smith, describing the hollowed-out log used by the Indians for water travel.

Ancient custom

Christening a new ship by breaking a bottle of wine over tis prow is believed to be a survival of the ancient custom of dedicating each vessel to the protection of a god.

Strength of gravity weakening, U.S. Navy astronomer asserts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first indirect evidence was reported Monday supporting the theory that the strength of gravity on earth and throughout the universe is very slowly weakening.

Dr. Thomas C. Van Flandern, an astronomer at the U.S. Naval Observatory, measured the orbital speed of the moon with the precision of an atomic clock to determine that the force of gravity apparently is decreasing at the rate of one part in 10 billion per year.

This means, he said in an interview, that a 150-pound man would lose 7 millionths of a gram of weight a year. A gram is roughly the weight of a paper clip.

Van Flandern presented his findings at the opening session of a week-long meeting of the American Geophysical Union. He said his work was based on a theory proposed two years ago by Cambridge University astronomer Fred Hoyle.

The basis for the work is the assumption that if gravity is weakening, the orbits of planets about the sun, or the moon about the earth, would slowly expand and the time for each orbit would gradually increase. The orbital time of the moon was easiest to measure, but it is also known that the friction of tidal forces between the earth and moon is slowing the moon's orbit.

Hoyle suggested that if the role played by tidal forces were removed from the calculations, the role of a decrease of gravity could be measured. Van Flandern, using the separate calculations of two other scientists, subtracted the tidal factor and found that what presumably is weakening of gravity is allowing the moon to move away from the earth about 4 centimeters a year—about 1½ inches —to increase its orbital period seven-tenths of a second a year.

"This is the first numerical result which appears to have as its most probable explanation that gravity is decreasing," he said.

Up to about 40 years ago, it was assumed by scientists that the force of gravity remained constant. The first suggestion that it might be decreasing was made in the 1930s. But there is as yet no direct way to measure changes in the force of gravity, and Van Flandern said his work was the first indirect evidence suggesting gravity is decreasing.

Another possible cause for a lengthening of orbital period would be that the sun is losing mass at a greater rate than is now believed. But he said astrophysicists do not believe this is the case.

"So as nearly as we can tell, the other possibilities seem to be excluded," Van Flandern said.

If the rate of gravity weakening were constant throughout the history of the solar system, he said, it would mean that an object that existed 4.5 billion years ago would be twice as heavy as it is today.

A weakening of gravity also would have major implications for the earth and moon. It would mean, for example, that the earth is expanding at the rate of less than one centimeter per century. That, he said, could explain why the continents of earth seem to be slowly drifting apart.

A constant rate of the decline in the force of gravity also compounds a problem for scientists trying to determine the history of the moon in relation to earth. Constant deceleration of the moon's orbital speed by tidal forces alone would mean that the moon could not have been a satellite more than 1.5 billion years and the weakening of gravity on top of that would mean the moon must not have been an earth satellite longer than 1 billion years.

But he said if the strength of gravity is decreasing, a longtime puzzle about earth's rotation would be cleared up. The rotation of earth apparently has been slowing at only half the rate predicted by tidal friction with the moon. But the theory that gravity is weakening would account for this discrepancy because it would imply that the astronomical time scale used for measurements must also be revised.

'Endangered species' law rattles Illinois

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) —You could go to jail for a year in Illinois for carrying an unregistered purse—if it happens to be made of alligator skin.

Illinois conservation officers this week began enforcing a new Illinois "endangered species act," which requires persons who own or sell animals or animal byproducts from a long list of endangered breeds to register with the state or face fines up to $1,000 and a year in prison.

The list of creatures threatened by extinction includes alligators, leopards, tigers, cheetahs, panthers, cougars, gray wolves, red wolves, polar bears, kit foxes and green turtles.

"Animal products" refers to such things as teeth, fur, claws, hides, feathers, "the body or any portion thereof."

The Illinois General Assembly passed the law and former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie signed it in 1972. But enforcement was delayed until Monday while conservation officials geared up for the strange task of monitoring the buying and selling of animal products.

"We are concerned mostly with the large scale commercial importers," William O. Brey, chief of law enforcement for the Department of Conservation, said.

"But individuals who own such things as alligator purses or rare hunting trophies must also register with the state."

Brey said although conservation officers are now under orders to make arrests for violations of the law, "We will procede very carefully until people get a chance to catch on to what is happening."

Since April of last year, the department's division on wildlife resources has issued some 1,100 permits to people who reported they own furs, purses, shoes, souvenirs and other objects derived from rare animals. A few fur retailers have also applied for permission to sell what furs they have in stock.

However, a spot check of Springfield merchants revealed some dealers were caught off guard by the new law.

"Frankly, I didn't know we had such a law," Lester Friedman, manager of S.A. Barker Co., a women's apparel store, said. "We might have a few furs or alligator purses in stock. If I had known, they would have been taken off sale by now. We certainly don't want to break the law."

Another retailer said he was not aware of the law until a week ago when a customer asked if a fur she had recently bought was on the endangered list.

"I think the Department of Conservation should have contacted us a long time ago rather than wait for us to ask them for a list," Charles Paris, fur department manager for Berger-Siegel, another women's clothing store, said.

Harry Rice, fur manager for Myers Brothers Department Store, said he does not carry endangered furs because "people just don't want them anymore."

"The company we buy from in New York has absolutely gotten out of the leopard business," Rice said. "You may find some foreign companies that still offer them, but we don't get much demand for leopard—or any endangered species."

Sheepskins used to halt bedsores

MELBOURNE (UPI) — The Austin Hospital here has decided that sometimes old ways of doing things are better than new. After trying various new materials and methods it has gone back to using sheepskins to reduce the incidence of bedsores in patients.

Humane Society against animal control sticks

Perhaps you can find out where I may purchase a walking stick that is battery operated.

I would like to do some walking or cycling but the territory where I live is definitely too dangerous because of large dogs that attack one while on the streets. — Mrs. V. S., Chino.

There are sticks about 16 inches long equipped with a small battery and a discharge button which when pushed will give an animal a mild shock.

They resemble the devices used to herd cattle in stockyards.

You can obtain one through the Home Pet Center in Claremont. The Home Pet Center doesn't carry the sticks but can order them from an affiliated store in Santa Ana.

Before you decide to get one you should know that the National Humane Society is pushing legislation to remove them from the market or modify them.

One of the problems is that children find them and take them to school.

They have been used in training animals but pets have been said to cower whenever they see any kind of a stick as a result of such training.

Vincent Martin, Southern California Edison Co. district manager in the Pomona area, said meter readers tried them on an experimental basis and discarded them more than 10 years ago. They were considered "poor public relations."

He recommended that you do not obtain one.

When I re-entered Chaffey College, I filled out Veterans Administration forms to obtain educational benefits.

On the forms I indicated that I was married and had three children. According to VA benefit charts, I was entitled to $344 per month.

My first check was for $261. I wrote to the VA office in Los Angeles requesting that they advise me whether I could claim the children, as they are stepchildren.

Approximately a month later I received a form letter advising me to send a certified copy of each child's birth certificate and my marriage license. I purchased certified copies and mailed them approximately a week later.

The following month I received a reply which made no mention of the forms already sent and requested certified copies of each child's birth certificate, my marriage license and divorce decrees from my prior marriage and my wife's.

These copies were obtained and mailed. A week later I received my VA check in the sum of $261.

I would greatly appreciate your assistance in finding out whether stepchildren may be claimed as dependents and, if so, your help in obtaining retroactive benefits. —J. M., Upland.

John G. Miller, acting regional director of the VA, explained that previous records complicated your application because they showed only your previous marriage.

When your papers were brought up to date, an educational allowance was processed to pay you retroactively from the date you entered school at the rate of $334 per month, not $344 as you thought, including an allowance for your wife and three dependent children.

In your case, he said, retroactive benefits are being paid for stepchildren because they are in the custody of you and your wife.

In preparing to move, I emptied a heavy fireproof filing safe.

It revealed two stock certificates in the name of Campbell's Foods, Ltd., dated September 1931.

I have never received any profits or notices of meetings.

If you are interested in trying to locate this organization, I will be pleased. —J. H., Chino.

We wrote to R. M. Smythe & Co., securities valuation specialists.

Michael A. Mullan of the company replied that Campbell's Food, Ltd., a Nevada corporation, "passed out of business" many years ago. He said this was confirmed by state authorities.

Mullan said there is no connection at all between the old Campbell's Food, Ltd., and any modern corporations with similar sounding names. The stock has no value.

We're sorry we couldn't soup up your personal economy.

Planners urged to vacate street in bad traffic spot

POMONA — A proposal to vacate a portion of Pomona Boulevard where it intersects with Valley Boulevard will be considered tonight by the Pomona Planning Commission.

Such action is sought to reduce a "highly hazardous" traffic situation since Pomona Boulevard enters Valley Boulevard at an extremely acute angle, city officials report.

The problem is compounded by a railroad crossing at the intersection. Considerable city funds would be needed to provide crossing protection should the present traffic pattern continue, they added.

The proposed closure will cause no undue hardship to motorists or adjacent property owners, officials noted. They proposed to construct a cul-de-sac to handle truck traffic using this section of Pomona Boulevard.

In addition, a barrier is requested on Pomona Boulevard east of the railroad right-of-way. The intersection is near Pacific State Hospital.

Other agenda items include:

—A request to vacate an 18-foot-wide portion of Fourth Street between Garey Avenue and Thomas Street. This will become part of the Pomona Financial Center.

—A request to include a 25-acre section between First Street and Mission Boulevard and Parcels Street and White Avenue in a redevelopment project area. The site is west of the Pomona Mall. The matter may later be set for public hearing.

Historical society aids Rains House

CUCAMONGA — The Casa de Rancho Historical Society has donated $865 for development of the Rains House here.

County Supervisor Daniel Mikesell accepted the gift on behalf of the County Museum Association.

The Rains House is listed in the National Register of Historical Places. It was built in 1961 and is located near San Bernardino Road and Vineyard Avenue.

The house was built by John Rains, who purchased the property from L. V. Prudhomme, son-in-law of Tiburcio Tapia who obtained the property in a 1839 land grant.

Claremont councilmen hold firm to choice of new post office site

By GEORGE MacLAREN
P-B Staff Writer

CLAREMONT — The City Council Tuesday night adopted a "hang tough" attitude and unanimously reaffirmed its choice of the Bonita Avenue-Oberlin Avenue site as top priority for a new post office.

Two weeks ago the council had received word that the U.S. Postal Service had chosen three acres of prime industrial land on Arrow Highway at Bucknell Avenue for a new post office.

The latter site had been the last on a priority list of eight possible locations drawn up by the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce and the Planning Commission.

The choice of the Arrow Highway site shocked the council and the chamber, which sent letters of concern to the Postal Service and congressmen.

City Manager Keith Mulrooney and Mayor Bertye Smith at a luncheon meeting Monday with Claremont Postmaster Harry F. Lawrence and Verl Coons, sectional center manager for the U.S. Postal Service, stressed the city's displeasure with the selection of the Arrow Highway site.

Mulrooney said he has talked to a representative of Pacific Scientific Corp. and was told that the firm had not sold the land to the Postal Service.

"I feel we would have some say in the site location," said Mayor Smith.

She explained that two possible sites next to the railroad tracks west of Indian Hill Boulevard and east of College Avenue had been discarded because of their rectangular shape.

Mrs. Smith noted that the Bonita-Oberlin site would be the most expensive in per-foot cost, and would involve relocation of families, but so would the city's No. 2 choice on the east side of Indian Hill Boulevard at Green Street.

The council cited the possible danger factor of traffic traveling south on Indian Hill Boulevard having to make a left turn to get to the post office.

"Indian Hill Boulevard would be terribly dangerous for senior citizens," said Councilwoman Claire McDonald. "Some of them don't drive."

"I want to hang tough on the original site," commented Councilman Frank Hungerford.

"I would, too," Mrs. McDonald said.

Councilman Gene Block's motion that the council reaffirm its previous choice of Bonta Avenue passed unanimously.

Mulrooney reported that the Chamber of Commerce will call a general membership meeting to discuss the problem.

POMONA — Col. James H. Jones, a Cal Poly alumnus and founding member of Friends of the Cal Poly Library, has been awarded a special life membership in the group for his contributions and service to the university library.

Jones, of Irvine, has provided the library, on permanent loan, a valuable collection of paintings and prints accumulated over a 20-year period.

The life membership certificate is the first of its kind awarded, according to Frank Gaydos of Ontario, elected as this year's friends president.

Current officers of the organization besides Gaydos are Philip Wessels of Diamond Bar, vice president; Katherine B. Seibert of Claremont, secretary; and Donald Pfleuger of Claremont, treasurer.

The organization fosters interaction among the library, students and community members by featuring guest speakers during the year, presenting special art exhibits and through sponsorship of a student book collection contest, according to Gaydos.

$2-million law suit is filed against hospital and doctor for crash victims

POMONA — A $2 million law suit in Superior Court here filed against Doctors Hospital in La Puente and a physician charges negligence in the treatment of two teen-age Hacienda Heights accident victims.

The accusation earlier began an investigation by Los Angeles County authorities into the hospital's services. The county presently has a contract for emergency services with the hospital.

The physician named in the suit is Dr. Lynn Hilde, employed in the emergency room the night of the incident.

The suit was filed in behalf of Cindy Lee Trotter, 17, by her mother, Virginia Patry, 1338 Ridley Ave., and Roseanne O'Connor, also 17, by her mother, Agnes R. O'Connor, 1308 Coble Ave., all of Hacienda Heights. Hacienda Heights Attorney Andrew Patterson is asking $1 million for each girl.

The incident began at 2 a.m. March 16. The girls were passengers in a van driven by John Nelson Jr., 20, Valinda, when the vehicle crashed into a utility pole at Valley Boulevard and Wickford Avenue in La Puente.

The girls were sent by sheriff's deputies to Doctors Hospital in accordance with the county's agreement with that institution. In the emergency room they were examined by Dr. Hilde, authorities said.

The suit alleges that because of negligence the girls were told they had only superficial injuries and they were refused treatment. Actually, the suit claims, each had serious injuries. Cindy reportedly had two breaks in one leg, in addition to other injuries, and faced lengthy treatment in another hospital.

Roseanne, the suit said, had leg, back and other injuries and was placed under treatment at County-USC Medical Center.

The complaint was brought up at a recent meeting of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors and assigned for investigation of the county's emergency aide plan contract with the hospital.

Opinion

Crime and what punishment?

Last fall, a judge in Miami, Fla., made the news wires when he proposed an unusual punishment for a 19-year-old self-confessed murderer.

Rather than sentence the youth to life in prison, where he would simply be a burden to society, the judge suggested that he be put on probation and be required to support his victim's wife and five children until the latter could earn their own livings.

The public prosecutor labeled the idea as "disgusting, abhorrent and abominable."

If, some 7,000 years after the invention of writing, we cannot agree on what is the best way to teach children how to read, let alone learn math and other aspects of society's accumulated store of knowledge, it is not surprising that after millenia of human history we cannot agree on how best to punish and-or rehabilitate those who break society's laws.

There have been as many fads and fashions in penology in recent years as there have been in the classroom. The prosecutor quoted above, horrified at anything less than the maximum punishment provided by law, evidently belongs to the old school of an eye for an eye, a life for a life.

This school reigned almost universally until modern times (though, strangely, each generation continued to produce a more or less constant percentage of criminals no matter how many were put away or done away with).

Then in the 1950s, the notion that most lawbreakers were in one way or another "sick" became popular in prison circles, recalls Science News. This approach was advanced by such modern penal reformers as psychiatrist Karl Meninger and former attorney general Ramsey Clark.

By the 1960s, however, it began to become apparent that psychotherapy, vocational counseling, education programs and the like were not working. Crime was on the increase and the rate of recidivism was little changed.

Then came something called behavior modification. Instead of "coddling" criminals with psychotherapy and trying to understand them, the idea now was to focus on the deviant behavior and, by means of sophisticated behavior-control technology and systematically applied rewards and punishments, force them to shape up.

But now the future of this youngest school of penology is in doubt. Last month two federal agencies, the Bureau of Prisons and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), announced that they were ceasing to fund projects involving behavior modification. Professional criticism of this controversial approach to crime and punishment is also mounting.

"Being locked up should be of sufficient punishment," says Albert Bandura, president of the American Psychological Assn. "Society has no moral or legal right to force an individual to change. If I am black and am put in prison because I'm opposed to the political and social system in this country, I sure as hell wouldn't want behavior modification forced upon me."

At the other extreme is James V. McConnell, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan:

"I don't believe the Constitution of the United States gives you the right to commit a crime if you want to; therefore, the Constitution does not guarantee you the right to maintain inviolable the personality it forced on you in the first place — if and when the personality manifests strongly antisocial behavior."

Unfortunately, for the one point of view, imprisonment is very often not enough. For the other, behavior modification smacks too much of something like Big Brother would like to use "for our own good."

In the meantime, while the experts argue, crime marches on.

Play ball!

"The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the umpire is heard in our land." That, of course, is not quite the way the Song of Solomon puts it, but it seems a fairly appropriate adaptation for welcoming the new baseball season.

On playgrounds and sandlots, in the yawning spaciousness of great stadiums the crack of bat against ball, the plop of a basket catch in the outfield, the bellows of the umps are with us again.

Admittedly, baseball has slipped as the national pastime, despite some Charlie Finleyish improvisations. The crowds aren't what they used to be, and pro football lays claim to preeminence among the fans. But it's still a grand old game.

In California the Dodgers go on much the same, but the Giants have become a new, young team. .

Willie McCovey having turned into a Padre in San Diego, where it's warm, Big Mac weather. The A's, thanks to Finley, have an unofficial designated runner to assist their quest of a third straight world title, and the Angels have spread their wings in the hopes of flying higher.

The minors are filled with hopes springing eternal in the young breast, and a lot of people are going to have fun again at the old ball park. Play ball!

IRS agents work on quota system

WASHINGTON — Few stories have so infuriated taxpayers, as they make out their returns this month, than the discovery that President Nixon for two years paid less taxes than did many an unskilled ditch digger.

The Internal Revenue Service conducted a polite audit and notified the President: "Our examination of your income tax returns for the years 1971 and 1972 revealed that they are correct." The IRS even complimented him "on the care shown in the preparation of your returns."

Now a joint congressional committee, which investigated the President's returns at his invitation, has come up with evidence that the IRS audit was a whitewash. A staff report charges he owes a staggering $476,531 in back taxes.

The government's tax collectors, after all, are sworn not to favor presidents over paupers. Yet a Senate subcommittee has found that the IRS often browbeats and bullies millions of ordinary citizens who patiently pay their fair taxes before April 15 year after year.

Later this week, the subcommittee under Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M., will hear from ex-IRS agents, tax experts and individual taxpayers. These witnesses, backed by Montoya's detective work will charge that the IRS doesn't always understand the difference between "prosecute" and "persecute." Some authorities go after unpaid taxes as if it were their lone mission to collect enough revenue for President Nixon to reduce his budget.

Montoya's investigator's have prepared a confidential staff report, citing heretofore unknown but "documented horror stories," which will be revealed at the hearings. Witnesses will tell of their "fear" of the IRS "based on past experiences and hearsay," the report states. There will be testimony, too, about the "dangers faced by 'the little guy' in the middle of complex and sometimes unfair IRS audit procedures."

Harassed taxpayers, who try to find out what mysterious rules govern their tax returns, often encounter stern silence from the IRS on the grounds the information is classified.

Evidence collected by Montoya shows this "secrecy" has led to "diminishment of taxpayer rights, continuance of questionable IRS policies and practices, and abuse of IRS power and discretion by those within and outside the IRS."

One of the most discomforting facts turned up by Montoya is that revenue agents, despite IRS denials, still are saddled with "a dollar production" quota. This sometimes forces them to order arbitrary audits. The national target quota for 1972, Montoya has learned, was $3.4 billion.

Although the quotas are merely "recommended," the Senate sleuths can show that district directors who fall below the "recommended tax and penalties" quota can expect quiet pressure from Washington. Indeed, the IRS is so eager to hold agents responsible for specific sums that separate quota estimates are set for individuals, financial institutions, estates, gift taxes and excise taxes.

The biggest audit quotas were assigned in 1973 to the North Atlantic states, followed by the Midwest, Middle Atlantic, Central Region, Southeast and Southwest. The three cities expected to produce the highest quota income are New York (Manhattan), Chicago and Los Angeles.

Among the "horror stories" uncovered by Montoya are these:

—Montoya's men put the same identical tax question to two IRS counselors, one in Washington, D.C., the other in Topeka, Kans. The IRS experts gave exactly opposite answers. Yet if the taxpayer had misguessed which IRS expert to believe, he might have been audited.

—An "exemption was allowed for a taxpayer's mother in 1970 but disallowed in 1971" on the same set of facts. The taxpayer, of course, was "entitled to exemption in both cases."

—A Chinese-speaking taxpayer not only was denied exemption for his four children but was billed $600 for them. The IRS refused to make a correction until the Community Tax Aid organization in New York squeezed out both a correction and an apology.

—The IRS sent an amended tax form to a taxpayer with a handwritten note at the bottom requesting: "Please sign . . . Return this copy." The form was a waiver of all the taxpayer's rights.

—IRS publications have so confounded the instructions for self-employment taxes that they are almost impossible to decipher. The befuddled taxpayers, therefore, almost invariably use "the optional method (which) results in a higher tax."

—The IRS computers have been used almost exclusively to catch taxpayers who pay too few taxes, almost never to help taxpayers who pay too much.

—President Nixon, members of Congress and other politicians get polite, patient counseling from IRS at tax time. But the IRS' telephone counseling service for nonpoliticians is sometimes manned by incompetents. No more than a high school education and two weeks of training qualify an employe as a "tax expert." While some give excellent advice, wrong information is commonplace.

—The IRS set up a service center for city dwellers, intended chiefly for the elderly and the poor, far from any public transportation outside the city. In another case, an IRS service center had an unlisted phone number.

—Among the most dramatic witnesses will be Hank Greenspun, the flamboyant Las Vegas publisher. The Montoya study says Greenspun will describe his own "audit harrassment" by the IRS. He was supposed to have been the target of a break-in by the White House "plumbers" who reportedly sought certain Howard Hughes documents in Greenspun's safe. Thereafter, Greenspun suddenly found himself the victim of an IRS audit which, after extraordinary harassment, gave him a clean bill.

A strike by some 15,000 so-called miscellaneous workers in a metropolitan government such as San Francisco's over pay raises, dental care and such, is just a problem between unions and the city. Right? No.

San Francisco's strike not only put thousands of citizens back on shank's mare, fouled up things for airline passengers, kept East Bay commute workers from getting to their jobs, silenced the City's beloved clack-clack of the cables, disrupted schools . . . it forced quarantines of all waters within San Francisco's city limits, the Bay south some 30 miles, and the Pacific ocean coastal waters a similar distance south of Golden Gate.

Involved in the quarantine were salmon, striped bass, numerous varieties of perch and bottom fish. Crab fishery also was endangered, as were mussel and oysters. Possibly even abalone, the season for which has just opened.

All because the strike over pay and dental care and such unfortunately closed San Francisco's three municipal sewage treatment plants for three or four days.

During those days, hundreds of millions of gallons of raw sewage poured into the Bay and the Pacific Ocean. Various state officials sounded warnings and expressed concern over the long-time effect such contamination could have.

Charles Fullerton of the Dept. of Fish and Game was quoted as saying that raw sewage could damage the crab fishery in the area because the Bay is its chief nursery. Also he expressed fear that the good work accomplished by water quality improvement programs in restoring natural mussel and oyster beds in the southern part of San Francisco Bay could be set back seriously.

One official of the Regional Water Quality Control Board cited lab test evidence that bacteria levels along the affected ocean shores exceeded the standards for protection of public health. Human waste along the shoreline could cause an epidemic, he warned; and said mussels, oysters, clams and other shellfish in the area were considered contaminated. He wouldn't "eat anything that came out of the Bay right now," he added.

Parochial though the San Francisco strike might be considered in other parts of the state, its peripheral and poisonous effect on the surrounding environment bears a lesson for all communities, all persons who take aggressive action in an effort to improve their personal condition, justified or not.

Men indeed are not islands, as John Donne suggested. The bells toll for me as well as thee.

The death penalty

Didn't the peoople of California vote to reactivate the death penalty? What has happened to this mandate?

Faced with the headlines of today's newspapers the people surely are cognizant of the capital crimes committed daily in our fair country. But there is no account of convicted murderers, rapists, kidnapers being gotten rid of. Many are back on the streets.

World wide we are experiencing a new dimension—an alliance of terrorism. Irish, Palestinian, German terrorists are training in the Middle East. They exchange not only weapons but tactics with Asian, African and American activists. When a tactic proves to be successful in one country, terrorist groups in other countries imitate an example.

Terrorists are becoming more vicious and indiscriminate. To combat the wave of terrorism security forces are taking virtual wartime precaution at airports, embassies, oil facilities and other likely targets.

It would seem that the most vicious and crippling are the kidnapers. To give in to their demands only sinks us deeper and deeper into a morass of crime. When these individuals are caught and convicted what happens? The firing squad is too good for them. Is the electric chair too expensive?

Gossip for today

Experts agree that by the year 2000 solar energy could save the U.S. $100 billion in crude oil imports; and they estimate that a solar energy development expenditure of approximately $1 billion would definitely make that $100 billion a year saving possible. To date, however, the government has decided it has only $20 million available for perfecting solar energy. — As worthy as such a project might be, government officials just can't conscientiously countenance the robbing of Peter to pay Paul.

After all, they point out, there are many other worthy causes on which taxpayers' dollars should be expended. There was that $70,000, for instance, allocated for a study of the odor of perspiration given off by Australian aborigines, not to mention the $121,000 spent to find out why people say "ain't". And even though an age old law of mathematics says you can't square the circle, some funds just had to be budgeted for educators at U of C at Davis who are attemping to produce square tomatoes.

President 'taxes' the legal limit

WASHINGTON — Unpalatable reality is always harder to bear than the anticipation of that reality. This surely can be said of the findings that President Nixon owes the United States government somewhere around $470,000 in back taxes.

It will do him no good that he has announced he will not fight the official judgments but will pay. The great political commonplace of 1974 is that his generally small tax payments in his first four-year term (twice totaling less than $1,000 a year) have outraged the American public more than anything he may have done or not done about the great Watergate scandal.

Significant in the highest degree, of course, is the firm word that findings of the Internal Revenue Service closely coincide with the 210-page report of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation in Congress. Mr. Nixon had invited the committee's inquiry last year when he made his income tax returns public.

In asserting that the President would pay the huge sums owed, the White House was at pains to note specifically that the IRS finding (not made public at this writing) "rebuts any suggestion of fraud on the part of the President . . . The committee's staff report offers no facts which would support any such charge."

We are on delicate ground here. But I have consulted a source highly experienced in the workings of the federal tax laws, and his judgments do not back up the utterances from the White House.

My expert's word is that if any ordinary citizen employed the practices embodied in the President's 1969-72 federal income tax returns, he would indeed be wholly open to charges of either civil or criminal fraud.

Disputes over taxes which stop short of fraud are those which involve differing, though innocent and thus legitimately variable, interpretations of the tax laws.

What establishes fraud is "intent," that is, deliberate intent on the part of the taxpayer to misinterpret his income, the size or character of his expenses and deductions, or any other major aspect of his returns.

We must remember, in this instance, that the President himself — before ascending to the White House — was practicing some tax law in his New York firm. We must also remember that he had at his elbow, high-paid lawyers dealing with exceedingly complex tax issues, and that it has to be a foregone conclusion that they were chosen for their tax expertise.

Yet the improper practices set forth in Mr. Nixon's returns are of such an order that their invalidity is made clear in elemental tax guidebooks of the kind you can buy for a dollar or two in any bookstore.

The worst offense, obviously, is the now celebrated back-dating of documents to "legitimize" his taking as a deduction $576,000 for donation of his vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

Second in magnitude was his failure to report a capital gain of $117,000 from sale of excess acreage at his San Clemente "western White House."

Nor was it legal to defer a capital gain on sale of his New York apartment, since San Clemente is not his "principal residence," and clearly he can't have two main residences — San Clemente and Key Biscayne, Fla.

It is also rated fraudulent to split capital gains income, as Mr. Nixon did with his daughter, Tricia, on some Florida real estate.

All this, he and his lawyers had to know — and "intend."

County supervisors given report on L.A. recycling

SAN BERNARDINO (CNA) — Getting a view of Los Angeles industry, County Supervisor Robert O. Townsend, Chino returned home to give his colleagues some impressions on recycling at the board's Monday meeting.

Townsend was high in his praise of the way Los Angeles handles its recycling of otherwise waste material. His impression was that the plants are exceptionally clean in operation, not contributing to industrial pollution of the air.

"Of course, Los Angeles has the money to do many things we can't afford," Townsend reported. "But it does have good plants from which we might draw a workable pattern fitting into our financial limitations. In fact, the big neighbor to the west has one plant with the latest equipment. It is so sophisticated that it sorts out recycling obstacles — cans from paper, etc."

Other board members went along with him in the approach to more light industry. Chariman Nancy E. Smith added that the county is doing its part in a number of ways, including use of a paper shredder where outmoded documents and all interoffice communications no longer are needed.

KENNETH B. McCANDLESS

University Club has a new leader

CLAREMONT — Kenneth B. McCandless, director of estate planning at Scripps College, has assumed his new duties as president of the University Club of Claremont.

McCandless was installed by retiring president Ferdinand F. Fernandez at the club's meeting recently at Griswold's.

He first came to Claremont as pastor of the Claremont Presbyterian Church, then a new congregation with 200 members.

He joined the Scripps College staff in 1968.

He has served as president of the board of Family Service Association of Claremont, and was one of the organizers and a director of the pastoral counseling center.

He directed a successful capital funds drive at Scripps College, and served on the human resources committee of the city which hired a human resources coordinator.

AFS youths address club in Claremont

CLAREMONT — Students going to public school in Austria and Sweden must learn British English, and at least one or two other foreign languages besides their own native tongue, according to American Field Service teenagers attending Claremont High School.

Audri Valenta, who was born in Czechoslovakia but moved with her family to Austria six years ago, explained to the Kiwanis Club last week that the school she attends outside of Vienna is strict and conservative and described her teachers as old and conservative.

"Claremont High allows a lot of freedom," she said. "We can make our own decisions."

Hans Hertz of Sweden complained about the Pomon Valley smog and said that he has had a cold since last October.

He explained the town of Lund where he lives as being built in the early 1000s. He said that his house probably was built in the 1700s.

Hertz explained how a youth in Sweden must study English three years, go to school nine years, but may elect his own major.

For a foreign student to study in the U.S. during the winter it costs $850, Mrs. Bovard explained.

BARBARA HARVEY

Claremont coed vies in bank contest

LOS ANGELES — Barbara Harvey of Claremont, a Citrus College business major, is among eight community college students in the Los Angeles area who will be finalists in Bank of America's annual college awards program.

Miss Harvey won $250 as a semifinalist in recently held Area 1 competition. She will compete May 1 at the Hilton Hotel for one of four $2,000 first place awards.

There will also be four $1,000 second place awards and four $500 third place awards.

Some 400 California community college students will share in $85,500 in prize money in competitions based on their knowledge in one of the four areas of business, technical-vocational, social science-humanities, and science and engineering.

Stafford charges

3 GOP congressmen deserted constituents

CLAREMONT — Bob Stafford, Democratic candidate in the newly formed 35th Congressional District, has accused current congressional representatives of walking out on their constituents.

In a recent address before student political leaders of the Claremont Colleges, Stafford charged three congressmen with insuring their political security at the expense of those who elected them.

He claimed that Rep. Jerry L. Pettis, R-33rd Dist., and Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-25th Dist., "were elected to represent the areas that now make up the new (35th) district, but both these Republican leaders walked out on the people who elected them."

Stafford further charged that Rep. Victor Veysey, R-43rd Dist., moved into the 35th District "to set himself up as the incumbent congressmen . . . in a quest for votes to return him to Congress."

He claimed Veysey was more interested "with his Washington residence than he is with the people who believed in his ability to represent their needs."

Stafford, a Claremont attorney and school board member, will speak tonight at 8 before the San Gabriel Valley section of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers. The event is scheduled for Steele Hall, Caltech. Stafford plans to speak on "Pensions and Other Socio-economic Concerns of Engineers."

Geologic hazards

Report may doom Chino Hills Airport

CHINO — The principle environmental value of the Chino Hills is its importance as an open space. And geologic hazards make it mandatory that development proposals be carefully considered and adjusted to prevent destruction to life and property.

These are the major findings of a study by the State Office of Planning and Research, done at the request of Assemblyman John Briggs, R-35th Dist.

"I have, therefore, requested the state geologist on the basis of this study to designate the Chino Hills area as being a hazardous zone as defined under provisions of the Alquist-Priolo Geologic Hazards Act," said Briggs.

"The findings of this study should help us, once and for all, to bury the idea of any airport in the Chino Hills," said Briggs, of Fullerton, who represents sections of San Bernardino and Orange counties which includes the Chino Hills.

A major jetport to cover 4,000 acres straddling the two counties is proposed by the Chino Hills Airport Complex, Inc., a nonprofit group. Developers plan to build two 12,000-foot runways to handle 10,000 commercial and 20,000 general aviation operations a year.

Such a proposal has been opposed by various citizen groups and city and county legislators. It is also being supported initially by the cities of Chino, Anaheim and Stanton. The three signed as governmental sponsors to make the project's feasibility study eligible for federal funding.

John Lowman, president of the airport group, said it will take five months to determine the study method and another 19 months to complete the project if authorized. The toal study cost is estimated at $900,000.

The planning and research office study included these findings:

—The striking feature of the Chino Hills is its visual prominence, with 2.5 million persons living within direct visual contact and nearly twice that many "comings and goings" in the busy metropolitan area who have the opportunity to see and enjoy its vistas.

—Consideration should be given to a cooperative regional approach to planning and development of recreation facilities. Chino Hills is at the juncture of four counties: Orange, Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Riverside. The study area comprises 61,000 acres. More than eight million persons live within 40 miles of Chino Hills.

—Although the Chino Hills, because of its terrain, vegetation and openness, is a plesant area to behold, it does not have the values that would set it aside as a park, reserve or wilderness area.

—The Chino Hills are an extension of an open space affording an important connection between the more remote Cleveland National Forest and heavily urbanized areas surrounding the Chino Hills.

—Grazing is a primary agricultural pursuit but is not of high caliber. The Chino Hills is deficient in underground water reserves and this militates against extensive recreational development.

—The Chino Hills contain two major earthquake fault systems,—the Whittier Fault and the Chino Fault—toogether with some minor fault systems. These may be designated as active faults under terms of the Alquist-Priolo Geologic Hazards Act.

—There are also other geologic hazards, landslides, subsidence, erosion activity and expansive soils rated as sufficient in severity to establish them as areas of potential statewide critical concern.

—There are many problems of development. More than half the area has slopes in excess of 25 per cent and at least a quarter of the area is above 45 per cent slopes.

Student at Scripps on Campus Afloat

CLAREMONT — Constance De La Vega of Mexico, a junior international relations major at Scripps College, is spending the current spring semester aboard Chapman College's World Campus Afloat program.

Miss De La Vega is among 531 students from 200 colleges and universities who will be visiting ports in the Far East, India and Africa on the study voyage that began Feb. 5.

Chaffey High Merit winner is disclosed

ONTARIO Chaffey High School senior Betty P. Cowin has been named a finalist in the 1974 National Merit Scholarship program.

She is the first Chaffey student to qualify and will compete with over 14,000 finalists for approximately 1,000 one-time National Merit $1000 scholarships and for about 2,100 renewable merit scholarships.

To qualify, Miss Cowin had to have endorsements from Chaffey counselors and teachers. Transcrips of school activities and her 4.0 grade point average were entered in the Merit Contest.

As a semifinalist she was required to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and have a high performance score.

She will receive a certificate of merit for her high standing as a finalist. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy M. Cowin of 866 W. Fourth St.

Energy crisis worries public health agencies

WASHINGTO (PI) — The energy crisis has hurt the operations of public health organizations and could be a "potential tragedy" if health agencies fail to get extra fuel allocations, three groups said today.

The three —the American Public Health Assoriation, the National Association of Counties and the National League for Nursing —recommended formation of a coalition of public health agencies to fight for a higher fuel priority.

The groups said they questioned more than 300 state and local health agencies and visiting nurse associations in a study on the effect of the energy shortage on their operations.

The study showed the agencies are faced with higher costs because of rising heating fuel and gasoline prices. Related problems of higher reimbursement for employes using their own cars, loss of time, and inconvenience were also cited.

"A lack of availability of gas, combined with a higher price of that fuel, plus the increased cost of heating oil and petrochemical products, can greatly impede these agencies that already lack sufficient funds to provide services," the study said.

It said there has also been "an insensitivity to the problems of these public health agencies, to the important services they provide, and their reliance on petroleum and petrochemical products.

"If this situation continues, it could represent a potential tragedy for many citizens of this nation."

The proposed coalition of health agencies, the groups said, would work closely with government offices in trying to reorder priorities for fuel supplies in case the present energy shortage continues or another one occurs.

Report Mandel administration being probed

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The federal investigation into corruption in Maryland politics, which forced Spiro T. Agnew to resign the vice presidency last year, is looking into Gov. Marvin Mandel's administration, the Baltimore Evening Sun reported.

Mandel says "the state records are open and available to anyone who wants to look at them."

The Sun said the inquiry involves "a direct relationship" between the awarding of state engineering contracts and business done by the Tidewater Insurance Agency, Inc., owned by two supporters of Mandel, W. Dale Hess and Harry W.Rodgers III.

U. S. Attorney George Beall refused specific comment, saying only, "I won't say yes and I won't say no. I just can't comment with regard to specific individuals who we may or may not be investigating." The newspaper said investigators are acting on allegations made by at least one of the witnesses who played a key role in the kickback cases against Agnew and Baltimore County Executive Dale Anderson, who was convicted last month on 32 corruption charges.

The newspaper said that Tidewater has rereived a considerable amount of state business and until last week was connected with the engineering firm of Zollman associates. Zollman's share of state business has increased since Mandel succeeded Agnew as governor in 1968.

Drinking ban sought to cool unruly

BOSTON (UPI) — One way to cool bunches of unruly young people during long spring annd summer nights is to ban public drinking, and there is a trend among Massachusettts communities to enact such laws, a state official says.

Carter Lee of the attorney general's office said that "already this year we've had two dozen applications."

"The reason is complaints from local citizens," said Police Chief Charles F. Hart,of Lawrence. "You get young people on main streets, parking lots and parks, drinking on the hoods of their cars, throwing bottles around."

"We don't want to harass people but we need this law as a tool to give service to other citizens. The guy who drinks from his flask while waiting for a bus won't be bothered," Hart said.

The new community laws generally forbid the drinking of alcoholic beverages "while on or in any public way or upon any way that the public has the right of access to."

Board rules girls may wear slacks

TRENTON N.J. (UPI) — Girls may wear slacks to school, the state Education Department has ruled.

The department said the school officials at Sea Girt, N.J. were wrong in sending a first-grade girl home last Sept. 10 because she went to classes in slacks.

The Sea Girt school sent the girl home for violating a school dress code that required "acceptable school attire...commensurate to (students') status as young ladies and young gentlemen in a proud new school."

Campus beer bar changing with the times

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Herb Kauvar is trading in his 3.2 beer for salami on rye. He's closing "The Sink," the corner bar for University of Colorado students that has more tradition than college ivy.

"Herb's Delicatessen" opens this week.

"There's nothing else I can do," said Kauvar, sporting a baseball cap and watching the remodeling. "I'm not making the money I used to. CU is allowing beer and whisky in the dorms now. Where's the choice?"

Legends of "The Sink" are as varied as the names carved in its wooden tables by generations of students. Miss America once stopped in, ignored the beer, but said Kauvar's hamburger's were unexcelled.

There always was a kind of low class to the bar. The plumbing was painted bright red, fraternity symbols were burned into the walls and Kauvar used to turn away patrons for fear they would violate fire safety occupancy laws.

Kauvar said his delicatessen will still serve beer "but we won't be anything like the old place. We're going to have carpeting and new ceilings and new walls, that sort of thing."

Kauvar took over the bar on what is known as "The Hill" section of this college town of 70,000 persons at the foot of the Colorado Rockies in 1958. Times and drinkers have changed, he said.

"The whole idea of the Bohemian effect is more or less disappearing," Kauvar said. "You have to go with the times. I can't look back. I have to look ahead."

Pouring beer for 14 years has given Kauvar a chance to watch young persons. He said they've changed and he's not too sure he likes it.

"They are a different breed nowadays," he said. "I just don't think they want to be as friendly, but basically, they are still good kids."

The drug scene hurt, too, he said. The advent of the "street people" throughout the area turned a number of students sour on the idea of spending afternoons in the dim light of the bar.

"A lot of kids didn't like that action," Kauvar said.

He said he probably would sell the scarred tables and posters at an auction and give the money to charity.

"We just weren't doing enough volume," he said. "It really doesn't bother me a bit, changing it around like this."

Briefs in the news

Next shortage? how does coffee sound?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cry your hearts out, coffee lovers. The next shortage is going to hit you right in the percolator.

Droughts and frosts have reduced the world's exportable coffee production for 1973-74 by approximately 20 per cent, down to 44.7 million bags, according to the Agriculture Department. The department said recently that dry weather in Africa and frost damage in Brazil lowered overall production to 64.3 million bags of 132.3 pounds each, down 16 per cent from the 1972-73 crop of 76.4 million bags.

Fuel 'hot line' to Las Vegas operating

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — A fuel information "hot line" has been set up by the Las Vegas resort industry to help tourists motoring to the city on Interstate 15.

Motorists planning a trip to the gambling center can call (800) 462-8951 for current information on open service stations along the route, the locations and days and hours of operation.

The "hot line" will include stations in San Bernardino, Victorville, Barstow and Baker, in addition to stations on the freeway and in Las Vegas.

2 to 3 years before Watergate concludes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although most Americans would like to see Watergate disappear and the nation get on with its business, special prosecutor Leon Jaworski says it may be two or three years before the country is free from the scandal and its ramifications.

Early disposition of all the Watergate cases yet to reach the indictment stage, he said in an interview with U.S. News & World Report, "would come about only if all potential defendants were to negotiate and enter pleas of guilty. And that is not to be expected.

"With a number of trials — and making allowances for appeals —it could be a matter of two, perhaps three years, before we've heard the last of Watergate."

He said he wants White House documents on two matters now being investigated by a grand jury—illegal contributions in the 1972 political campaign and the awarding of ambassadorships in return for campaign contributions.

26 school children die in bus crash

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A truck jammed with schoolchildren plunged into a 700-foot ravine in Kashmir state Sunday night, killing 26 and injuring 44, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said today.

PTI said the accident occurred at Jindrah as the children were returning from an outing. Indian army rescue teams from Nagrota army camp helped recover the dead and injured.

It was the second major accident in Kashmir during the past two weeks. On March 28, a bus plunged into a 1,000-foot ravine, killing 18 and injuring 17 others.

Mass. lawmakers turn down legal prostitution zones

BOSTON (UPI) — The Massachusetts House has turned down a proposal to legalize prostitution in zoned areas.

"There is nothing wrong with prostitution, discreetly carried on," argued Rep. Barney Frank, whose constituency includes Boston's "Combat Zone," of strip joints and other nighttime activities.

Frank proposed permitting prostitution in zoned areas of Massachusetts cities, contending this would be healthier than the illicit flesh peddling which goes on regardless of the law.

Rep. Bruce Zeiser, a foe of the proposed legislation, said: "Zoning is a regulation of the use of land, and not of bodies."

Father Berrigan becomes a father

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Rev. Philip Berrigan, a Roman Catholic Josephite priest, and his wife, a former nun, became parents of a daughter, he disclosed recently.

Berrigan, 50, who never resigned from the priesthood but no longer has religious duties with the church, said they named their child Frida, after his 88-year old mother and because the name is derived from the German word for "peace."

Berrigan said his wife, former sister Elizabeth McAllister, 34, gave birth recently to the 9½ pound girl at the Jonah House, their home in Baltimore, which is also a center for Catholic antiwar activities.

PLAYMATES — Florida, a dolphin who prefers human company to the open sea, frolics with Christy Kyser in the dolphins' private lagoon at Key Biscayne, Fla. The gates were opened last month and the mammals were encouraged to return to the open sea, but Florida and another one decided to stay.

Death toll shows dip

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Highway accidents took the lives of 4,905 persons last year in California, 91 fewer than in 1972, the state Office of Traffic Safety reported Friday.

The final tabulation of statewide traffic statistics for 1973 also showed a fatality rate of 3.7 deaths per each 100 million miles of travel compared with a 3.9 rate in 1972

The mileage death rate was based on an estimated 132.5 billion miles traveled in California last year.

A spokesman said the reduction of traffic deaths and accidents involving injuries was the result of the highway patrol's intensified crackdown on drunken drivers, speeding trucks and generally better weather.

$2.4 million saved by L.A. consumer unit

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The LOS Angeles Municipal Bureau of Consumers Affairs saved residents $2.4 million in the past two years and won convictions in all the cases that went to court, it was announced today.

The bureau's manager, Fern Jellison, said more than 19,000 cases had been handled and the savings figure was based on the market value of services performed, money refunded and contracts cancelled.

She said the bureau received 850 consumer complaints a month since its inception two years ago

According to Mrs. Jellison, the buck stops at the BCA office.

World's exploding population will reach four billion within a year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Earth is supporting an estimated 3.919 billion people today. In a month, there will be roughly 7 million more humans on the planet.

The world's population will reach the 4 billion mark next year, according to conservative projections of the United Nations, and in another 25 years there should be more than 6 billion of us.

This is all the more staggering when one considers that it took from the beginning of man to about the year 840 for the world's population to reach its first billion.

The globe's nations are not all increasing their numbers at the same rates. The richer countries are growing far more slowly than the poorer, underdeveloped lands in Latin America, Africa and Asia.

What are the consequences of this burgeoning global population, and how urgent is the need to apply the brakes?

The principal concern is that the planet may not be able to feed and otherwise support the great masses of people that could eventually inhabit it. But long before the limits are reached, the quality of life among the world's people would be expected to deteriorate.

And even if fertility rates decline to the point where families are producing only enough children to replace parents, there are estimates that the world population will not stabilize until late in the next century —at around the 8 to 10 billion level.

It has been said that unrestrained population growth is the greatest threat to human well being with the exception of the possibility of nuclear warfare.

"We are attempting to deal with finite limitations of resources in the face of what appears to be infinite human potential for procreation," said Dr. J. George Harrar, president emeritus of the Rockefeller Foundation.

"Our numbers are increasing like compound interest and unless it is possible to stabilize the world population through prompt and measureable progress towards zero population growth, the ultimate result can only be chaos," he told the American Association for the Advancement of Science at its recent annual meeting in San Francisco.

Global conference

The United Nations has designated 1974 as World Population Year, and representatives of most of the world's nations will meet in Bucharest Aug. 19 to 30 in the first such global conference on the population situation.

The conference will consider the most comprehensive and ambitious plan for a worldwide population policy ever formulated. Its ultimate objective is to improve the level of living and quality of life for all earth's people.

The plan is not merely aimed at curtailing world population growth, but one of its main objectives is to channel this growth within reasonable limits to forestall catastrophic conditions within a few generations.

The reason the world's population is accelerating so quickly is not simply that more women are bearing more children, but that their offspring are living longer. Better health care has raised the average life expectancy of a newborn child to 71 years in the developed countries, compared with 45 at the turn of this century.

In the less developed nations, the expectation of long life is not so bright. The average life expectancy of a child born in Latin America is 62. In Asia it is around 57 and it is only 47 years in Africa. Another way to look at it is that while on the average one out of 57 children dies before reaching the age of one year in the United States, the UN Population Commission said one of every 15 dies before reaching that age in Latin America, one of every 10 in Asia and one of every 7 in Africa.

"In some developing nations in fact, particularly African countries south of the Sahara, expectation of life at birth is less than 40 years and one of every four children dies before the age of one year," the commission said.

Medical researchers say there is little hope that the average life expectancy of a healthy adult in the United States or other industrialized nations can be lengthened substantially until fundamental breakthroughs are made in understanding aging processes. But improvements in medical care are expected to cut death rates in underdeveloped lands, particularly Africa, so that population growth rates will continue to increase even if birthrates level off.

Goal of draft

One goal of the UN's draft population plan is that the average life expectancy of all less developed countries should exceed 62 years by 1985 and should approach that of the developed natons by the year 2000.

Nearly three quarters of the world's peoples live in the less developed nations. And it is in these areas where the great majority of the world's underfed people live. An estimated 500 million are starving now and 1.5 billion are malnourished, according to Dr. John Knowles of the Rockefeller Foundation.

"It is no coincidence that the countries with the highest rates of population increase also report the highest rates of infant and preschool deaths, and have the most serious malnutrition among their lower income groups," said Dr. Nevin S. Scrimshaw, professor of human nutrition at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "Malnutrition is in fact that major determinant of these high death rates."

He said high infant mortality and malnutrition of mother and child is a major deterrent to the acceptance of family planning in the underdeveloped nations. People are reluctant to limit the size of their families until they are assured the majority of their children will survive.

Agriculture research has made great strides in the past decade and, as a result, the industrialized countries have more food of greater diversity and higher quality than ever before. But progress has been slower in the developing nations.

Food production increased at an average of 7 per cent per person worldwide during the past decades. But much of this extra food went to the wealthy nations, averaging a 16 per cent increase per person over relatively high levels that existed earlier. In the developing world, per capita food production in the decade of the '60s increased only 2 per cent over a level that was low to begin with. And Africa actually experienced a 1 per cent per capita loss.

Grain is the most important source of food for man and slightly more than half his energy is derived from the direct consumption of grain, particularly rice and wheat. Thirteen per cent comes from other plants, beans, peas, lentils and soybeans.

There was a small increase in farmland devoted to growing grain in the past decade, but a large jump in production of grain per acre, thanks to the technology of the "green revolution" of the last few years.

The problem with global food supply is that while the population is more concentrated in Africa, Europe and Asia, there is slightly less than 1 acre of arable land per person in the Old World compared to almost 2 acres per person in the New World.

Farmland shrinks

And as the population of the globe grows, the amount of farmland per person shrinks — and the shrinkage is much faster in Africa and Asia where the population is growing faster.

The UN's Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) has estimated the world's food supply must increase by 120 per cent by the year 2000 just to keep up with the projected population growth. An increase of 225 per cent would be needed to provide sufficient food for everyone.

Most of the world is now turning more and more to the United States, Canada and Australia for grain. Harrar, of the Rockefeller Foundation, said the current situation "reemphasizes the absolute necessity of developing a world food plan in which all nations with an agricultural industry should participate for the universal good."

But he said that unless family planning is widely adopted as a constraint on a burgeoning population, all efforts to satisfy the basic need for bread "will be overwhelmed by the numbers of claimants for limited quantities of nutrients.

"If population stabilization occurs on an increasing scale, then we can meet the problems of world nutrition."

Ninety-four per cent of the world's people live in countries with at least some family planning services, according to the International Planned Parenthood Federation. And 59 of the world's 118 developing countries have official policies to either reduce population growth rates or to support family planning for health care reasons.

But the availability of family planning services and putting them into practice with large numbers of people are two different matters.

India, which has a population of 562 million in 1972, has had birth control programs since 1951 but its annual population growth rate is 2.5 per cent which means its population will double at that rate in 28 years. It had an annual birth rate of 38 per 1,000 in 1971 with a death rate of less than half that.

The Indian government has recently improved its birth control effort and now has 42,000 family planning centers aimed at reducing the growth rate to 1.5 per cent within a decade.

China, with an estimated population of 800 million in 1972, has had an official birth control program for 12 years and the government strongly advocates late marriage and small families. The nation's population, however, is growing by an estimated 15 million a year.

Hong Kong, with a population two years ago of 4 million, has had a highly successful family planning program and its birth rate dropped from 36 live births per 1,000 people in 1960 to 19.7 in 1972.

The U. S. birth rate, in comparison, was 14.6 per 1,000 as of the end of 1973. It was 17.3 in 1971, and at that time 9.3 deaths were recorded for every 1,000 Americans.

Nigeria, on the other hand, had an estimated birth rate of about 55 per 1,000 in 1972 —one of the highest in the world. Its annual death rate also was high, 27 deaths per 1,000. The Nigerian government in 1970 adopted a position "to encourage the citizens to develop a balanced view of the opportunities for individual family planning on a voluntary basis . . ."

Cameroon, with a population of 6.1 million in 1972, considers the country to be underpopulated and does not promote family planning. It had a birth rate of 50 per 1,000 in 1971 and a death rate of 26 per 1,000.

Honduras high

In Latin America, Honduras had one of the highest birth rates, 49 per 1,000 in 1971 with a death rate of 17, giving it an annual natural increase in people of 32 per 1,000.

Brazil, with a population of 100 million in 1972, had a birth rate of 41 in 1971 and has no government family planning program although some services are provided by a private association. Mexico, with a birth rate of 44, actively promotes responsible parenthood.

The UN draft of the proposal to be presented to the World Population Conference this summer urges all countries to make family planning information and means available by 1985 to all those who desire it.

While careful to state that it is the responsibility of each nation to determine its own population policies, the UN plan suggests that nations with very high birth rates —more than 40 per 1,000 —might consider reducing these rates on the order of 10 per thousand by 1985.

"While no universal family size norm is recommended, it is recognized that a majority of world population lives in countries that wish to reduce present fertility levels, and a large majority lives in countries that favor small family size norms," the draft said.

But even if world fertility by the year 2000 were cut in half —to the replacement level of two children per family —the Population Council said the world's population would grow by 2 billion people to 5.9 billion. The Council said such a fertility reduction was an optimistic but possible prospect.

Scientists do not yet have a clear view of the ultimate limits of earth's life supporting capacity.

"It is clear, nevertheless, that planetary disaster is not immediately in prospect but that the need exists for the formulation of national, regional and global policies to avoid the deterioration of the biosphere and to improve the quality of life for all mankind," the UN Population Commission says.

LESS DEADLY USE for Cambodian government troops' ammunition cases has been discovered by the children of Tuol Kei village, six miles south of Phnom Penh where fighting continues. The boys use the wheeled-boxes to cart drinking water to their family huts.

Medical clinic open at S.F. airport

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Jet age travelers will be able to find emergency treatment for illness or injury at a new medical clinic opened at San Francisco International Airport. The clinic also makes full medical services available to more than 25,000 airport employes, including preventive health care in a computerized physical checkup center.

Spirit of Arthurdale wanes; maybe what we need is another depression

By TOM TIEDE

ARTHURDALE, W. VA. — (NEA) — The well-fed young woman got out of a new car and walked into Jean's bar. She removed a stylish doubleknit coat and rapped the table with a $300 set of wedding rings.

"My God," she groaned, "I was shopping in Kingswood this morning. Coffee's up four cents, bread is up another penny. I spent $38 and got two sacks of groceries. If you ask me we're heading for collapse; it's like another depression."

Nobdoy has asked the young woman. And nobody felt any special sympathy for her rhetoric. Loose talk of depression in this community is looked on with headshaking disfavor; a good lot of the old timers here knew hunger in the last depression and many of the middle-agers remember growing up in times when new cars, doubleknit coats and $300 rings were reserved for royalty.

Arthurdale, in fact, was a creation of the Depression. It was an experimental construction of the 1930s Federal Homestead Project. Some 100 other communities were built at various other places in the nation, all designed to activate idle land, give the impoverished places to live and rekindle sparks in the national spirit.

A success

Here at least the experiment was a success. The government purchased 2,400 acres of promising land from a farmer named Richard Arthur, built 65 sturdy homes and sent out the call for residents.

Several hundred desperately poor people (mostly coal mining families) moved in. In addition to new homes, the homesteaders received employment, several acres for gardens or farming, and new hope. In return, they were asked to "work hard and build well."

Indeed, the work did go well. To some extent because the community was favored as the pet project of Eleanor Roosevelt.

She outfitted the school with money she earned from magazine writing, visited often, encouraged the instruction of crafts such as hand weaving, and in one supreme moment of pride for all, brought her Presidential husband to address the graduating class of 1934. The latter occasion was turned into a nationwide broadcast and history credits its importance for a nation rebuilding its image.

Ah, says homesteader Ben Thompson, who has since moved away, the times were both terrible and fine. He remembers paying less than $10 a month rent (towards the purchase price) on a home that would sell today for $25,000. On the other hand, he recalls, "Nobody had any money and some people had no food. People scrounged is what they did. There wasn't a gopher alive for miles."

People managed

Nonetheless, people managed. Mrs. Felicia Hartsell, still a resident, says she and her husband moved to Arthurdale with two babies, a crib and a measure of pluck:

"My husband walked eight miles each day to work, and he got paid 35 cents an hour. But we didn't complain. We were glad to have anything. That's the way it was around Arthurdale then, everybody was glad to be surviving.

"There was a feeling of community and cooperation. Some woemn raised gardens for school lunches, other women took turns cooking it. We had meetings, we talked over our problems and we all went to church on Sundays. Yes, that's the way it was here then."

Innocence Gone

But no more. According to long-time residents, the glutworms of progress have destroyed the innocence of Arthurdale. Once a self-sufficient hamlet — with industries such as carpentry shops, which not only provided employment but usable goods as well — the community is now a nondescript and unproud bedroom locale for a transient population.

The once-active Community Center, where FDR drank punch and Eleanor chatted with the ladies, has been stripped of inside furnishings and outside windows. The pottery kiln is gone, so is the metal shop. Barnraising is dead. Town meetings have not been held for decades. Graffiti and initial scrawlings decorate 'what few public houses remain in the village.

And according to the oldsters, the population and character of Arthurdale have deteriorated as well. Coal miners have moved ugly trailer houses into the countryside. Careless new owners have let some original homesites weather away. The result is that where once there was community solidarity, Mrs. Hartsell says "I don't hardly even know my neighbors anymore," and where once there was the feeling of industry amid poverty there seems now a sentiment of lethargy amid spoiled affluence.

The woman in Jean's Bar is a good example of the corrosion, says one old gentleman: "She always complains. Yak, yak, yak, never says nothing good. God knows, amybe the price of food is a blessing; she could probably lose about 20 pounds herself."

It's not that the originals here deny the newcomers the right to rap high prices and hard times. Andrew Wolf, who once ran the now defunct Arthurdale variety store, says older people such as himself are sweating as much as anybody at the cost of living. "But these young people got big mouths. They never suffered themselves, they don't know what suffering is. I say this: rather than complain, they would do better to roll up their sleeves, like the homesteaders did, and get to work on the problems."

Wolf is among many oldsters here who doubt the younger generations will roll up their sleeves. He says the virtue of appreciation is dead in the area. He surveys the homes flanking his — each driveway filled with cars, each lot populated by campers, each house inhabited by wall to wall carpeting and color TV's.

No appreciation

But do they appreciate what they have? "Hell, no," Wolf says, "they're too busy griping about what they don't have."

The opinion is a hard one, but according to many here accurate. The feeling is that Americans, including "Arthurdalites," have gone flabby and foolish. Everyone is out for himself. The mouth is mightier than the muscle.

"If Eleanor could see what's happened," says one old philosopher, "she'd turn in her grave. She meant the town to be something different from what it's got. I don't know if I myself haven't fallen off; I hate to say it but maybe a depression wouldn't be so bad again. It's funny, and I know you won't understand, but at least we had some self respect back then."

Smoke fatal to 8-year-old boy

San BERNARDINO (UPI) — Michael Misener, 8, of Highland, died of smoke inhalation Monday after he apparently started a fire in his bedroom while playing with matches, sheriff's deputies reported.

His mother, Donna Misener, discovered the fire and saved her two other children, but Donald was dead on arrival at County Hospital. An uncle had warned the boy earlier in the day against playing with matches, deputies said.

Lace making a dying art in Belgium

BRUGES, Belgium (UPI) — In a small, whitewashed 16th Century cottage Mrs. Maria van de Ram, a plump, brown-eyed grandmother, spends the last hours each day making lace to supplement her income.

At 72, she is one of a dying breed of Belgian lace-makers.

"Of course some young girls learn it today, but then when they are old enough to work or get married they drop it and don't usually have the time to take it up again," she said, folding her arms across an aproned stomach.

"Financially it's no longer worth the effort. You can't ask even 10 francs (25 cents) an hour for a piece of lace that takes hours, even days to make. Shops will pay you little more than it costs in materials to make.

"Soon no one will know how to make lace. But it is so beautiful. Someone should do something about it."

Creative pastime

Local tourist officer Dennis Rogiers said lace-making by Belgians has become "a creative pastime for the young or the very old. It's no longer an industry. Already many shops now sell manufactured lace imported from China, Japan or northern France at half the price of the local handmade product. They buy it by the meter (yard), often with woven flaws to give the appearance of handmade lace, cut it into hankerchiefs, tablecloths, whatever."

Lace has its origins in ancient times. The Louvre Museum in Paris exhibits linen with network and pearls found in the graves of Pharaohs. But it did not make its debut in Europe until the 1400s. Bruges is one of half a dozen traditional lace-making centers in Belgium dating from then.

There are two kinds of lace— needlework, derived from white openwork embroidery, and bobbin lace, more traditional in Belgium. For the latter, cotton is wound around any number of palm bobbins, from as few as six to as many as a 1,000 depending on the intricacy of the design and its size, and dexterously plaited into knots around closely-spaced pins on a template.

Belgium's most famous piece of lace is an enormous bedspread presented by the people of Brabant to the Archduke Albert and Archduchess Isabella on their marriage in 1599. It is now displayed in the Brussels Museum of Art and History. It depitcs numerous biblical and folklore scenes and figures and heraldic emblems.

Today, not only is there a lack of lace-makers, but cotton itself is increasingly difficult to obtain, according to Rogiers. He said the best flax used to come from Egypt, but less and less is being grown there as synthetic fibers flood international markets and the Egyptians plant foodstuffs on traditional cotton - growing land.

Three schools

But Rogiers said efforts are being made to keep the craft alive. He said that in Bruges alone there were still three schools, including the centuryold School of the Sisters of Aostolines.

"From 1680 it was run by nuns making lace for the convent's own use," he said. "But in 1970, when it could no longer exist financially, it was taken over by the Lace Center, a private group of people interested in promoting the craft.

"Children go there after their normal lessons, and there are also classes for housewives and anyone else interested in lace as a hobby. They are taught by the more gifted teen-age pupils."

The state contributes financially to keep the school going, in an effort to keep the profession alive.

"After all," Rogiers said, "lace-making is part of our past here in Bruges. And just as one grows up speaking more than one language, so our people should know the local craft. We mustn't let it die."

The first Negro to serve in Congress was Hiram R. Revels of Mississippi, who took his Senate seat Feb. 25, 1870.

Being on top of world often lonely existence

CLEAR, Alaska (UPI) — It may never come, but 500 military and civilian personnel huddle in the cold, barren reaches of this Arctic region just in case of a surprise attack on the United States.

They man remote stations, stand eight-hour tours and have scanned the skies at this "top of the world" outpost every second for the past 10 years.

They know every inch of the radar screens that have become their lives and watch for the triangular yellow "blips" they hope will never come.

The energy crisis will never reach the sentinels of the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System, which provides a 22-minute notice of impending nuclear attack on the North American Continent.

The site here, along with its sister locations in Greeland and northern England, recently marked its 10th anniversary of operation in January.

Armed with three massive detection screens—bigger than football fields—and a tracking radar housed in a giant, golfball shaped dome, the Clear station can track a basketball-size object more than 3,000 miles over the Eurasian land mass.

The primary duty of the BMEWS system is to alert against an intercontinental ballistic missile attack against the United States. Its radars provide 22 minute notice and a chance for missile and aircraft retaliation.

Built by RCA and maintained by the Air Force, Clear and its sister outposts are independent, self-sufficient communities.

During construction of the Alaskan station, railroads provided the primary means of transportation and still serve to bring in more than 200 tons of food, clothing, spare parts and other supplies each month.

The site's power plant consumes 180 tons of coal a day, shipped in from mines 25 miles to the south, generating enough electricity to supply the needs of a city of 70,000 persons.

Some 16 deep wells provide water, which also is used for combating fires, a major hazard in the Arctic. The cooling pond, used for operation of the power plant, serves as a swimming pool in the summer and is referred to as the only outdoor heated pool in Alaska.

The 500 Air Force personnel and RCA engineers and technicians who man the base actually have nearly all the comforts of home. There are bowling alleys, hobby shops, a theater and gym and there is excellent hunting and fishing in the area. Grizzly bears discourage hiking, however.

But the mission of Clear is to guard against attack, and the three stationary detection radars perform the task.

The radar pulses are concentrated by electronic tubes called Klystrons, which send a 5 million-volt pulse through an "organ pipe" scanner system. The pulse is then bounced against the curved reflector screens, which hurls them into space. Each screen emits two horizontal fans or pulses, one a few degrees above the other.

If a ballistic missile ever came, it would penetrate both the lower and upper fans. Computers would then take over to evaluate the missile's origin and its point and time of impact.

The tracking radar in the dome is designed to follow a selected object from horizon to horizon. Its narrow, cone-shaped beam helps to provide more precise information on the trajectory of an object.

But machines can't do the entire job—detective work is necessary to determine if the object is hostile or merely one of the more than 1,000 pieces of "space junk" circling the earth.

Just as Scotland Yard and the FBI employ handwriting experts in crime detection, the warning system relies on experts to read radar "signatures" for clues.

The space age form of graphology is called "radar signature analysis," used to identify objects in space and determine their speed, size, shape and mission.

Show business

Entertainment Hall of Fame to honor 20th Century greats

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There's yet another hall of fame to go along with the sports and show biz shrines for athletic and performing immortals —this one is the brand new Entertainment Hall of Fame for 20th century greats.

It works like this: A panel of distinguished celebrities from the various arts nominates four entertainment greats, two living, two dead. Then ballots bearing the nominees names are mailed to entertainment editors of newspapers with circulations of 100,000 or more for voting.

Each editor casts his vote for 10 names, five living, five poethumous. The five in each division receiving the most ballots will be made members of the Entertainment Hall of Fame.

Winners will be announced on a nation-wide television special from the new MGM Grand Hotel sometime in May via ABC's "Wide World of Entertainment."

Gene Kelly, a member of the nominating board, will emcee the show.

Among the 21 others who comprise the board are such diverse show biz folk as Aaron Copland, Helen Hayes, director William Wyler, Elia Kazan, Quincy Jones, writer Garson Kanin, producer Bud Yorkin.

Members of the panel are not eligible for nomination, which amounts for the absence on the ballot of Helen Hayes.

"The hall of fame is for writers, directors, performers, choreographers, set designers and all the rest," said Kelly, "not just for stars. And the people being honored represent lifetime achievement whose work has withstood the test of time.

"We hope to make the institution as famous as Cooperstown, the baseball shrine in New York, or the Football Hall of Fame in Massolin, Ohio.

"I would guess that people like Charlie Chaplin, Greta Garbo and Cary Grant —who never won Oscars —are the sort of names that will crop up in the voting."

Kelly was right in that one of the trio was, indeed, a nominee in this first year of balloting.

But Shakespeare, Chaucer, Beethoven, Bach and other giants of the arts down through the centuries are not eligible. Those members of the lively arts, literature and music during the present century are the only ones —living or dead — who qualify.

"I was asked to be chairman of the nominating committee to help find qualified people to work on the hall of fame," Kelly said.

"To make our nominations as valid as possible, we've limited candidates to those persons who work or worked in the English language.

"We are interested in an individual who achieved a single great moment and then was never heard from again. I think the nominees will represent a broad spectrum of the finest minds, talent and genius in this century's performing arts."

Members of the nominating committee submit their selections in secret. Balloting by the entertainment editors is secret and the results —like the Oscars —will not be known until the night of the show.

The Entertainment Hall of Fame may be the most unique institution of its kind with the likes of George Bernard Shaw and P.T. Barnum nominated for posthumous entry into the very select company.

Film maker to lecture at Scripps

CLAREMONT — Mildred "Chick" Strand, an award-winning film maker, will face the cameras April 18 when she lectures and shows her movies at Scripps College as part of the Visiting Artists Program.

Miss Strand will discuss movies and show examples of her own work at 1:30 p.m. in Balch Auditorium, 10th Street and Columbia Avenue. The Scripps Film Arts Program, directed by Paul Darrow and Ted Kerzie, will film her visit to send to the National Endowment for the Arts for distribution to other educational institutions throughout the nation.

Miss Strand, an instructor of film and photography at Occidental College, received her bachelor degree in anthropology from UC Berkeley and a master of fine arts degree in cinema from UCLA. At the latter, she participated in the Ethnographic Film Program from 1968 to 1970.

Her latest completed color ethnographic film, "Mosori Monika," was funded by a Ford Foundation grant to UCLA in 1970. Photographed around the Capuchin Mission at Guayo, Venezuela, it examines the acculturation of a small Warao village through interviews with a Spanish nun at the mission and an aging widow of a Warao shaman who tells of their life histories and philosophies.

Three other short color films, "Angel Blue Sweet Wings," "Anselmo" and "Waterfall," by Miss Strand are distributed by Canyon Cinema Cooperative.

'Take One'

Book by film columnist Honors Mervyn LeRoy

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — It's nice to be part of something that is successful. So I stood there, beaming cheerfully, for three hours or so while some of Hollywood's biggest stars came into the Beveryly Hills Hotel for a party in honor of a book I had written.

Then reason took over. I realized the biggies weren't there because of me but because the subject of my book was there, too. The book is "Mervyn LeRoy: Take One," the story of one of Hollywood's greatest directors. And LeRoy, loved and respected by Hollywood for more than 40 years, was the magnet that brought them all out.

They were all there. One of LeRoy's oldest friends, the great silent star, Colleen Moore, had flown in from her Chicago home just to attend the party.

The list seemed endless — in one corner, Irene Dunne, Rosalind Russell and Greer Garson were catching up on old times. In another corner, some of the great comedians — Jack Benny, George Burns, Red Buttons and George Jessel — were exchanging jokes. Across the room, best-selling authors Irving Wallace, Irving Stone, Jackie Susann and Harold Robbins were in a tight knot.

Alfred Hitchcok, who never comes to Hollywood parties, was there. He said he just had to come, to show how much he admired and respected LeRoy. Lorne Greene introduced himself to Hitchcock and they sat and talked for a half-hour.

Most of the stars there had worked for LeRoy at one time or antoher. There wrre people like Karl Malden, Ricardo Montalban and little (no more) Patty McCormack, LeRoy's child star of "The Bad Seed."

Tennis player Bobby Riggs came in, with Sandra Giles, and he and Willie Shoemaker, the jockey, got into a long conversation. Maybe Riggs was challenging Shoemaker to a race — presumably, Bobby would be on a colt and Willie on a filly.

Others spotted: Johnny Carson (Johnny bought LeRoy's house when he moved here from New York), Edgar Bergen and Frances and Joseph Ruttenberg, the great cinematographer who had worked with LeRoy on all the magnificent Greer Garson films.

The room was decorated with blowups of stills from LeRoy's pictures, many of which are also in the book. The man's credits are phenomenal — he directed such great ones as "Little Caesar," "I am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," "They Won't Forget," "Waterloo Bridge," "Random Harvest," "Quo Vadis," "The F.B.I. Story" — and he produced "The Wizard Of Oz." And, at 73, he's still active and looking forward to his next film.

Bluegrass festival scheduled

SAN RAFAEL — The first Golden State Country and Bluegrass Festival will be held at the Marin County Fairgrounds April 26-28.

The promotoers are Paul and Judy Lammers, Bay Area residents for the past five years. The festival will feature dozens of top names in the bluegrass and folk-country music field. The festival begins at 7 p.m. April 26; it concludes at 11 p.m. April 28.

Among the attractions already scheduled — and more are being added daily — are: Jim and Jesse and the Virginia Boys, Doc Watson, Mac Wiseman, John Hartford, Ralph Stanley and the Clinch Mountain Boys, and Jimmy Martin and the Sunny Mountain Boys. A number of local groups from the Bay Area also will perform.

The festival has several objectives, according to Mrs. Lammers.

"We want to display the fantastic relationship that is developing between this type of music which originated centuries ago in the mountains of the American South and the music being played and sung by today's young people," she said.

"But most important, we're according special honors to a fiddle player who's worked tirelessly for years to help hundreds of musicians here in the Bay Area and all over the country. He's been an incredible inspiration to me and to everyone who's become privileged to know him. We're making the whole festival tribute to Vassar Clements."

Tickets are on sale now. For all three days, admission is $22.50. Daily admission is $8.50.

Mail orders should be directed to the Marin Memorial Box Office, Civic Center, San Rafael, 94930. Stamped, self-addressed envelopes should be enclosed.

Tickets may be obtained through all Ticketron outlets and at other leading agencies.

Five vocal soloists to be featured in two concerts at the Music Center

LOS ANGELES — Five vocal artists will be featured in concerts by the Los Angeles Philharmonic under Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Master Chorale under Roger Wagner in concerts at the Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center at 8:30 Thursday and Friday nights.

The singers are soprano Veronica Tyler, mezzo-soprano Beverly Wolff, tenor Kenneth Riegel, baritone Douglas Lawrence and bass Peter Meven.

The program begins with a work for chorus and orchestra — Bach's Cantata No. 50, "Nun ist das Heil." Benjamin Britten's "Cantata Misericordium" is scored for tenor (Riegel) and baritone (Lawrence), chorus and orchestra. The evening's major work, Mozart's "Requiem," utilizes not only chorus and orchestra, but also a vocal quartet — Misses Tyler and Wolff and Riegel and Meven.

Miss Tyler is a Baltimore-born, Juilliard-trained soprano who has won acclaim on both the opera (New York City Opera) and concert stage. She performed the Bach B Minor Mass during the Hollywood Bowl's Bach-Mozart Festival last summer, and was also a soloist in Beethoven's Ninth Sympthy on opening night. Miss Wolff and Riegel were featured in the bowl's Summer Festival 73 concert performance of Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust."

Meven, a native of Koln, Germany, will be making his first appearances with the Philharmonic as soloist in the "Requiem." For the past eight years he has been under contract to the Deutsche Oper am Rhein in Dusseldorf and has performed in festivals and as soloist with sumphony orchestras throughout Europe.

Corporation draws fine

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The corporation which owns two Wilsons Suede and Leather stores in the city has been fined $25,000, according to Superior Court records released Monday.

District Attorney John Jay Ferdon filed civil suits against the stores last summer, charging they consistently advertised sales without reducing prices.

Judge Clayton Horn approved an order restraining the stores from such advertising in the future and levied the fine.

The stores are located at 373 Geary St. and 687 Market

DO YOU REMEMBER? — What two of Hollywood's top male dramatic stars appear as song-and-dance men? On the left is Clark Gable with a couple of chorus girls as he danced and sang "Putting on the Ritz" in a musical called "Idiot's Delight" back in 1939. On the right James Stewart is dancing in a 1942 movie musical, "Born To Dance." With him, from left, are Buddy Ebsen, Eleanor Powell and Una Merkel. Both numbers are featured in MGM's film "That's Entertainment," a celebration of movie musicals.

Skate star to perform in Ice Capades

LOS ANGELES — Karen Magnussen, 1973 world skating champion, will be making her first professional appearance in Los Angeles when Ice Capades opens at the Sports Arena April 26.

The Vancouver, Canada, skater felt that the most motivating force in helping her reach the top was challenge.

"The slimmer my chances, the harder I worked to win," she said.

Miss Magnussen was five times Canadian champion, the 1971 North American champion, 1972 Olympic silver medalist and winner of all three gold medals at the 1973 World Competition in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia.

During the 1969 World Championship, she was forced into an 11th hour dropout because of stress fractures in both legs, and the possibility of never skating again was a grim crises. Nonetheless, through strenouous practice, Miss Magnussen returned to the 1970 competition, placing fourth and receiving a standing ovation from the audience.

The run of the Ice Capades will continue through May 12 with 24 performances. The program also includes figure skaters, comedy acts, sets and original music, costumes and gimics.

The ice show also stars Jo Jo Starbuck and Ken Shelley, Anna Galmarini, Sashi Kuchiki, the Romanos family, Lucien Meyer and his chimps, Peter Gordon and Barbara Wilson, Susan Harmon, Ricky Reid, David Sadlier, Terry Head and Johnny LaBreque and Bob Mac.

Performance schedule is Tuesday through Friday nights at 8; Saturdays at 1, 5 and 9 p.m.; and Sundays at 2 and 6 p.m. All seats are reserved at $3, $4, $5.50 and $6.

Heels cost her an extra $144

LONDON (UPI) A pair of black platform shoes with glittering heels cost the wife of pop star Marc Bolan $144 in fines in a London court Monday.

Showing the shoes to the magistrate St. John Harmsworth, Mrs. June Boan said they cause her involvement in a multiple car crash.

As she tried to stop her Ferrari at traffic lights, she said, the sole of one shoe jammed between the brake and the accelerator pedal.

French group to appear at UCLA

LOS ANGELES — Le Treteau de Paris, French dramatic troupe, will present Eugene Ionesco's "Le roi se meurt" in UCLA's Royce Hall at 8:30 tonight.

The play, translated into English and presented as "Exit the King," explores the life of a once-great king called Berenger I, shown during his last hour of life surrounded by his two wives, his physician and the ever decreasing members of his decaying court.

It is said that Ionesco hoped that by writing this play he could bring himself to accept the idea of his own inevitable death. In his "Notes and Counter Notes," he recalls that since age 4, when he first discovered that he was going to die, he has been filled with anguish about death.

This production, staged by Jacques Mauclair to whom Ionesco dedicated the play, is being recreated by Le Treteau de Paris as part of its 16th anniversary season in the United States and Canada. The players include Olivier Hussenot in the title role, with Helene Duc and Christiane Desbois as his two wives, Queen Marguerite and Queen Marie respectively and Jean Dalmain as the Doctor.

PETER MAAS

Wateragte aids success of 'Serpico'

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — The Watergate mess, Peter Maas believes, has had a lot to do with the success of "Serpico."

Maas wrote the book from which the film was taken. The book was a success. The movie is a monster success. Maas thinks that maybe, since the theme dealt with a man's battle against corruption, that the timing was right. Timing is everything in the movie business. People, sick to death over what's been happening in Washington, delighted in the movie about one man winning out over the forces of official evil.

It's oversimplifying to say "Serpico's" success is just a question of timing. It was, of course, a crackerjack movie.

Maas had a lot to do with that. He had written "The Valachi Papers" and was unhappy with the way the movie version of that came out. So, when "Serpico" was sold, he insisted on some control. The first few screenplays weren't right, he says, so he "structured" the screenplay that was finally used.

You might be interested in knowing what's happened to the real Serpico. Peter Maas says the ex-cop is 38 now, living in Switzerland. He went there to get "things sorted out in his head," and Maas doesn't believe he'll stay there forever.

He still does pretty good with the girls," Maas says. "Only now they're Swiss and Swedes and French, not Americans."

Maas says the movie's effect has been a healthy one — "It's made people think of behaving better."

STARS — STARS — —
STARS — STARS — —

If "Serpico" was one of the pictures of the year, maybe "For Those I Loved" will be one of the pictures of the century.

That, anyhow, is the perhaps over-optimistic hope of the author of that book, a tragic man named Martin Gray. The book tells the story of his life — the Warsaw Ghetto under the Nazis, concentration camps, then worse.

He survived World War II's greatest horrors, came to New York, made a fortune, went back to France, married and had four children — and then his entire family was wiped out in a forest fire in the south of France.

Still, he manages to be an optimist. His book was a huge hit in Europe and is doing fairly well here. It will be a movie, with the script done by the noted Yugoslavian writer-director, Alexander Petrovic.

"It could be the picture of the century," Gray says. "It could be another 'Gone With the Wind.' "

It certainly should have the premiere of the century. Gray, who still lives in Europe where he runs a foundation to combat forest fires, is on close terms with European greats.

"I had lunch with the King of Belgium the other day," he says. "He'll be at the premiere. So will Willy Brandt and most of Europe's biggest names."

All the royalties from the book go to Gray's Foundation, and so will the movie profits. The Foundation of the Century?

Angels wishing for 'old' Nolan Ryan

LOCAL-NATIONAL Sports

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

ANAHEIM — Come back Nolan Ryan wherever you are.

That is the cry of California Angels fans today after they watched their hero shelled by the Texas Rangers in Tuesday night's home opener at Anaheim Stadium.

There is some concern in the Angel camp about their star pitcher, who has been anything but effective so far in 1974. He hasn't resembled the hard-throwing righthander who won 21 games, pitched two no-hitters and set a season strikeout record last year.

Ryan officially pitched one inning in Tuesday's humiliating 10-2 loss to the Rangers but he did throw to seven Texas batters in the second frame, failing to retire anybody.

Threee consecutive walks opened the big eight-run explosion. Joe Lovitto knocked home two runs with a double. Another walk reloaded the bases. Back-to-back singles by Dave Nelson and Toby Harrah knocked in two more tallies and Ryan was headed for the showers on a quick knockout.

Already behind 4-0, the Angels were in deep trouble but it was soon all over. After reliever Skip Lockwood struck out lovable Alex Johnson, Jeff Burroughs cleared the bases with a grand slam home run over the left-center field fence to frustrate the 25,241 opening night fans.

The final totals show Ryan charged with seven runs, three hits and five walks with one strikeout. His earned run average has skyrocketed to 8.00 with 15 walks in nine innings of work in his two starts.

"I have to be concerned," Ryan told the writers. "I don't want to get off to a slow start this season. I have to do something to change it."

Since Ryan didn't pitch much Tuesday night, Angel manager Bobby Winkles said he is considering starting him again Friday night in the opener of a weekend series against the Chicago White Sox.

"I hope I can come back Friday night," Ryan said. "I still feel like I'm pitching in spring training. I'm having trouble keeping the ball down. I may try to slow my rhythm down and take something off my fastball. I must try to get ahead of the batters."

Meanwhile, Texas manager Billy Martin is enjoying discussing Burroughs, a 23-year-old power hitter from Long Beach who belted 30 home runs last year including three grand slams in a 10-day period.

"Jeff has a chance to hit a lot of home runs for us," Martin said. "I wouldn't be shocked if he hit 50 this year."

Considering his age and strength, a writer asked Martin if Burroughs could eventually approach Hank Aaron's career home run record of 715.

"I don't know about that," Martin laughed, "but he could be the guy to top Roger Maris' 61 in one season."

Tuesday's game was anticlimatic after Burroughs' home run.

The Angels managed to score in the fourth and seventh innings. Bobby Valentine tripled in the fourth and came home on Frank Robinson's sacrifice fly. Lee Stanton belted his second home run of the season in the seventh.

But Texas righthander Jim Bibby was able to coast all the way to pick up his first win of the campaign.

He was able to stop the Angels' biggest threat in the sixth inning when the home team loaded the bases with no outs on two walks and an error.

Bibby retired Robinson on an easy force play at the plate, struck out Mike Epstein and got Bob Oliver on an infield grounder.

That's when the Angels heard the boos from the home fans.

ANGEL ANGLES — Ferguson Jenkins, who recorded six consecutive 20-victory seasons for the Chicago Cubs, will pitch for Texas tonight against southpaw Frank Tanana. Jenkins hurled an one-hitter to beat Oakland in his American League debut. . .

Thursday's probables have Bill Singer against either Steve Hargan or teenager David Clyde. . .

Epstein is hitless after 12 at-bats. After starting out the season with six hits in seven at-bats, Oliver has gone 0-for-10.

Dodgers get well in hurry vs. Braves

ATLANTA (UPI) — Hank Aaron took the night off Tuesday and the Atlanta Braves should have joined him.

With Aaron, who became baseball's all-time home run king with his 715th homer Monday night, sitting out the chilly night, the Braves were trounced 9-2 by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers raked two Atlanta pitchers for 11 hits in recording their fourth win in five games and tying San Francisco for the lead in the National League West.

Los Angeles jumped on starter Carl Morton for three runs in the first inning and added two more in the third. James Easterly gave up two hits and three runs in two-thirds of an inning after relieving Morton in the seventh.

Danny Frisella shut out the Dodgers after he came on for Easterly but the damage had been done and the Braves suffered their third loss in five games.

Morton walked three batters in a row after the first out of the game and Willie Crawford singled in two runs. Ron Cey's sacrifice fly brought the third run home.

Joe Ferguson and Crawford singled in the third inning to start another Dodger rally. Ferguson scored on Steve Garvey's sac fly and Crawford scored on Bill Russell's single.

Los Angeles added another run in the seventh and three more in the eighth

Davey Johnson's first homer of the season gave the Braves a run in the fourth inning and Darrell Evans scored the other in the ninth.

But Don Sutton, recording his second win in as many tries, limited the Braves to five hits before leaving in the eighth with a stiff back. Mike Marshall came on in relief and gave up two hits and one run.

The teams meet in the third game of their four-game series tonight.

Padres owner uses P.A. to criticize team

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Ray Kroc, the new owner of the San Diego Padres, told the largest opening night home crowd in the club's history, "I've never seen such stupid ballplaying in my life."

Kroc, the owner of the MacDonald hamburger food chain who bought the Padres to keep them from being moved to Washington, criticized his team over the public address system just before the home half of the eighth inning.

He then told the crowd of 39,083, "I suffer with you. I've never seen such stupid baseball playing in my life."

The Padres came up with three runs in their half of the inning but lost 9-5 to Houston for their fourth straight defeat of the season without a win.

Cesar Cedeno collected four RBIs on three hits and Larry Dierker, attempting a comeback after pitching only 27 innings last year, led the Astros to their first victory of the year.

"I've never heard anything like this before in my 19 years of baseball," Willie McCovey, San Diego players representative, said of Kroc's public blistering of the team. "I wish it hadn't happened. This will ring in the players' ears. We're not playing badly because we want to."

Preston Gomez, Houston manager, joined in admonishing Kroc.

"I didn't like to hear what Mr. Kroc said. Those guys are pros and they are out there trying. It's got to stop. It's bad for baseball and can't go on."

The Astros gained a 6-0 advantage after two innings with a pair of three-run bursts. Dierker threw a strong seven innings while San Diego starter Steve Arlin was relieved in the second inning and got the loss.

Charged with all six runs, Arlin was followed by six other pitchers.

Snow cancels Red Sox again

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Red Sox home opener with the Baltimore Orioles today was postponed until Thursday because of a storm which dumped several inches of snow in the area.

BRIDGEWATER BARS THE WAY

Edgewood catcher Mark Bridgewater looks toward first after tagging out the sliding Paul Belmudes of Chino at home. Edgewood downed the Cowboys 3-2 Tuesday in the Pomona Elks Tourney.

Elks Tournament finals tonight

Edgewood wants a repeat

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — Edgewood High has the opportunity to become the first prep baseball team in 32 years to win back-to-back titles in the Pomona High-Elks Invitational Baseball Tournament.

San Diego High, who won the coveted crown nine times from 1933 to 1952, captured the championship five straight years ('38-'42).

Bishop Amat did win the title two years in a row in the mid-60's however their victories were sandwiched between a rained out tourney.

Edgewood, coached by Gary Kretz, will meet the darkhorse of the 39th Annual affair, Pacific High of San Bernardino, tonight at 6 p.m. at Ralph Welch Park for the title.

Defending champion and seeded Edgewood disposed of Chino in Tuesday's championship quarterfinals 3-2 and came back to trim Cabrillo 3-0 in the semifinals played under the lights.

The Sierra League leaders (7-1) stopped the fourth place San Antonio League (3-3) Chino Cowboys behind Ron Roenicke's 11 strikeout, five-hit performance.

The Trojan southpaw outdueled Chino's Jerry Belmudes, who threw a seven-hitter, to advance them to the semis.

Edgewood touched up the Chino righthander for two runs on four hits in the second inning.

The Trojans scored the winning run in the third on doubles by Tim Bititti and Bridgewater. Bititti finished with two hits in two at bats, and scored twice.

Edgewood came back in the semis to blank seeded Cabrillo 3-0 despite collecting just one hit.

All three Trojan runs scored on errors as two walks and an error lead to two first inning runs and three errors accounted for their sixth inning tally.

Cabrillo's Kevin Drake, the top major league prospect in the tourney, had one hit and stole two bases.

Pacific, a sixth place (2-4-1) Citrus Belt League entry, reached the finals by nipping El Rancho 1-0 in the quarters and trimming Bonita 2-1 in eight innings.

Coach Wayne Elton's Pirates scored the only run of 1-0 win on a throwing error by El Rancho catcher Jess Baez in the second inning.

Kings-'Hawks overtimes likely

CHICAGO (UPI) — On the record, the Chicago Black Hawks and Los Angeles Kings have a good chance to show the fans a few overtime games in their Stanley Cup playoff series opening tonight.

The Hawks fell one short of tying a league record for most ties in a season with 23 deadlocks in the 78 game National Hockey League season, and two of the ties were against the Kings, 3-3 and 4-4, in the last half of the season.

"There's got to be a winner in these games," Hawks coach Bill Regy said, "and I hope the fact we played so many ties in the regular season doesn't put us into too many overtimes."

The Hawks lost once in six games to the Kings. In the four victories, three of them were by identical scores of 3-0 as Hawks goalie Tony Esposito scored three of his 11 shutouts.

But Reay pointed out that the Kings boasted a top grade goalie, too, in Rogatien Vachon, who played every regular season game against the Hawks, and that he could be a major factor.

"Goal keeping is going to be the key to the series for both clubs," Reay said. "It always is. And the regular season doesn't mean anything now."

Reay also pointed out that the Kings "developed fast" in the last half of the season to make the playoffs, which could be another factor in the best of seven series. "They finished strong," Reay said, "and you've got to judge them on that."

The Hawks will be near full strength for the opening of the series with only defenseman Phil Russell unable to play. He was still recuperating from a collapsed lung suffered 10 days ago.

The Hawks, in the playoffs for the fifth straight year and the 15th time in the last 16 years, finished second in the National Hockey League's West Division, the first time since joining the division they haven't won the championship and the first time in five years they haven't won a divisional crown.

Chicago tallied 105 points, one of three teams over the 100 mark to trail Philadelphia by seven points in the division and lead the Kings, in third place by 27 points. The Kings were four poinnts in front of Atlanta.

The first two games of the series will be played in Chicago tonight and Thursday, with the next pair slated for Los Angeles Saturday and Sunday.

Orset Kindrachuk didn't play like a rookie with a kidney ailment in the Philadelpha Flyers' 4-1 victory over the Atlanta Flames Tuesday night in the quarterfinals of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Flyers and Flames got a 24-hour jump on the remaining six teams in contention for the Stanley Cup. Quarterfinal series beginning tonight find Toronto at Boston, the New York Rangers at Montreal and Los Angeles at Chicago.

"He had a tough year," said Flyers coach Fred Shero after Kinderchuck rammed home two goals in the third period to put Philadelphia one up in the best-of-seven series. "He was to have had an operation for a kidney ailment, but he didn't and he only got strong last week."

Kinderchuck, 1971-72 player of the year in the Western League who also led the league in fights, was deprived of a three-goal hat trick late in the final period on a spectacular save by Atlanta goalie Phil Myre.

Gary Dornhoefer scored the first Flyer goal in the opening period and Tom Blandon made it 2-0 in the second stanza.

Nicklaus' game is in shape

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus is the man. No doubt about it.

But the blond bomber looked the 38th Masters' field squarely in the eye Tuesday and said, "Most facets of my game are in pretty darned good shape for a change."

That's the equivalent of J. Paul Getty saying he's got a new idea for making money.

Nicklaus arrived at the Augusta National Golf Club Tuesday afternoon after three days at home in North Palm Beach, Fla. He played three practice rounds at Augusta last week, skipping the Greater Greensboro Open, before spending three days with his family at home.

He also played two rounds of golf at Los Tree Village while he was home.

Nicklaus will be the favorite, if there can be such a thing in a 79-player field, when play begins Thursday. The 79 total, including six amateurs and 13 foreigners represent the lowest number of Masters' contestants since 1971, when 77 played.

But if Nicklaus is feeling the heat of being the favorite, as he almost always is at the major championships, he wasn't showing it Tuesday. In fact, he seemed to enjoy it.

"If I'm not used to that by now, I'm never going to be," said the 34-year-old winner of 14 major championships. "But once everybody hits off the first tee, all that's over. I'm just dreading the day when I'm not the favorite. I'm glad people think enough of my game to make me the favorite."

Nicklaus, who has won here four times like Arnold Palmer, holds the Masters record of 17-under-par 271, which he set in 1965 when he blitzed the field by an amazing nine shots.

"That can be broken," said Nicklaus. "But when I say 271, I go out there and I don't know how anyone can shoot that. The course is not the same as it was in '65 and all the changes have made the course more difficult."

Then he added, "I don't really expect 271 to be broken for a long time. At least, not for another four or five days."

Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf, Johnny Miller and 22-year-old Ben Crenshaw passed up the Greater Greensboro Open last week in order to practice at Augusta National.

Only big name not in the Masters' field is Lee Trevino, the hottest pro on the tour the last two weeks. He won the Greater New Orleans Open, then tied for second at Greensboro to pocket more than $50,000 for two weeks' work.

But Trevino, because of his dislike for the Augusta National layout, is skipping the Masters.

Tuesday's weather was bright and sunny on the course with the high temperature reaching 60. A high of 70 with more sunshine was forecast for today, when the field will compete in the preliminary nine-hole, par 3 contest.

Gay Brewer equalled the record on the par 3 course last year with a seven-under-par 20.

Craig Morton jumps to WFL

HOUSTON (UPI) — Quarterback Craig Morton of the National Football League's Dallas Cowboys has jumped to the Houston Texans of the new World Football League, a radio station reported.

Morton signed with the Texans Tuesday night and a news conference was called today to announce the defection, radio station KPRC said. The station said Texans' president Steve Arnold of Memphis signed Morton after acquiring negotiating waivers from the Birmingham, Ala., franchise.

Hawaiians add Cowboys' Hill to WFL stable

HONOLULU (UPI) — Calvin Hill has signed a contract to play for the new World Football League but first he hopes to help the Dallas Cowboys win the Super Bowl.

Hill, a Cowboy running back, Tuesday signed a three-year contract with the Hawaiians which will begin in 1975 after he plays out his option year this season with Dallas.

Hill said he would do "everything in my power to help Dallas win the Super Bowl this year."

The five-year NFL veteran said he believed that his plans to play in the WFL wouldn't hamper his work for the Cowboys this season.

"I think we have a great chance of winning the Super Bowl," he said. "I plan to do everything I can to help the Cowboys do just that."

Although contract terms were not made public, a WFL spokesman said the money was "substantial."

Hill said that playing for the Hawaiians would be "like being in on the ground floor.

"It is a chance to be part of something that is starting from scratch and has a chance to become something big and worthwhile."

Hill was an All-Pro selection three times.

Just last weekend, tight end Ted Kwalick of the San Francisco 49ers also signed a contract with the Hawaiians— also to begin in 1975.

Leos bop ASU again in college action

La Verne College dumped Arizona State for the second straight day to highlight Tuesday's college baseball action.

The Leos clobbered the Sun Devils 11-3 at Tempe to continue their impressive trip to Arizona.

Cal Poly got back on the winning track, winning the nightcap of a twinbill with San Francisco State, 6-2, after dropping the opener, 6-4.

Claremont-Mudd also split a doubleheader. The Stags lost to visiting Pacific Lutheran, 7-5, in the opener but won the nightcap-8-0.

Azusa Pacific traveled to San Diego and lost a 7-5 decision to the University of San Diego.

La Verne pounded out 15 hits in its triumph. Dan Quisenberry silenced the Sun Devil bats on five hits, two of them homers by Clay Westlake and Gary Rajich.

The Leos scored in six of the nine innnings in posting the easy win. Jim Sherman and Hank Merenda led the hit parade with three apiece, with Sherman picking up three RBIs in the process.

Art Sanchez had two more hits for the Leos, giving him five in the two games with ASU.

The win gives La Verne a flashy 14-5 season mark, while ASU falls to a 27-17 ledger.

La Verne and ASU will wind up their series today with a single game with Robbie Mayhew slated for mound duty for the Leos.

Cal Poly broke a four-game losing string with its victory over San Francisco St.

The visitors from the bay area had taken the first game 6-4 behind a 13-hit attack, with Poly starter John Riddle absorbing the hill defeat for the Broncos.

Steve Brajkovich, Mike Heinen and John Kistner combined to fire a four-hitter in the second game as the Broncos salvaged a split.

Dale Biggs banged out three hits in the Poly win, while Kevin Thornhill, Dennis Rogers and Dave Metkovich had three hits in the twinbill.

Cal Poly, sporting a 12-18 season mark, plays host today to the University of Hawaii in a doubleheader starting at noon.

Claremont-Mudd slugged four home runs in its doubleheader with Pacific Lutheran. Brad Koppel, Jim Mullowney, Jamie Opatry, and Gregg Thompson had the round-trippers for the Stags.

Brad Rehn and Bob Phee combined for the shutout win in the second game. Rehn fanned six in the five innings, including the side in the third when Pacific threatened to score.

Two-run shots by Thompson and Opatrny in the third clinched the Stag win.

Wynson Moore had five hits on the afternoon for C-M.

Azusa Pacific ran into the elements and their own miscues in dropping a 7-5 decision to USD.

On a windy day in San Diego, the Cougars blew a 4-0 lead and wound up losing on four unearned USD runs.

Joe Jenkins bopped a three-run homer for USD to get them back in the game after APC led 4-0 in the third.

APC, now 13-10 on the season, plays host to Pacific Christian today in a single game slated for an early noon starting time.

Julius Erving tops ABA All-Star team

NEW YORK (UPI) — Julius "Dr. J" Erving, the big New York Net forward who was named Most Valuable Player in the ABA the past season, led all voting as unanimous selection for the All League team announced Wednesday.

Erving, who averaged 27.4 points a game in leading the Nets to their Eastern Division title, polled 132 points on 66 first team votes of sports writers and broadcasters in the 10 league cities. He was named on every ballot.

Artis Gilmore, the 7-foot-2 Kentucky center who led the league in rebounding for the third straight year, was named all-league pivot man for the third season.

In the back court, James Jones of the Utah Stars led the voting with 113 votes and 54 first team ballots. It was the third time Jones has made the ABA All League team.

George McGinnis of Indiana filled the other forward slot on the All League team and Mack Calvin of Carolina was voted to the other guard position.

On the second team, Swen Nater of San Antonio won the center position. Utah guard Ron Boone and teammate Willie Wise at forward joined Kentucky forward Dan Issel and fellow Kentuckian Louie Demper to round out the second team.

A tire may be presented for adjustment under this guarantee to any authorized Goodyear tire dealer or Goodyear Service Store. An allowance will be given on a comparable newly retreaded tire based on tread design depth remaining and Goodyear's printed "Predetermined Price for Retread Adjustment" current at time of adjustment, which price will fairly represent the actual retail selling price of the comparable tire at time of adjustment. However, retreads with defects other than Road Hazards are replaced no charge within the first 20% of tread life. Local sales taxes and dealer service charges, if any, will be paid by customer.

Sun inks Dick Enright, former Oregon coach

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Dick Enright, former head football coach at the University of Oregon, has joined the Southern California Sun of the New World Football League.

Enright, who was fired after two seasons at Oregon, will be an offensive line coach.

Four former Oregon players will be with him, Tim Guy, Jackie Conners, Mike Bolliger and Keith Davis.

Enright, who was a successful high school coach in Southern California before coming to Oregon, said he was "enthusiastic about getting back into coaching."

He said he disliked leaving Oregon, "but I can't urn down an opportunity to get back into coaching."

USC assistant heads for Utah

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (UPI) — Jim Marsh, junior varsity basketball coach at Southern California, Wednesday was named assistant coach at the University of Utah.

Jerry Primm, named head coach at Utah just 10 days ago, said Marsh is the first of two assistants he will name.

The 27-year-old Pasadena, Calif., native, graduated from USC in 1968.

Mounties, Owls post wins in J.C. tourney action

Both Mt. San Antonio and Citrus posted wins in junior college baseball tournaments Tuesday.

MSAC downed L.A. Harbor 12-6 in the Easter Holiday Tourney at MSAC, while Citrus won two games in the opening round of the Cuesta College tourney.

The Owls downed West Hills College 6-4 in their morning game and came back to blast Reedley 24-2 in Tuesday's second round artion.

The Mounties put together a four-run fourth to overcome a 5-4 Harbor lead and went on to down the Seahawks. Ralph Beltran, taking over for starter Charlie Fallon during a four-run Harbor uprising in the top of the fourth, got the win with five innings of relief work.

In that big fourth inning for MSAC, Don Cashen blasted a two-run double and Kevin Bell picked up two RBIs with a single.

Bell, who has hit the ball extremely well in two games so far in the Easter Holiday Tourney, went two-for-four on the day and had four RBIs.

The Mounties play East Los Angeles today at noon in the final game of the tourney. If the Mounties win they will nail down the tourney title.

Immediately following the East L.A. contest, MSAC will play Glendale in a makeup of a game which was rained out earlier in the year.

Both games will be played at the Mounties' diamond.

Phil Doktor had a big day as Citrus won twice in the Cuesta Tourney.

The sophomore shortstop from Claremont had a perfect five-for-five in the two games, scored six runs and drove home six. In the Owls rout of Reedley, Doktor had two doubles and a homer.

Citrus will continue play today in the championship bracket of the tourney as they meet the winner of Tuesday night's Cuesta-Cal Poly (SLO) J.V. battle.

Chicago hits 5 of 12 shots in 1st period

By United Press International

It was waste not, want not for the Chicago Cougars Tuesday night.

The Cougars took 12 shots in the opening period of their World Hockey Association playoff game against New England but connected on five of them as they rolled to an 8-6 victory over the Whalers. It was Chicago's first win in the best-of-seven series which finds the Whalers leading 2-1.

In the only other game, Tom Martin's three-goal hat trick sparked Toronto to a 4-3 victory over Cleveland as the Toros hold a 2-0 lead in games over the Crusaders

Chicago got power play goals from Don Gordon and Joe Hardy within a six minute span and Rosaire Paiement, Bob Liddington, and Jan Popiel broke through a shaky Whaler defense to make it 5-0 before the 17 minute mark.

NHL player grabbed by WHA's new entry

INDIANAPOLIS, Indiana (UPI) — As far as the Indianapolis Racers are concerned, the defense comes first. The offense will take care of itself— later.

The Racers, the new entry in the World Hockey Association preparing for their first season next fall, Tuesday signed their first player by dipping into the rival National Hockey League to come up with Eddie Dyck, backup goalie for Vancouver.

Dyck, 23, who got into 11 games with the Canucks this season as understudy to Gary Smith, was signed to a three-year contract. Terms were not announced, but John Weissert, president of Indiana Professional Sports, Inc, which holds the franchise, said the native Canadian, from Warman, Saskatchewan, was highly recommended by John Wilson, who will coach the Racers and who has been scouting players the last three months.

WHERE THE ACTION IS — Thoroughbred racing returns to Hollywood Park this afternoon for a 76-day spring and summer meeting.

Hollywood Park beginning 35th season of horse racing

INGLEWOOD — Hollywood Park, bold and brilliant as the result of a million-dollar refurbishing program that has transformed the Inglewood track into the showplace of American racing, is starting its 35th season of thoroughbred racing.

The 30,000 added Premiere Handicap is highlighting the nine-race card that begins the spring and summer meeting's 76-day run.

First post throughout the campaign will be 2 p.m. and with the exception of a pair of special Monday racing programs — Memorial Day, May 27 and closing day, July 22 — competition will be presented on a Wednesday through Sunday format.

Nine events for $100,000 or more, including two $150,000 invitationals, the Hollywood Gold Cup and Hollywood Derby, and the inaugural running of the $10,000 added Swaps Stakes, which gives Hollypark three-year-olds a unique stakes opportunity, will headline the roster of major offerings for the finest thoroughbreds in the country.

Laffit Pincay, seeking his sixth riding title in the past seven seasons, will head a standout cast of reinsmen, which will include world's champion Bill Shoemaker, stakes-riding star Don Pierce, and such other talented jockeys as Alvaro Pineda, Steve Valdez, Fernando Toro, Jerry Lambert, Howard Grant and the promising newcomer, Octavio Aviles.

Hollywood Park patrons, who competed in a four-week version of the exciting "Sunday Sweep" last summer, will have not one but two weekend Sweepstakes to enhance their race-going enjoyment.

A Saturday "Super Sweep", rewarding handicappers for their season-long ability, has been added to the "Sunday Sweep", which again will offer a $5,000 bonus to anyone sweeping, or picking all nine races, on a Sabbath program.

Prize money in the two Sweepstakes will total $132,000 and with the carry-over conditions of the Sunday contest, it's possible that the handicappers will compete for a $76,000 prize on the final Sunday of the season.

The Coronado Stakes and the Lakeside Handicap, both to be contested at a mile and one-sixteenth on the Hollypark greensward, will highlight the first weekend of racing. Hollywood Derby prospects will battle in the Coronado on Saturday and Sunday's Lakeside will match older handicap performers.

Major manufacturers of gear will have displays along both sides of two long casting ponds.

Fishing rods are represented by Zebco, Garcia, Fenwick, Shakespeare, Daiwa, True Line and Sabre, among others. Reel exhibits include Alvey, Penn, Quick, Garcia, Zebco, Shapespeare, Pflueger and Miya Epoch USA, a Jananese electric reel.

Lures displayed include Bandit bass lures, Arbogast, Creme, Fintastik, Miller's bass lures, Rappela, Hot Shot, Fishback, Spoofer, Straggler, Pflueger, Tamarack and the new Law-Lur Hooker.

Such lines as Stren, Maxima and Cortland among others will be exhibited in many tests. Sevenstrand offers terminal tackle; Silver Bell Vari-Mold enables one to make his own weights. Rudy Masson Products are for fly fishermen.

Vlchek and Adventure have tackle boxes. There'll be many varieties of eggs and baits.

JC spikers get ready for Relays

All three valley junior college track teams will slip away from conference action this week, but will not be idle during the Easter vacation.

Mt. San Antonio College will be competing in the Southern California Relays at Fullerton College and UC Irvine. The field events are scheduled for Fullerton at 9:30 a.m., while the relay events will get underway at the Irvine track at noon.

Meanwhile, Citrus and Chaffey colleges will also be competing in the Southern Cal Relays, but will be at Golden West College instead.

All the action will be held Thursday.

The activities at Golden West are scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

MSAC isn't going to settle with just competing in the Relays, however. The Mounties will take on Cal State Fullerton, UC Bakersfield and the U.S. Army Track team at the Fullerton track Saturday. The Army team just arrived at Fort MacArthur and will be preparing for its first major outdoor appearance of the year—the MSAC Relays.

Both MSAC and Citrus are coming off losses in conference showdowns.

The Mounties had their 35 conference dual meet victory streak snapped last weekend against Fullerton while Citrus fell short in attempting to dethrone Grossmont from the Mission Conference title.

Citrus' star sprinter Rick Wilmoth set two school records last weekend in the 100 and 220 dashes with remarkable time of 9.4 and 21.0 — best in the southland and probably the state.

MSAC triple jumper Ehrich Scott keeps extending his Southern California top mark. Last weekend he pushed his 48-5 jump from earlier in the season to 49-2½ to run way out ahead as the southland's top jumper. Teammate Stan Bland moved into the fourth spot in the southland with his jump of 4-9 for second place.

MSAC high jumper Steve Miller moved into the top three in the southland after finishing second last weekend with a jump of 6 feet, 10 inches.

Mountie javelin thrower Dave Krogh also jumped into the top three with heave of 219-4 last weekend.

Valley drivers will compete at Corona track this weekend

CORONA — The wild Figure 8 and Oval Stock Cars will be crashing and banging on Saturday night on the quarter mile dirt oval at Corona Raceway.

Corona Raceway will be celebrating the Easter Holidays, and no races will be run on Good Friday and Easter Sunday.

So only the Thursday night "Super Cycle Combo" and the Saturday night Figure 8 programs will be held this weekend.

In the Figure 8 ranks, Otto Hayes of Garden Grove looks to be the leading contender in his Chevy Impala. Along with Hayes, Riverside's Fred Arnold, Jack Twitchell of San Dimas, Corona's Gary Cecil, and Jerry Smith of Riverside will also be on hand to compete in the Figure 8's.

Corona's Don Compton will head some 25 drivers in the Oval races at Corona Saturday night. Compton's brother, John, will also be racing along with Torrance's Dorsey Steele, Riverside's Heinz Wingler, Hayes, and Arnold.

On the "Super Cycle Combo" Thursday night, Eddie Lawson of Ontario and Mike Tidwell of Montclair head the list of Half-mile and Short track riders who will be competing beginning at 7:30 p.m. Lawson, 15, and Tidwell, 12, are two of the finest young prospects on the West Coast in the flat track ranks. Other riders who are expected are Jim Wright of Corona, Pomona's Dick Lewis, and Al Glover of Chula Vista.

In the motocross on Thursdays, Mark Tyer of Garden Grove is one of the top riders, along with Eddie Clark, Scott Wallace, Dennis Hazlett, and Ray Topham. The exciting motocross, half-mile and short track program begins at 7:30 p.m.

Ascot Park will keep busy Friday, Saturday

GARDENA — Danny Hockie of Harbor City, probably the best rookie expert since Tom Rockwood of Gardena to come from Ascot's own South Bay area, will also try to become the first rookie expert to win a 1974 Ascot half-mile this Friday night at 8 p.m.

Hockie, who vied with Northern Californias Rick Hocking of Fremont and John Gennai of Los Gatos for recognition as the nation's best junior dirt rider last year, made his local expert debut a good one as he finished third behind national stars Dave Aldana of Santa Ana and Gary Scott of Baldwin Park last week.

In this Friday's event — the second in the $17,500 April Silver Medal series—Hockie will renew his efforts to beat Scott and stay ahead of Hocking, who was a creditable fourth in last week's opener.

GARDENA — Tim Lighfoot of Long Beach, defending super spring buggy champion of the Southern California Independent Drivers Association, seeks his third victory of the 1974 season in the first Saturday-night race of the 1974 campaign at Ascot Park at 8 p.m.

The buggies and the Baja sprint sedans are starting a monthly program to run throughout the 1974 season after making a dramatic comback at Ascot a year ago.

After a three-month hiatus caused by the disbanding of the American Desert Racing Association, the buggies and sedans returned to Ascot late last August and were greeted by more than 4,000 fans. Two fall shows and two Sunday-afternoon events the past winter were also well supported.

Arena hosts Car Show

LOS ANGELES — Big increases are reported in the number of vans, race cars and antique and vintage cars and cycles that will be shown at the 14th annual Custom Car and Motorcycle Show, set April 18-21 at the L.A. Sports Arena.

More than 1000 exotic machines will be on display in the nation's largest show of its type. Included are dune buggies, vans, customs, motorcycycles, model cars, race cars, antiques and classics, dragsters, futuristic machines and bicycles.

Special attractions include outstanding race movies, including the Indianapolis 500.

Southland racing

IRWINDALE — West Covina's racing realtor, Bill Swailes, returns to San Gabriel Valley Speedway Saturday night with his sights set on another visit to the winner's circle.

Swailes claimed his first victory on the demanding quarter-mile course March 31 when he downed 14 of the top stars of United States Racing Club including "Indy 500" winner, Roger Ward, in the main event.

SAUGUS — Promoter and General Manager, Marshall Wilkings has scheduled a full fourteen event program for the second week's show at Saugus Speedway this Saturday evening, April 13.

Newhall's Wild Bill Foster, last weeks main event winner will be back in his powerful hemi-powered 64 Plymouth to try and make it two in a row, but will be challenged by 1973 Champion, Mike Fortier, Van Nuys and Jim Thirkettle, Panorama City, both in Chevelles and Bob Hattig, Canoga Park in a 65 Rambler.

VALENCIA — A pair of motocross racing programs, both on the highspeed International track, are expected to attract a large field of professional riders this weekend at Indian Dunes Park.

With both events slated to roll under sanction of American Motocross Enterprises of Hawthorne, a 36-heat show Friday night will carry a guaranteed purse of $500 for the winning pros, while a daylong program Sunday will bring many of the same group back to the starting gate, going in quest of shares in a 100 percent payback of entry money.

Competition Friday, which starts at 8 p.m., is the initial nighttime show of a summer series to be rpomoted by tha AME. All sportsmen divisions will be racing for a 50 percent trophy award in the first program.

Consolation title

Todd Visbal doubled home Bob Cuaron in the bottom of the eighth inning Tuesday night to give Pacific a 2-1 win over Bonita in the semis.

Cuaron singled to lead off the inning and was sacrificed to second by Jack Osborn. Roddy walked and Visbal sent a fastball deep over right fielder Marty Schroedter's head for the two-bagger.

Bonita had reached the semis via a 7-2 win over West Covina in the quarterfinals.

Rick Ortega pitched the complete-game victory and collected two hits to pace the Bearcats. Harold Drake added two hits and two RBI's.

Kevin Abel suffered the Spartan setback despite striking out 10 Bearcats. Jim Knowles had a perfect three-for-three performance.

It will be an all-San Antonio League line-up in today's consolation title game.

For the second year in a row two SAL schools will be battling in the consolation finals. Last year Montclair nipped Ganesha 4-3.

Today at 3 p.m. on the Ralph Welch Park south field, Claremont and Damien squared off.

Damien received outstanding pitching from ace Larry Pekarcik and Frank Pastore in the quarter and semifinals, respectively.

Pekarcik fanned 11 and allowed six hits in the Spartans 3-2 quarterfinal win over Charter Oak.

The big righthander weathered a shaky first inning when he allowed three hits and a walk for two runs and shutout the Lancers on six hits over the final six frames.

The two Charter Oak first inning runs snapped a 23 scoreless inning streak as the unbeaten Spartan (6-0) yielded his first earned runs in the last 30 innings.

Damien stole the ballgame as Robert Alexander singled, moved to second on a walk to Dean Sickles, stole third and scored on a throwing error by catcher Art Malone.

The Spartans played flashback to tie the game 2-2 in the fifth. Billy Karr reached base on an error, stole second and third and scored on another throwing error by Malone.

Alexander, Damien's hitting star of the day, doubled home pinch runner Steve Schiro from second base in th bottom of th seventh to give the Spartns a 3-2 win.

Damien came back in the semis to rout Los Altos 12-1 on four-run rallies in the third, fifth and again in the seventh.

Alexander had three hits in four trips to the plate and drove in four runs. Sickles followed that performance with three hits in three tries, his second three-for-three game of the tourney, and drove in two runs. Dan Monroe contributed two hits.

Pastore, who has been fighting off a food poisoning illness during the tournament, hurled a 12-strikeout, three-hit performance — his best outing of the year.

Claremont scored six unearned runs on seven walks and seven errors in a 6-2 rout of Duarte.

Harry Brown pitched the complete victory and collected two hits in two at bats to lead the offense.

John Huddleston hurled the Wolfpack to a 4-0 win over Workman in the consolation semis with a three-hitter.

Huddleston didn't allow a walk while Brown, Tony Janusz, and Tim Helton each collected two hits.

Angels slate special lunch-game combo

ANAHEIM — A special luncheon-baseball game combination on Thursday, April 18, will open this season's program of Angeles Sports Luncheons in the Anaheim Stadium Club.

The Angels conclude their first home stand of 1974 that afternoon in a 1 o'clock encounter with the Minnesota Twins. A combination ticket for the noon luncheon and a $4 club level seat will be sold for $6. For those unable to attend the game, luncheon tickets will be sold for $3.50, including tax and tip.

Former Angels general manager Fred Haney will emcee the inaugural gathering. Guest speakers are Angels Manager Bob Winkles and third baseman Bob Oliver, and manager Frank Quilici and pitcher Bert Blyleven of the Twins. Luncheon reservations are requested by calling (714) 633-2000.

Future luncheons will be held every Tuesday noon, beginning April 30. Luncheon chairman Tom Seeberg is lining up an impressive slate of former baseball and other sports stars as subsequent emcees.

Discount for capital gain

By ROGER SPEAR

Q — I am 62 and don't plan to retire for another eight years as I am in excellent health. My holdings include: 2M Potomac Electric 8.85s of 2003, 5M Potomac Edison 9½s of 2000, 10M in First Virginia Mortgage REIT 8s12s of 1980 and 160 Union Electric (NYSE). I have $11,000 to invest and would like your suggestion on a high-interest security for this money. Are the FVM notes safe? —A.L.

A — The First Virginia Mortgage notes entrail a degree of risk. Highly leveraged REITs recently have experienced losses on outstanding loans causing earnings to drop. As of Sept. 30, 1973, FVM was monitoring loans representing about 20 per cent of the funds advanced to that date. Furthermore, earnings coverage of interest and fixed charges on the company's bonds and notes had narrowed to 1.3x. The current coupon rate of 11¼ per cent is high, yet the notes are trading below par, another clue to the extent of the risk the market sees in this FVM issue.

In your position you might be better off investigating deep discount bonds. By sacrificing current yield you would realize a worthwhile capital gain at maturity. For example: AA-rated Virginia Electric & Power 3-⅜s maturing in 1981 — the year you plan to retire — yield 4.8 pr cent currently. Trading at 71, the bonds would generate a 40 per cent capital gain at maturity.

Rent orchard 'in shade of an old apple tree'

SEBASTOPOL, Calif. (UPI) — People who live in cramped city apartments may now buy a taste of country life. Like renting an apple tree.

Michael Martin, 35, is starting a rent-a-tree business in this community about 60 miles north of San Francisco. Depending on tree size, it'll cost from $25 to $150 a year, with climbing privileges thrown in.

However, renters are not allowed to chop down trees or take them home. But they may visit them, sit in their shade, eat their fruit, and, of course, prune and spray them.

He said a $25 tree should yield about 200 pounds of "the juciest and tastiest Gravensteins in creation" while a $150 tree would yield up to 2,000 pounds.

Each tree leased in Martin's 13-acre orchard will carry a redwood plaque bearing the name of the tenant. "I can just picture family after family, on an August day when the fruit is ready, spread out in the shade of their rented tree, gorging themselves on apples," Martin said.

Pistons' coach confident despite being behind 3-2

By United Press International

The Detroit Pistons are only one defeat away from elimination in the National Basketball Association playoffs but coach Ray Scott is still the picture of confidence.

"I think the better team will win in the end," said Scott after the Pistons lost to the Chicago Bulls 98-94 Tuesday night to fall behind 3-2 in the best-of-seven series. "I think we can win two games in a row. I'm confident we can win and the players are confident."

Like the Bulls, the Boston Celtics took a 3-2 lead in their playoff against Buffalo by beating the Braves 100-97 while the defending playoff champion New York Knicks need only a victory tonight over Capital to eliminate the Bullets in six games.

The Bulls opened up a 25-point lead in their nationally televised struggle before Detroit roared back in the final quarter to make things close at the end.

Bulls Coach Dick Motta said he was not surprised at the Pistons' comeback because, "I felt it would be a close game. They're a great team and you know they're going to bust out. They're going to explode."

The Bulls shot nearly 60 per cent from the field in the first half for a 57-40 lead as the Pistons hit at a 35.9 clip. But in the second half, the Bulls turned cold and the Pistons connected on 23 of 42 field goal attempts to whittle the margin to two points with 51 seconds to play.

Norm Van Lier gave the Bulls their insurance when he hit an 18 footer with 30 seconds to go.

"We had the clock with us," Motta said. "We had a two-point lead and the ball. If Norm missed that shot, and they tied it up, we'd have the ball and a chance to win or go into overtime. Now we have to win one of two and Detroit has to win both. Detroit can't make a mistake and we have the opportunity to do so."

Scott said the Pistons "dug our own hole" in falling so far behind. "We had too much to make up. I was surprised they couldn't blow us out. I don't think they can beat us in a seven game series."

Bob Love paced the Bulls with 32 points and Jerry Sloan had 20 while Bob Lanier topped Detroit with 23 points and Dave Bing added 22.

The Bulls could wrap up the series with a win at Detroit Thursday night and should Chicago win, it would open the Western Conference playoff championship at Milwaukee Saturday afternoon. If the Pistons win Thursday, they would meet the Bulls in the decisive game of their semifinal series in Chicago Saturday afternoon.

Boston, despite holding NBA scoring leader Bob McAdoo to 16 points, still had a tough time beating Buffalo.

The Celtics can end the series with a triumph in Buffalo Friday night. If Buffalo wins at home—and both teams have been doing that since the playoff started two weeks ago— the seventh and deciding game would take place in Boston on Sunday.

John Havlicek led the Celtics with 25 points, followed by Jo Jo White with 20 and Dave Cowens with 19.

But the key to victory was Cowens' ability to contain the previously unstoppable McAdoo, who entered the game with a 33.5 playoff scoring average.

McAdoo was way below his shots per-game average. That, according to Cowens, turned the trick.

"The statistics show he didn't shoot as much as he normally does—and if he doesn't shoot, he can't score," said the logically-sound Cowens. "We were playing him tough without the ball."

White's jumper with 1:17 left put the Celtims ahead for good at 97-95 as Buffalo, in the playoffs for the first time, led most of the game, often by as much as seven points. Randy Smith, with 25, and Jim McMillian, with 18, led the Braves' scoring.

Yanks off to fastest start since 1945

By United Press International

You've got to go back to 1945 —even before the Casey Stengel 10-pennant era—to find a faster New York Yankee getaway than this season.

The Yankees, who most observers relegated to also-ran status in the American League East, Tuesday reeled off their fourth straight victory of the young 1974 season, a 3-0 blanking of the Detroit Tigers, and now stand alone as the only unbeaten team in the circuit.

Elsewhere, Minnesota downed Chicago 3-1, Texas belted California from the unbeaten ranks 10-2 and Oakland bested Kansas City 6-4 while snow forced postponement of the Milwaukee-Cleveland and baltimore-Boston games.

In National League games, Houston defeated San Diego 9-5, Los Angeles whipped Atlanta 9-2, Chicago blanked Philadelphia 2-0, Cincinnati topped San Francisco 6-3 and St. Louis-New York, Montreal-Pittsburgh were postponed due to to inclement weather.

In their first encounter with ex-manager Ralph Houk, the streaking (pardon the expression) Yankees touched starter Mickey Lolich for two runs in the first and coasted home behind the combined eight-hit pitching of Steve Kline and Sparky Lyle. Kline, apparently recovered from the elbow miseries that plagued him last season, picked up the win.

A's 6, Royals 4

With the Angels' loss, Oakland climbed into its familiar spot atop the AL West with its win over Kansas City. Joe Rudi's two-run double — his third of the game — came with the bases loaded in the seventh to snap a 4-4 tie and give the A's the finning runs.

Twins 3, White Sox 1

Bill Campbell put down a bases-loaded rally in the top of the ninth as Minnesota handed the winless White Sox their third straight defeat. Bert Blyleven won for the Twins while another 20-game winner from a year ago, Wilbur Wood, was saddled with the loss.

Reds 6, Giants 3

Joe Morgan's run-scoring single in the sixth and Tony Perez' third homer of the season enabled the Reds to knock the Giants from the unbeaten ranks. Jack Billingham, with relief help from Pedro Borbon, was the winner. Pete Rose, Dan Driessen and Merv Rettenmund all had three hits for the Reds.

Cubs 2, Phillies 0

Bill Bonham scattered four hits to pick up his shutout as the Cubs celebrated their home opener. Bonham was treated to both his runs in the first inning as the Cubs bunched three walks, two Phillie errors and Rick Monday's double.

HOUSE EXCITED — Atlanta Braves' relief pitcher Tom House, a former Nogales High and USC star, congratulates Hank Aaron after catching Aaron's 715th career home run in Braves' bullpen.

Nogales product Tom House shares in Aaron's moment

ATLANTA (UPI) — Bill Buckner of the Los Angeles Dodgers was hanging atop the outfield fence, arms outstretched and shouting, "Let me have it! Let me have it!"

But he didn't have a chance. Henry Aaron's home run—the historic 715th home run—was sailing well beyond the fence and into the hands of young relief pitcher Tom House.

"I couldn't believe it," said House in the clubhouse after the game Monday night. "I just kept thinking, 'It's coming to me. It's coming to me.'"

House had played in 72 major league ball games before this game but had performed almost without notice. But Monday night the 26-year-old Seattle native was the center of a mob of sports writers, telling them about his catch of Aaron's home run just beyond the 385-foot sign in the Atlanta bullpen.

"This is the biggest thing that ever happened to me," he said. "When I'm old and have grandchildren I can say I was on the other end of the 715th home run.

"I caught it on the fly. I was right against the base of the wall and I was excited, to say the least. It meant a whole lot to me."

Aaron's quest for the home run record has dominated Braves' thinking for more than a year. House indicated just how important it was when he said, "I was just hoping that I could make the club this spring so I could see the homer."

Before the game House had been joking with Aaron and he told the slugger he intended to catch the home run ball. Although he was aware of the fact that as much as $25,000 had been offered for the ball, he said it never occurred to him to try to collect the reward money offered. Instead, he ran in from the bullpen and personally handed the ball to Aaron.

"I put it right in Henry's hand," he said. Aaron was being embraced by his mother behind home plate at the time.

"He said "Thanks, kid," when I put the ball in his hand," House said. "I don't know if he knew it was me. That's not really important.

"Do I have any second thoughts about the money? not one bit. I think anyone that caught the ball in the bullpen would have done the same thing."

Buckner had made a valiant effort to reach into the bullpen and rob Aaron of the homer. He leaped to the top of the six-foot fence and was balanced at his waist, with his glove reaching deep into the bullpen area. But he was too far away from the falling drive.

Before the game House and Buckner had chatted. "He said to me, 'If we get the ball, do we get to keep it,'" House said. "I told him I really didn't know—we, I mean the Braves, made up our minds that we were going to give it back to Hank."

House will get a television set for his catch. Aaron endorses products of a major television manufacturer and the firm had offered to pay for the ball.

Bowlers aim at D.C. trip in roll-off

POMONA — An all-expense trip to Washington, D.C. will go to the winning man and woman bowler of Saturday's roll-off at Brunswick Pom Lanes.

In making the announcement, Mike Baker, manager of the bowling center, said 50 bowlers will roll three games starting at 5 p.m.

The man and woman bowling the most pins over average in a single game will be sent to the nation's capital to represent the center in the national finals of Brunswick's ninth annual "Bowl Your Way to Europe" finals, May 24, 25, and 26.

Saturday's participants qualified for the roll-off by winning the High Game of the Month award. Each qualified league bowler at the center was placed in one of two classes; men, 150 average and under, and 151 and over; and women, 130 average and under and 131 and over. The bowler rolling the highest game in each class each month received a plaque and was eligible for the local roll-off.

The public is invited to attend Saturday's roll-off free of charge.

Yank boss inactive

NEW YORK (UPI) — George M. Steinbrenner III, indicted in connection with alleged illegal campaign contributions, removed himself Tuesday from his daily duties as general partner of the New York Yankees.

The decision by Steinbrenner assured organized baseball that the Yankees would not be encumbered this season by Steinbrenner's legal difficulties. Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn called Steinbrenneer's action "commendable."

The energetic Steinbrenner, although a partial owner of the Yankee franchise, had taken an active role in running the team last season. The decision to vastly reduce his activities with the team does not affect his share of ownership.

A grand jury in Cleveland returned the indictment against Steinbrenner Friday, and there was some speculative talk about the possibility of Steinbrenner's suspension by Kuhn, although the commissioner apparently would be reluctant to take such action on the basis of an indictment before conviction.

Steinbrenner said, "I am innocent of the charges against me. I expect to be fully vindicated and cleared at trial. At such time I will resume my activities with the Yankees.

Give a guy a break

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

April may seem to be an odd month to talk about skiing (ANY month is odd to talk about skiing, as far as that goes), but the fact is that spring skiing is a sport of rapidly increasing popularity. It is popular with skiers, resort owners, osteopaths and bone surgeons.

In many mountain areas of the country the winter's snow still lies on the slopes, and the warm sun of April and May gleams on bare-chested skiers in shorts (male) and bikini-clad cuties schussing the trails. As many compound fractures occur at Sun Valley in April and May as during January and February. Probably.

There is a sort of ego-trip reward in sitting before an open fire with your leg in a cast if you broke the leg skiing. Something sort of romantic about it. People tend to gather about you. They bring you drinks and ask about your accident. "Well," you say, heroically, the wounded warrior, "I was coming down the East Wall of Old Baldy (all mountains are named Old Baldy) when I went into a tight telemark about 20 feet from a big pine. But the tip of the ski, etc." Boring, but people listen.

Dr. Arthur E. Ellison, former medical adviser to the National Ski Patrol System, agrees with me — isn't that peachy?

"There is an aura of mystique about a ski injury in many cases," he told the recent annual meeting of the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons. "Someone will break a leg and find it humorous." (Not humerus at all.) "Soon you will find him enshrined in some local saloon.'

I'm not sure what Doc means about "An aura of mystique," but the fact remains that some injuries are glamorous and others are not. If you say "I broke my arm coming off that ski jump at Aspen," people are a little awed. If you tell them you broke it in an auto accident, they wonder how much you had to drink.

Backs are most susceptible to a wide range of sympathetic response. People's backs "go out," as they say, on the slightest provocation, but audience reaction varies, no matter how serious the injury, if your back went out when you were hitting a 200-yard drive off the 9th at Mountain Meadows or taking out the garbage. If you were playing golf, they want to know about your injury; if you were taking out the garbage, they want to tell you about THEIR injury.

Tell your listener that you got your back ailment mowing the front lawn, and he won't be a listener very long. Tell him you were water skiing on the Colorado River when suddenly you felt this sort of click, down low — he'll be all attention and sympathy.

The seriousness of the injury has nothing to do with people's interest. It's how you got it. A broken leg sustained falling off a bar stool is hardly worth mentioning; an ankle sprained on the tennis court is worth an hour's interest and response.

If you're going to break your leg, do it skiing.

Monkey may transfer his fleas to a cat

By Dr. Frank Miller

DEAR DR. MILLER: Could Sinbad, our squirrel monkey, give fleas to our cat, Gracious — J. I.

Dear J. I.: He could. More likely, though, fleas would flow from feline to simian. The average squirrel monkey in a human home hardly ever has flea-bitten cronies from which to pick up these pests.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My daughter tried to tell me boric acid powder isn't good for my cat's ears. This is ridiculous. It never causes irritation in the ears and always clears up goopy ears and goopy eyes, too, when they have the problem. I use a dry powder in the ears and a weak solution in the eyes. If it were irritating at all it would certainly show up in the eyes and it never does. It always helps them. In fact, it is so good you can pass this along as a tip to other people with cats if you want to. — G. T.

Dear G. T.: Sorry. Though your intentions are good I can't pass your letter along as a good tip.

True, boric acid powder will often relieve ear problems. A boric acid solution can clear up minor eye problems, too. Still, boric acid should never be used on cats in any way, nor should borax even be used as a cleaner around them, for felines are particularly susceptible to poisoning from boron compounds. On a one-time basis, these products are comparatively low in toxicity, but they accumulate in the cat's system and, if used repeatedly, can build to lethal doses.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The current dispute between brother and sister in our family concerns the relative intelligence of brother's dog and sister's guinea pig. Sister has just read the major increase in brain size occurs before birth in man and guinea pig but after birth in dogs and rats. She claims this indicates guinea pigs, being so close to humans, are more intelligent than dogs. I can't comment on this because she has lost me but she'd appreciate your comment, I am sure. — G. C.

Dear G. C.: Her observation is correct. Brain size increase occurs primarily after birth in dogs and rats and before birth in man and guinea pig. However, this cannot be the main criterion for development of intelligence. The before birth group also includes sheep and neither little lambs nor ewes and rams are noted for an overabundance of gray matter. While guinea pigs are greater pets, they can't quite be rated equal to canines as far as intelligence is concerned.

For Thursday, April 11

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Plans will not go as smoothly as anticipated today, but don't be irritated with others because you can't move as freely as you'd like.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Material demands will be heavier than usual today. You may get a little peeved with ones who look to you to come up with what's needed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The other party to an agreement is not holding up his end of the bargain. This could lead to heated words.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's best you put off doing a task for another that you resent doing. No one will be pleased with the results.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Keep your temper in check with those with whom you'll be socializing this evening. Someone will rub you the wrong way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You won't take kindly to an outsider who'll try to tell you how to run your family. Frankly, it's none of her business.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Being overly impulsive and trying to get quick commitments at this time will get you more rejections than acceptance. Be patient.

Tenants pile scorn, trash on landlord

AMBLER, Pa. (UPI) — "It's his trash. We're just giving it back to him," explained the president of a tenants' association which dumped cans of brick and rubble on the lawn of their landlord's suburban Philadelphia home during the weekend.

Ken Marshall said the Saturday protest at the home of George Pittman resulted from the city's condemnation of the three-story, nine-unit apartment building owned by Pittman in the Germantown section of Philadelphia.

Marshall said the building twice was declared unfit for human habitation, but that Pittman had appealed after making minor repairs.

Marshall and other tenants left the cans of rubble at Pittman's front door, littered the lawn with nail-studded boards and displayed a banner reading "Pittman's Slumlord Express."

Bridge

Think tank is only half full

By Oswald & James Jacoby

A little knowledge is likely to be a dangerous thing to possess.

The ordinary bridge player would count 10 tricks in top cards and see that the club suit would give him his slam as long as it broke 3-2. He knows that suits are supposed to break 3-2 and after winning the spade lead our ordinary player would bang down dummy's ace and king of clubs and take the slam to the bank.

Opening lead—♠Q

A man with a little knowledge would know that suits break 3-2 68 per cent of the time. He would also note that if East should hold either the king or queen of hearts or both of those cards that two heart finesses would lead to 12 tricks without having to try the clubs and that the chance of that play succeeding would be 76 per cent.

He would say to himself a 76 per cent chance is better than a 68 per cent chance and try two heart finesses. This time he would lose both finesses and his slam.

An expert would use the same line of play as the ordinary player. He would cash one club and when both opponents followed he would know that the chance of a 3-2 break had risen to 71 per cent. Then he would cash the second high club.

The reason is that if clubs failed to break all might not be lost. He could still try the hearts. If East held the four clubs the slam would still make if the heart honors were divided. If West held the four clubs the slam would make if East held both heart honors. All in all the chance for success on the combination play would be 82 per cent.

Flat-chested girl troubled

By JEAN ADAMS

FLAT: (Q.) I am 16 and flat-chested. My boy friend has never said anything about it but I am always self-conscious about it.

I have read magazines of all the different ways to grow a bigger bosom but they cost so much. I get no allowance and babysit very rarely. Do you know of any place I could send to for help? — Not Much Hope in Alabama

(A.) I doubt that your boy friend will say anything. The emphasis on big bosoms is gradually disappearing along with the marked decline of male chauvinism. This is good news to small-breasted girls, as there's not too much they can do about it anyway.

Don't send for anything. Be content with what you have — including your boy friend.

DISAPPROVAL: (Q.) I've got a big problem. I've been going around with Melanie for six months and the problem is that her mother and dad don't like me because I am black. Please don't tell me to talk to her parents because I already have and it didn't work. — Help Needed in Texas

(A.) It is evident that Melanie's parents have strong feelings about black-white dating and are going to continue to give her trouble about you.

For her happiness and yours, I suggest you look for someone else with more understanding parents — no matter what their color may be.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Gasoline shortages have caused some motorists to carry cans of gasoline in their cars, creating a great danger to themselves and others. Safety officials report that an exploding can of gasoline is equal to several sticks of exploding dynamite, The World Almanac says. Some turnpikes and parkways have announced that anyone found carrying extra gas would be forbidden to use the road and subject to a fine.

Oryx extinct?

Another wildlife disaster

LONDON (UPI) — In the last flicker of sunlight before dusk last Oct. 20, a British naturalist came upon the carcass of an Arabian oryx in a remote desert area of the Sultanate of Oman.

The magnificent beast gave every sign of having been pursued to exhaustion — perhaps for two or more days —until its mighty heart burst.

The date and time may, sadly, be of historic significance.

Naturalist D.S. Henderson, writing in ORYX, the organ of the Fauna Preservation Society, believes it possible he was looking upon the last Arabian oryx in the wild.

The Arabian oryx is so remarkable an animal, so swift and strong, there are legends in the desert that the hunter who kills one inherits its warriorlike virtues. Those legends arose in the days when hunters carried spears or arrows or, at best, ancient muzzle-loading rifles and often tracked the beasts on foot or camels.

The Arab who succeeded under those circumstances was worthy of his prey. The legends were not intended to cover those brave hunters who since the war have pursued the oryx in jeeps and gunned them down with automatic weapons.

Henderson went to Oman where the last survivors of the species in the wild were known to be. Under the headline: "Were They The Last Arabian Oryx?" he told of finding three dead animals and some evidence that four others were captured alive and taken away.

"My oryx photographic safari in October 1972," he wrote, "produced irrefutable evidence that a very recent poaching party, at first thought to be from Abu Dhabi but almost centainly from a northern state, had killed and or removed the last of Oman's and possibly the world's wild Arabian oryx."

He then told of his search and of hearing from a guide that a Sheikh from Abu Dhabi had moved into the area eight days previously "with the announced intention of capturing, as opposed to killing, all the oryx he could find." He saw no trace of the sheikh and his subsequent findings may not have had anything to do with him.

"Just before dark (on Oct. 20), returning to Heima to refuel, we found more fresh vehicle tracks," Henderson said. "Then in minutes, literally just before the sun set, we found a dead mature male oryx lying between converging landrover tracks. It had bled heavily from the head and mouth and appeared to have been hit by (or to have hit) a vehicle . . .

"For the next seven days, with an increasing sense of frustration, we searched as much of the area as possible and found no evidence whatever to suggest any oryx had ever to suggest any oryx had escaped. Admittedly the area is vast and little traveled but . . . the fear grows that the Oryx killed and captured could well have been the last wild Arabian oryx.

"Even if a handful remain, what we have found undoubtedly ranks as a major wildlife disaster."

MAN'S WORLD, or is it? Lionne Kim Brown, 22, beams as she eyes stock uootations at the Midwest Stock Exchange in Chicago where she is the first woman floor trader there in its 91-year-old history.

Nepal looking to China for trading ties

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — The 54,000 square-mile kingdom of Nepal, sandwiched between China and India, is trying hard to develop trade ties with China and the adjoining region of Tibet in addition to those it already has with India.

A five-member delegation from the world's only Hindu kingdom has been in the forbidden Tibetan capital city of Lhasa since March 20 to study prospects for trade.

After the Chinese takeover of Tibet in 1950, Nepal was the only country permitted to maintain a consulate in Lhasa after India was ordered out.

The Nepalese trade team, which has the cooperation of China, also is seeking the return of goods left behind in Tibet by Nepalese merchants when the Chinese Army marched in. Officials here decline to speculate on the value of the goods.

Trade figured prominently in talks Nepal's 29-year-old king Birenda had with Chinese leaders during his state visit last December. He said then that Nepal was "trying to build up" its trade. A trade mission from Tibet is expected here next month.

The formidable Himalayan heights have always acted as a barrier to Nepal's foreign trade. Goods shipped between Nepal and Tibet are funneled through the 72-mile Katmandu-Lhasa road which was built in the early 1960s with Chinese aid. Border trade is conducted through high mountain passes.

It is difficult to determine the exact amount of Sino-Nepalese trade since no accounting is made of free and open dealings along the 500 miles of border. State to state trading is estimated at less than $1 million annually. This does not include commodity aid to Nepal under which Chinese goods are sold here to meet the local costs of Chinese-aided projects.

Nepal exports consumer goods to China, including soap and food. China sends Nepal about 25,000 sacrificial sheep and goats a year (they are sacrificed each October to pacify the goddess Bhagwati) and receives dried red pepper in return.

The Katmandu Valley has become known as "China's chili farm."

Today, 90 per cent of Nepal's trade is with India, its southern neighbor. But India has not been able to meet Nepal's growing needs, particularly for construction material.

In the past, New Delhi would have looked with suspicion on any Nepalese moves to develop trade with China. But now the Indian government has overcome to a great extent the China phobia which earlier characterized relations with Nepal.

India also is aware that it is in no position to meet all of landlocked Nepal's growing needs. So while India may harbor suspicions about the latest Nepalese trade moves, it is unlikely to raise any obstacles.

Doing her dance not for judge

CHICAGO (UPI) — Melinda Zollicoffer offered to do her thing for Circuit Rourt Judge F. Emmett Morrisey Monday. He asked her to save it for a younger man.

Miss Zollicoffer's thing is dancing naked in the Upstairs Lounge in suburban Golf Mill.

The 24-year-old brunette was up on a charge of obscenity. She offered to give Morrissey proof there was nothing obscene about her. Morrissey begged off.

He said he was hearing, or watching, the case only because the regular judge, Walter P. Dahl, was away. Morrissey protested he is a bikini man, at most. Dahl is a bit younger, he said, and might have a more judicial view.

The case was postponed until Thursday, when Dahl is scheduled to take it on.

The attorney for the Upstairs Lounge, Julius L. Echeles, a Chicago criminal attorney, argued that dancing naked "is no different from the art in the nudes which can be seen in the Art Institute of Chicago."

Morrissey agreed, but with a reservation.

"They don't wriggle in the Art Institute," he said.

Luxury liner will remain in service

PARIS (UPI) — The luxury liner France has won a reprieve and isn't going out of service after all.

The French Line said the liner will resume its normal transatlantic sailings between Le Havre and New York May 24 upon completion of its spring cruises.

The ship is now on a round-the-world cruise that ends May 20.

The parent company of the France, at 66,300 tons the largest passenger liner in the world, gave no explanation for the decisions. It had announced only last month that the ship would be taken out of service in May because the French government, which owns two-thirds of the parent company, would cut its subsidy for the ship.

Brown accused of oil 'sellout'

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund Brown Jr. "sold out his independence" to international oil interests by accepting a $21,000 campaign contribution from a petroleum importing firm, Mayor Joseph Alioto said Tuesday.

He said Brown reported the contribution from Perta Oil Marketing Inc. as simply "Perta Marketing Inc." in his official filing of campaign contributors.

Brown's father, the former governor, held a 31 per cent interest in the company until last December and is now chairman of the board of U.S. International Investment Corp. which exports steel to Indonesia. Perta imports oil from Indonesia. The elder Brown said he gave his daughters and grandchildren 40 per cent of his interest in Perta five months ago but that Brown Jr. rejected the offer for a share.

The younger Brown's campaign denied Alioto's assertions of a sell-out. Campaign manager Tom Quinn said the world "oil" was mistakenly ommited from the official campaign filing but that Brown identified the company fully in a voluntary finance statement in November.

"Brown's acceptance of large contributions from Perta interests raises serious questions of conflict of interest that impair his present state position and would certainly cast doubt on his ability to be independent in dealing with oil companies," Alioto said.

Alioto said foreign oil has a "stranglehold" on California's energy industry. He said Perta markets Indonesian oil directly or indirectly to Pacific Gas and Electric, Los Angeles City Power and Water Department, and "possibly other Southern California utilities at a healthy profit."

Alioto was asked whether he had accepted any oil money for his campaign. He said "no," but that he may accept contributions from "little servicestation operators."

Quinn said Alioto's campaign contribution reports were "sprinkled" with names of oil executives, including $6,500 from George Ballou, a vice president of Standard Oil of California.

YEARNS TO BE A MOTHER — Sheba, a Chihuahua and terrier mix, has strongly developed maternal instincts, according to her owner, Mrs. Mike Capelety of Elyria, Ohio. Sheba raised 17 puppies in several litters, but another litter, born last month, died. Ever since, she has been bringing all sorts of orphans home and even went so far as to kidnap two beagle puppies from a neighbor's house. Now, as a substitute for her lost pups, she has taken over the job of mothering this kitten.

WHY BE HALF SAFE? ASK MARINES — When a Marine gets stopped by the Soper brothers, he's in trouble. The twin sergeants share quarters at El Toro Marine Corps Air Station where they serve as military policemen. Both are veterans of action in Vietnam where they both were wounded in the left leg. Larry, left, joined the Marines in 1966, a year before his brother, Gary. Since Gary joined, they have been running into each other at spots all over the globe. No one can tell the two apart unless they are standing at attention when Larry, 5 feet 4, towers an inch over his brother.

BIG SHOE TO FILL — If the shoe fits, wear it, as the saying goes. But Luciano Fabiani, 11, of Bologna, Italy, finds this 1.2 meter-long monstrosity somewhat ungainly to trot around in. The oversized shoe weighing 331 pounds was a shoemaker's exhibit.

Few cars over 15 years old

Life expectancy of the cars on the roads herabouts is exactly 10 years 3 months. Or so says the National Automobile Dealers Association. That expectancy, however, is something other than the fact. Most of the cars aren't even 5 years old yet. Only about 11 per cent are 10 years or older. Only 2.2 per cent are more than 15 years old.

It has been written that marriage begins when you sink in his arms and ends with your arms in the sink. . .If a man regards his wife as his better half, then marries twice, he's just about had it, mathematically, what?. . .It was none other than Disraeli who said, "I have always thought that every woman should marry and no man."

Q. "What's the name of that town advertised as the beautiful city where elderly people live with their grandparents?"

A. That's Victoria, capital of British Columbia. Pretty place.

It was that vocalist Nora Bayes who made famous the song "Shine on Harvest Moon." After she died, her five husbands used to meet in New York City for dinner every year on her birthday anniversary. They toasted — clink! — their departed wife in common.

Takes about two weeks for those nicotine stains on your fingers to go away after you quit smoking. That's how long the old skin cells last before they're replaced by the new.

When a man folds his arms across his chest, it's generally understood to be a defensive gesture. He may do it in an argument, for instance, to show he intends to stand his ground. But when a gorilla folds his arms across his chest, that's something else. It's a gesture of submission, say the animal experts. Means the gorilla is giving up won't fight back, intends no harm.

When the economy is flourishing, people with pains go to doctors. But when a recession hits, they're more likely to treat themselves with aspirin, then wait. Thus, according to a medico who's made a lengthy study of the matter, the sale of aspirin is a fair economic barometer. Rising sales means bad times. This is just the opposite to the significance of the sales of pencils. When they go up, good times are thought to be at hand.

Just 25 years ago, there were about 900 professional roof thatchers in England. Ten years ago, there were only 400. Today, there are 600. And apprentices abound.

The doctor comments

Overuse of alcohol can inflame stomach

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband vomits all the time. He's got so he can't even hold water, besides food, in his stomach. He's quick tempered, very nervous and upset. He's a heavy drinker, beer by the quarts and whiskey and vodka all in one evening. Could this be why he's upset all the time, because he has too much in his system? He won't got to a doctor. But, he needs help. He yells for no reason. How can one help this person?

DEAR READER — Regular overuse of alcohol can cause inflammation of the stomach, a condition called alcoholic gastritis. This will lead to pain in the upper abdomen and nausea and vomiting. Of course, he could have an ulcer which can also occur. He would need an examination of his stomach to see what the problem really is.

Because of the obvious medical problems you mention, he does need to see a doctor. If you have a family doctor you should talk to him about this. Another source of help is for you to contact the Alcoholics Anonymous organization and see if they can talk to your husband, and perhaps he will listen to them. I would expect, though, that they too would want him to receive proper medical attention. My hunch is, from your letter, that he needs medical treatment for his stomach and possibly other medical problems; psychiatric counseling for underlying problems related to his overuse of alcohol, and all the support he can get from you and such sources as Alcoholics Anonymous.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Concerning myself. I had suspected that I had high blood pressure for about a year. I recently had a physical and found my blood pressure at 158 over 108. I am a 36-year-old male.

The doctor put me on a low fat, 1,500 calorie diet. I am five feet and weigh 204 clothed, or about 40 pounds overweight. My cholesterol was 246 and triglycerides were 846. What do these terms mean?

DEAR READER — Your doctor did exactly right in starting you on a weight reducing, low fat diet. Many people with moderately high blood pressure readings can be treated by simply getting rid of the excess fat. Anyone with even moderately high blood pressure should try to get rid of every pound of fat they can.

The cholesterol is a substance made by the liver. It is not strictly a fat, but it is the waxy substance that sticks in the arteries and leads to fatty deposits in the arteries. This leads to heart attacks, strokes and many other problems.

The triglycerides are the fat. Your reading is really high, if you have quoted it correctly. I suspect that a loss of at least 40 pounds, probably more, will do you a lot of good. You may need to do it gradually. You didn't gain it all at once. I think you should help yourself along with starting a regular walking program. The more you can walk daily, the faster you will get results. You will feel better if you exercise while you are dieting, too.

For more information on cholesterol send for the booklet I have prepared for readers on this subject. Send 50 cents to "Cholesterol," in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Dr. Lamb welcomes questions from his readers, but because of the volume of mail he cannot answer personally. Questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns. Write to Dr. Lamb in care of The Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Broadcaster claims record

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — Disc jockey Bill Smith of Radio Station WLIT claimed a world's record for broadcasting underwater Sunday after being submerged for 59 hours in a special pool built for a home-garden-sports show here.

"As far as we can tell from looking in the books of records, this is a record for broadcasting under water," said Smith, 24, who had been confined since Friday morning in a metal cylinder six feet long and 38 inches in diameter.

A good egg helps to satisfy family

Eggs to the rescue! The budget is tight, family appetites are hearty . . . and you want a supper dish that happily solves both problems. Here it is . . . a minutes-easy, oven-baked "hot pot" with herb-seasoned cream sauce layered between diced cooked potatoes and sliced hard-cooked eggs and a topping of cheese to produce a nutritious, satisfying full-meal entree brought to the table bubbly and golden brown from the oven.

This "hot pot" is not a leftover casserole "surprise". It starts with fine full-flavored eggs which give your family an excellent source of highest quality protein, vitamins A and D., essential minerals, and notable amounts of B-complex vitamins. Its other ingredients also add hearty, stick-to-the-ribs nourishment thought to belong only to far more costly foods. However, if you have Easter ham bits to use up, by all means add them to the "hot pot." Or, serve this savory casserole with frankfurters. With a tossed green vegetable or fruit salad, what a well-rounded meal you will have.

Never have large, farm-fresh eggs been of greater help to the homemaker. They are friendly food, well liked by all ages in all walks of life. Eggs go with anything and combine tastefully with other foods. More and more newsworthy recipes are becoming available using eggs in bigger and better ways beyond the traditional "ham and . . ." Eggs know no season. Your market has them and you can buy them with guaranteed freshness and quality the year around.

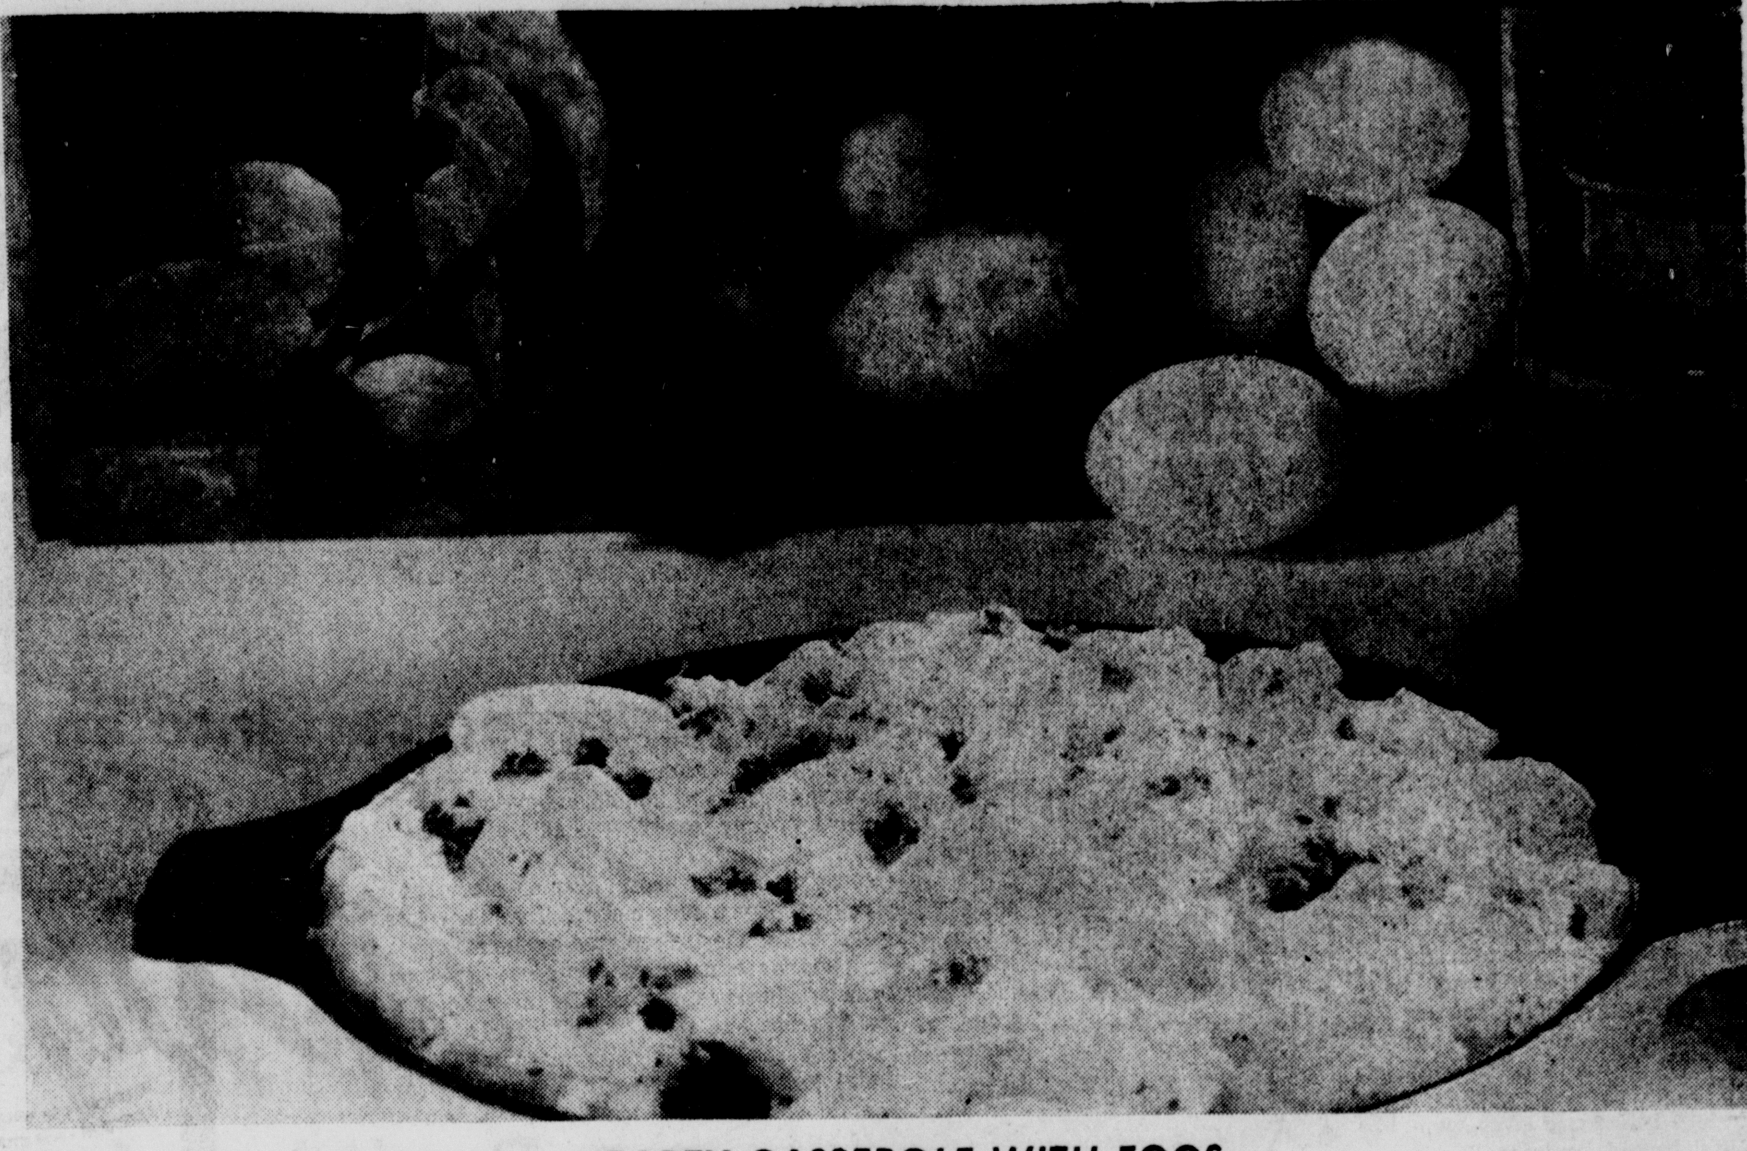
Using this "hot pot" recipe as a starter, invent some other combinations of your own . . . other vegetables, other sauces, but always with those dependable, handy, low cost, nourishing eggs.

EGG BONANZA CASSEROLE

- ½ cup chopped onion
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 2 chicken bouillon cubes
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon basil leaves, crumbled
- ¼ teaspoon thyme leaves, crumbled
- ¾ teaspoon salt.
- ⅛ teaspoon white pepper
- 1-3rd cup sifted flour
- 2½ cups milk
- 1 teaspoon prepared horseradish
- 1 tablespoon freeze-dried chives
- 2 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 1 quart diced sliced cooked potatoes
- 6 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
- ¼ cup grated cheddar cheese

Saute onion in butter until soft, but not browned. Add bouillon cubes, mustard, herbs, salt and pepper. Blend in flour. Stir in milk, and cook, stirring until sauce boils and thickens. Add horseradish, chives and parsley. Turn half the potatoes into a shallow 2-quart baking dish, and cover with half the eggs and half the sauce. Repeat layers. Sprinkle cheese over top. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 30 minutes, until hot and bubbly. Makes 6 generous servings.

For this recipe, cook 5 medium size potatoes (about 1¾ lbs) in 1 quart boiling water with 3 teaspoons salt and 1 bay leaf, just until tender Drain, cool sufficiently to handle; remove skins and cut potatoes in ¾-inch cubes or slices.



HEARTY CASSEROLE WITH EGGS

What's in a name? plenty--on a label

Happier days are in sight for meat shoppers since something has been done to help solve the mysteries of meat cut identification. Under the recently introduced standard meat nomenclature system, the contents of each package is clearly specified on the label.

The standardization of meat cut names was a challenge since over a thousand names, some meaningless, appear on meat labels, and in some instances the same meat cut is sold under a half dozen different names. But the challenge was met effectively by an Industrywide Cooperative Meat Identification Standards Committee, consisting of representatives of food store and packer-processor operations and coordinated by the National Live Stock and Meat Board. The new meat nomenclature and procedures for implementing its use on labels have been completed in form of a manual for retailers.

What is the new nomenclature? How does it work?

It's an organized, logical and informative system of naming and labeling meat cuts. It is anticipated that this standard label language will be used by retailers throughout the country to aid consumers in identifying meat cuts.

Under this new nomenclature system, the label on each package of meat will bear the name of the meat by species (beef, veal, pork or lamb), the primal or wholesale cut (chuck, loin, round, etc.) and the standard retail name used throughout the nation.

When the label is for a smoked pork cut, the word "smoked" appears before the species name "pork." This informative labeling will be especially valuable when applied to less familiar or less easily recognized cuts.

Here's how it works. Consider, for example, the smoked pork chops. First on the new standard label for this cut would appear "smoked pork"; next and on the same line — "loin", designating the wholesale or primal cut yielding these chops. The second line of the label would read "rib chops." This information could be supplemented with the store's own customized name (such as the "fanciful" name Windsor Chops, in this case), but only if the standard name appears on the label. Thus the store or chain can maintain its own identity name without confusing the customer.

Both rib and loin chops are cut from smoked pork loins, just as they are from fresh loins. Therefore, if the chops included a portion of the tenderloin on the other side of the rib bone, they would be labeled "smoked pork loin chops."

Be sure to look for these chops if you have not already tried them. Once served, they will become established as a regular selection on the dinner menu repertory. Packed with that popular smoked pork flavor, these chops both spark and satisfy appetites. It's truly a happy day when they come to the table to be shared with family or friends.

Since these chops are generally "fully cooked" before being marketed,. they need only be thoroughly heated through, thus making them an ideal selection for the cook with a limited time budget. They can be panfried, broiled in pan, oven broiler or on outdoor grill or baked.

A collection of custards is a good mother's helper

If you're a homemaker who's interested in feeding your family right — you'll want to add these tasty custard recipes to your collection. The basic ingredients of eggs and milk supply high quality protein along with calicum, iron, vitamin A and riboflavin.

Realizing that young appetites don't always like what's good for them, the Advisory Council for Jams, Jellies and Preserves has created enticing recipes with the youngsters in mind. Delicately flavored custards are more inviting when they are generously swirled and layered with the concentrated fruit flavor of jams and preserves.

Here are three recipes for custards using a variety of fruit flavors. A thin layer of preserves between the crust and filling gives a distinctive orange flavor to the custard pie. After cooking is complete, the stirred custard is swirled with rich grape jam and poured into parfait or dessert dishes. A dainty garnish of candied violets or grated lemon rind gives it appeal beyond compare. Warm strawberry or currant jelly coats the bottom of individual baked custards (not shown) which makes its own topping when inverted.

Select the recipe which suits your time schedule and mood. As you begin the preparation remember the one cooking principle which applies to all three — keep the temperature relatively low and do not overcook.

Please your family tonight by serving one of these luscious desserts!

ORANGE CUSTARD PIE

4 whole eggs, beaten
2 and 2-3 rds cups milk
2-3rds cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell
1-3rd cup orange marmalade
1 tablespoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon ground cinnamon
Whipped cream
Extra orange marmalade

Combine eggs, milk, sugar, salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, orange peel and vanilla extract; stir until smooth and well blended.

Spoon Oranges Marmalade into pastry shell and spread evenly. Slowly pour egg mixture into pie shell. Combine remaining 1 tablespoon sugar and ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon. Sprinkle on top of pie.

Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minuts. Reduce oven to 350 degrees and bake about 30 minutes or until knife inserted into filling about 1-inch from edge of pastry comes out clean. Remove from oven and cool. To garnish drop mounds of whipped cream on pie and drizzle with extra preserves.

CONCORDGRAPE PARFAIT

3 whole eggs, slightly beaten
¼ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 cups scalded milk
½ cup heavy cream, whipped
1 teaspoon lemon extract
½ cup Concord-grape jam
Whipped cream
Candied violets or slivered lemon peel

In top of double boiler combine beaten eggs, sugar and salt; gradually stir in milk. Cook over hot, but not boiling, water stirring constantly until custard coats the back of a spoon. Chill.

Gently fold whipped cream and lemon extract into custard. Stir until mixture is smooth. Swirl jam into custard and spoon into parfait dishes or layer it alternately with the custard. Chill until ready to serve. Garnish with additional whipped cream and candied violets or lemon peel.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

STRAWBERRY CUSTARD TREATS

3 eggs, slightly beaten
1-3rd cup sugar
Dash salt
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2½ cups scalded milk
½ cup + 1 tablespoon strawberry or currant jelly

Blend beaten eggs, sugar, salt and vanilla. Gradually stir in milk.

Heat and stir jelly in small saucepan until smooth. Spoon 1½ tablespoons warm jelly into six 6-ounce custard cups twisting each to coat bottom and sides. Pour in custard.

Place custard cups into large shallow baking dish, pour in very hot tap water to depth of custard. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes or until knife inserted comes out clean. Remove from oven and cool.

This sardine sandwich is almost pizza

Norway sardines are particularly enjoyed by men and provide a savory base for many easy and economical ideas to serve for Sunday afternoon meals.

The easiest idea, of course, is to just open a can of sardines, packed either in olive oil, tomato or mustard sauce, and offering them with thick slices of French or rye bread or crusty rolls, some cheese, fresh fruit and a favorite beverage. You'll have a good nutritious meal for under a dollar a can. According to the United States Department of Agrucilture, "Sardines are one of the best low-cost sources of protein food for human consumption."

For something a little different, though, there's Nordic Omelet Sandwich. It's almost a pizza without a crust and can be ready to eat in 15 minutes! Serve this savory egg-cheese-tomato-sardine mixture over warm rolls or toasted English muffins for hearty open-face sandwiches. It's an easy and nutritious omelet for weekend brunches and midnight suppers, too.

NORDIC OMELET SANDWICH

1 tablespoon butter
1 large tomato, sliced
Salt and pepper
¼ teaspoon oregano
5 eggs, slightly beaten
1 can (3¾ ounces) Norway sardines, drained
½ cup shredded cheese (Mozzarella, provolone, Jack)
Chopped green onions
4 buns or English muffins

Melt butter in 9-inch skillet. Arrange tomato slices in butter; season with salt, pepper and oregano. Pour eggs over tomatoes; cover pan and cook over medium-low heat 4 minutes. Uncover pan and arrange sardines spoke-fashion on eggs and sprinkle cheese between sardines.

Cover pan again and continue cooking 4 minutes longer, or until eggs are set in the center and cheese melts. Garnish with green onions. Spoon onto warm buns or toasted English muffins for open-face sandwich. Makes 4 servings.

Ingenuity serves instead of money

The high cost of food is bringing ingenuity to the kitchen forefront! Entertaining is almosh prohibitive unless you use some of the less expensive types of meat. Guests are understanding. . .and even appreciate tasting some of the truly delicious meals that are possible.

Barbecued One-Dish Meal is an especially flavorful, low-cost dish. Use smoked sausage (or the regular kind if you can't get smoked), rice and green beans as the main ingredients. Then season with liquid smoke, catsup, and mustard plus a touch of brown sugar. You'll have created a dish with outstanding taste. It's pretty and colorful, too. A dish you'll be proud to serve. Double or triple the recipes if you like to serve a group.

One thing to watch when cutting corners on the budget: make sure that nothing is cut from the nutritional value. Here, the combination of sausage and rice makes a dish of good-quality protein without anyone realizing that you are serving less sausage than you would. . .had you sauteed and served the sausage links all by themselves. So nutritionally nothing has been lost . . .but economically, your pocketbook has gained.

BARBECUED ONE-DISH MEAL

1 pound smoked link sausage
1 can (16 ounces) cut green beans
1 cup chopped onions
1 tablespoon bacon drippings or vegetable oil
¾ cup catsup
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1-½ teaspoons liquid smoke
2 bouillon cubes
3 cups cooked rice

Cover and cook sausage in ½ cup water about 5 minutes. Remove from water and cut in 1-inch pieces. Drain beans, reserving liquid. Saute onions in bacon drippings. Add ½ cup bean liquid and remaining ingredients except rice. Simmer 10 minutes. Stir in rice. Season to taste. Cover and continue simmering 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Little-fuss Salmon Suey makes a show

Every so often there comes a time in a young woman's life when she is anxious to show a special young man that she is a gracious hostess and an imaginative cook.

Certainly a little extra effort is needed to set an attractive table, to arrange a few flowers as a centerpiece and to create a warm, intimate atmosphere. But little additional time is needed to prepare a dish, such as Salmon Suey, which suits the occasion. It's a simple to prepare and needs the least amount of last-minute fussing in the kitchen, yet it's different and delicious, and it shows you really care.

There's nothing ordinary about such a dish, and there's nothing ordinary about canned salmon, a product which is recognized throughout the world as the "King of Fish." Its color is appetizingly pink, and its flavor is mild and sweet. It's easy and quick to use. These are the qualities of canned salmon that solve any woman's entertaining problem for intimate dinners for two.

Serve Samon Suey on a bed of crisp Chinese noodles; a pot of steaming tea is the perfect beverage, and for an imaginative final touch to an imaginative dish, serve a few preserved kumquats and a Chinese fortune cooky for dessert. Who knows? That fortune cooky may hold your fate within.

SALMON SUEY FOR TWO

1 tablespoon peanut oil
¼ cup chopped onion
¼ chopped celery
7¾ ounce can salmon
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ green pepper, cut into strips
¼ tablespoon cornstarch
¼ cup water
¼ cup sliced water chestnuts
8 -ounce can bean sprouts, drained
8 ounces Chinese noodles

In a skillet heat the oil and in it saute the onion and celery for 5 minutes, or until onion is golden. Add salmon liquid from the can, the salt, pepper, sugar, soy sauce and green pepper. Cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Blend cornstarch with water and stir into mixture in skillet. Cook over low heat, stirring until sauce is slightly thickened. Stir in water chestnuts and bean sprouts. Drain, flake and add the salmon. Cover and simmer for 5 minutes longer. Serve with Chinese noodles.

To prepare this dish in advance, follow recipe up to the point where you add the salmon. Cover partially and set aside. When ready to serve, bring mixture to a simmer, cover and cook for 5 minutes. Serve while piping hot.

Plan leftover turkey for a new treat

Many wise food shoppers make it a point to select a larger turkey than will serve their family or guests for a special occasion. In the meantime, they plan ahead just what delicious dishes they can make with left-over turkey, so that left-over turkey really becomes "planned over" turkey.

In planning a big dinner, allow ¾ to 1 pound ready-to-cook turkey weight for each serving. What's remaining then becomes the basis for any of many delicious meals.

Here's an example: a casserole using sliced turkey with a delicious turkey dressing that's as easy to eat as it is to make. The secret of its ease of preparation is the use of a ready-to-use prepared dressing such as Melba Toasted Dressing or Corn Bread Stuffing. Each of these dressings is made from especially formulated bread and contains an artful blend of selected fine spices and seasonings. They come in conventient 6½ ounce stay-fresh bags, two to a box.

SLICE O TURKEY CASSEROLE

1 package (2-6½ ounce bags) Melba Toasted Dressing or Corn Bread Stuffing
1 package (10 ounces) frozen mixed vegetables
1 large onion, chopped and sauteed in 2 tablespoons butter
1 cup melted butter or margarine
1¼ cups condensed chicken broth (1 can 10½ ounces)
8 thick slices turkey
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk
2 cups grated sharp cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper

Mix dressing, vegetables, onions, butter and broth. Spoon mixture into a greased 2-quart shallow baking pan. Top with turkey slices. Melt butter and stir in flour. Gradually stir in milk. Cook while stirring until sauce bubbles and thickens. Stir in 1½ cups of the cheese until it melts and sauce is smooth. Season to taste with salt and pepper and spoon over turkey. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake in a preheated moderate 350-degree oven for 1 hour or until brown and bubbly. Makes 8 servings.

Two-room dens

Mother polar bears often carve two-room dens in deep snowdrifts; the entranceway is located so that cold air does not blow into the inner rooms. The earliest igloos may have been modeled after polar-bear dens.

The lettuce capital observes a birthday

Salinas, California, the "Lettuce Capital of the World," celebrates its 100th anniversary this year, with a fiesta-feeling that brings back memories of the early days of haciendas and vaqueros. Now, where horses romped and fields of waving grain stretched as far as the eye could see, acres of vegetable crops fan out from the city hailed as a modern frontier of the west.

While the history of Salinas goes back to the fateful day when a broken wagon axle forced an enterprising merchant to make his camp, and eventually his headquarters on that exact spot, it took another half century for Salinas to experiment with one of the crops that have made it famous . . . western iceberg lettuce. From April through November the harvest of this green gold keeps the valley humming, supplying more than 80 per cent of the nation's lettuce.

So familiar a salad inredient is western iceberg lettuce that it's difficult to tell whether salads became popular because lettuce was available, or whether the increase in lettuce acreage is necessary because salads are so popular. And it doesn't really matter when you can put together such crisp and zesty combinations as Spring Chicken Salad.

Cook tender young chicken breasts for the slender strips of meat which contrast so well with the brilliant rings of green pepper and the bright red apple wedges, or cut strips of left-over ham, roast beef or turkey. Select a firm head of western iceberg lettuce, but one that feels slightly "springy" when you squeeze it gently. Core, rinse and drain it as soon as you get it home and store it in a tightly-closed plastic bag until you are ready ot tear it into bite-sized chunks for the salad. Save the large, more-highly colored outer leaves to line individual salad bowls, or to use in soups or when cooking other vegetables. They contain the highest amounts of vitamins and minerals.

Toss your light-in-calories Spring Chicken Salad with a cheese and basil flavored dressing just before serving and pass along with crackers or hot rolls.

SPRING CHICKEN SALAD

1 head western iceberg lettuce
1½ cups cooked chicken strips
1 red-skinned apple, cut in thin wedges
¼ cup thin slices green pepper
½ cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons corn oil
¾ teaspoon onion salt
½ teaspoon basil, crushed
¼ teaspoon salt
teaspoon paprika
Dash pepper

Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce; chill in disposable plastic bag or lettuce crisper. Shortly before serving, tear lettuce leaves into bite-size pieces to measure 1½ quarts and place in chilled salad bowl. Arrange chicken, apple and green pepper on lettuce. Blend together all remaining ingredients, pour over salad, and toss lightly. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

3 desserts whipped up conveniently

The piece de resistance of a luncheon or dinner is dessert. Smooth and creamy . . . cool and refreshing . . . sweet and rich . . . an elegant dessert makes any meal a special occasion.

But many women no longer have hours to spend in the kitchen preparing desserts. They rely heavily on convenience foods and partially prepared products to save time and energy.

You can become a kitchen magician in a matter of minutes by using a little imagination. Suggested here are three elegant desserts made in a jiffy with the help of convenient, versatile concordgrape products.

Grape Mallobet is a smooth, creamy blend with a lavender tint. The recipe uses marshmallows, apricot nectar and Concord grape juice along with such stables as lemon juice, egg whites, salt and sugar. This luscius mixture can be kept forzen in refrigerator freezing trays and served on a moment's notice.

Looking for a cool, refreshing dessert—something light to serve after a hearty meal? Concord Frappe is a frozen blend of three fruit juices—Concord grape, apple and lemon. Keep a batch in the freezer and scoop into glasses at serving time.

It's amazing what you can do with frozen pound cake. Keep two or three on hand for emergency desserts like Easy Elegant Torte. Just split the cake into three layers, then spread layers and frost sides with a mixture of whipped cream, Concord grape jam and nuts.

GRAPE MALLOBET

20 marshmallows
1 cup Concord grape juice
1-3rd cup apricot nectar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
2 egg whites
Generous dash salt
2 tablespoons sugar

Heat marshmallows and ½ cup Concord grape juice in top of double boiler, folding over and over until marhmallows are half melted. Remove from heat and add remaining grape juice, nectar, lemon juice and lemon peel. Fold over and over until mixture is smooth and spongy. Cool. Beat egg whites to soft peaks, then beat in sugar and salt. Fold into fruit mixure and pour into frezing tray. Freeze until half frozen. Stir and freeze until firm. Makes 6 servings.

CONCORD FRAPPE

1 can (6-ounces) frozen Concord grape juice concentrated, thawed and undiluted
1 can (6-ounces) frozen apple juice concentrate, thawed and undiluted
3 cups water
¼ cup lemon juice

In a bowl or pitcher, combine all ingredients and blend thoroughly. Pour into freezer container and freeze until mushy. Beat with a fork and return to freezer. Freeze until firm. Scoop into glasses to serve. Makes 8 servings.

EASY ELEGANT TORTE

1 package (11¼-ounces) frozen pound cake, thawed
2 cups prepared whipped cream or whipped dessert topping
1 cup Concord grape jam
½ cup chopped filberts or pecans
Concord grape jam
Chopped nuts

Split cake into 3 layers. Combine whipped cream, Concord grape jam and nuts. Spread 1-3rd cup between layers. Use remaining whipped cream mixture to frost sides and top of cake. Decorate with Concord grape jam and nuts. Makes 8 servings.

EASTER EGG SURPRISE

An Easter project for whole family

What a delight this Easter when you get the entire family involved in making delicious tasting crispy chocolate eggs and decorating empty egg cartons with colorful crepe paper, ribbon and artificial flowers. The decorated egg cartons filled with the cholcoate eggs become delightful gift give-aways for your neighbors and friends.

And another unusual treat this Easter are the homemade egg drop nests. The egg drop nest is easy to make using two important ingredients: semi-sweet real chocolate morsels and refrigerated crescent dinner rolls.

Enjoy this Easter by making these special homemade Easter egg surprises.

EGG DROP NEST

1 6 ounce package (1 cup) semi-sweet real chocolate morsels, divided
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar
½ cup finely chopped blanched almonds
2 8-ounce packages refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
4 decorated hard-cooked eggs

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Melt over hot (not boiling) water, ¾ package (¾ cup) chocolate morsels and butter. Remove from heat. Add brown sugar and almonds; mix thoroughly; set aside. Separate crescent rolls. On greased cookie sheets, arrange four of the crescent roll triangles to form a star. Bases should overlap with long ends pointing out in opposite directions. Spread each triangle with 1 heaping teaspoonful of chocolate mixture. Starting from point, roll up triangles, toward the center; secure sides together. Repeat with reamining triangles. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes.

Place colored Easter egg in center of each ring. Melt over hot (not boiling) water, remaining quarter package chocolate morsels. Drizzle chocolate over each ring to resemble bird's nest. Makes 4 nests.

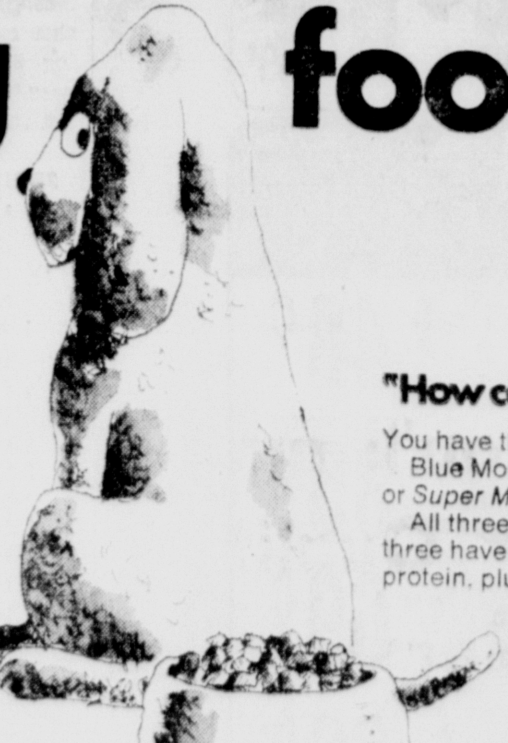
CRISPY CHOCOLATE EGGS

½ cup light corn syrup
1 6 ounce package (1 cup) semi-sweet real chocolate morsels
4 cups oven toasted rice cereal
1 6 ounce package (1 cup) butterscotch morsels
1 tablespoon shortening
½ cup shredded coconut

In small saucepan, bring corn syrup to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in chocolate morsels until morsels melt and mixture is smooth. In large greased bowl, combine oven-toasted rice cereal with chocolate mixture, stir until well coated. With greased hands, shape by heaping teaspoonfuls into egg shapes. Place in decorated egg carton or Easter basket.

Combine over hot (not boiling) water, butterscotch morsels and shortening; heat until morsels melt and mixture is smooth. Top each chocolate egg with 1 level teaspoonful melted butterscotch. Sprinkle with shredded coconut. Chill in refrigerator (at least 30 minutes) or until ready to serve. Makes 1½ dozen candies.

"What do I feed a dog who doesn't like dog food?"



If your dog won't eat anything unless it came from your table, try this.
First, open a can of Blue Mountain Beef Chunks or Mixed Foursome.
These two varieties will make even the most finicky dog think he's eating people food.
Then, don't let your dog see you open the can. (We're serious.)
Put the dog food on a plate, then with your dog watching, take it off your table and set it before him.
He'll think he's getting table scraps. But what he's really getting is the complete nutrition he needs. Food that meets the traditional standards established by the National Research Council—recognized authority on dog nutrition.

"What do I feed an expectant mother?"

Give her good quality protein.
Blue Mountain Horsemeat Chunks and Burger Grind are high in digestible proteins, with all the other nutrients—and good taste—an expectant mother needs.

"How can I fill up a big, big dog?"

You have three choices.
Blue Mountain Chicken Liver'n' Egg, Home Style Stew, or Super Meat Loaf.
All three are less expensive foods. And yet, all three have lots of meat and vegetable protein, plus table quality cereals to fill up your big, big dog, and still maintain the nutritional balance he needs.

Where did these questions come from?

These are some of the questions people asked our pet food consultants in California grocery stores.
Why are we telling you all this?
Because what your pet eats has a lot to do with the way he feels and how long he lives.
That's why all Blue Mountain pet food is formulated with the help of true professionals: kennel-operators, breeders and animal nutrition experts at leading universities.
And we believe once you know the importance of feeding your dog the right foods, the dog food that's made good in Oregon will make good in California.

Fem streaker complains of police 'care'

DENVER (UPI) — "Macy" didn't give her real name to officers when arrested for indecent exposure during a streak with two male friends. Nor did she give her real name to the judge who fined her $100.

But "Mary" did give her story to the Denver news media.

She claimed she and her friends were interrogated naked for 30 minutes in a brightly lit room while a heavy stream of officers walked by. Finally, she said, a policeman gave her a newspaper because her red bandanna "didn't help much."

Police Chief Art Dill Sunday defended officers who refused the teen-agers permission to return to their car for clothes after a pre-dawn streak last month near downtown Denver. "Mary" said they decided to streak after smoking marijuana.

Dill said the patrolmen "had no way of knowing whose car it really was. If they had gone into that car themselves, it might have been an unlawful entry."

Dill said the girl and her companions stood naked in a room next to one where suspected drunk drivers were given sobriety tests. He said the "parade" of patrolmen the girl complained about merely were walking through halls of department headquarters on normal business.

"They took us right in the front door (of headquarters)," the 19-year-old girl said, "and down the hall. It seemed like every cop in the place came down on us.

"One of the guys that arrested us had me by the arm and another cop came down the hall, looked at me and asked, 'Wow, where did you pick that up?'"

The girl, who said she was advised by her attorney not to give her real name, said the arresting officers wouldn't let them get their clothes.

Wheat germ gives boost in nutrition

One of the beauties about this easy, uncomplicated ham loaf recipe is that you can buy just enough ham to make it—or use leftover ham should you have it on hand. Toasted wheat germ is always ready to use. Simply pour out a cup from its vacuum packed jar and combine with the other ingredients. Dry mustard and a bit of marjoram round out the flavors and a couple of fresh eggs bind the whole thing together. You can easily mold the mixture into any-shape you wish. Then bake it in an open shallow pan. Frozen orange juice concentrate accents both the handsome glaze and the loaf itself. After the loaf has had a chance to brown add the orange glaze and continue baking. Use fresh orange slices for garnish and the rest of the glaze as an add it yourself sauce to serve with the ham loaf.

The attractive deviled eggs ringing the platter may serve as predinner snack, first course appetizer or even for the salad course. Wheat germ and parsley mix with mayonnaise and the mashed egg yolks to fill the whites. These are at their best when made shortly before serving—then you get full benefit of the flaky wheat germ texture.

The ways of cooking with wheat germ and wheat germ sweetened with sugar and honey are many. Their reputation stands on being the world's most nutritious natural cereal.

GLAZED HAM AND WHEAT GERM LOAF

1½ pounds boneless ham, finely ground
1 (6-ounce) can frozen orange juice concentrate
1 cup regular wheat germ
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon marjoram leaves, crushed
Orange Glaze
1 orange

Grind ham with medium blade of food chopper. Dilute orange juice concentrate with water to make 3 cups orange juice. Combine 1½ cups orange juice (use remainder in Orange Glaze) with ham, wheat germ, eggs, mustard and marjoram. Shape into round or oval loaf in shallow baking pan.

Bake uncovered in 350 degree oven 1 hour. Pour about ¼ cup Orange Glaze evenly over loaf. Bake 20 minutes longer. Cut orange into thin half slices. Arrange on top of loaf. Baste with Orange Glaze. Bake 10 minutes longer. Slice and serve with remaining hot Orange Glaze. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

ORANGE GLAZE: Mix 1 tablespoon cornstarch with ¼ cup sugar. Stir in 1½ cups orange juice and pinch salt. Cook, stirring, until mixture boils and thickens.

WHEAT GERM DEVILED EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs
3 tablespoons regular wheat germ
½ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon minced parsley
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
⅛ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper

Cut eggs into halves lengthwise. Remove yolks. Mash yolks and mix in wheat germ, mayonnaise, parsley, mustard, salt and pepper. Pipe or spoon into egg white halves. Chill until ready to serve. Serve same day. Makes 12 deviled egg halves.

Boy, 15, loses finger in blast

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 15-year-old boy experimenting with magnesium lost a finger in an explosion Monday.

John Sigoloff was crushing the magnesium in the bathroom of his home when it exploded. He was in serious condition at Santa Monica Hospital with many cuts and the hand injury. His parents were not injured, but the blast did about $1,000 damage to the bathroom, firemen said.

Tuna maintains its name a budget saver

Tuna for dinner? Sure . . . all you need is the right recipe. Imaginatively shaped like a giant dinner roll, Tuna Crescent is actually a hot and hearty main dish that can be baked and served in less than half an hour. Don't worry about the crust. It's simple, using refrigerated dinner rolls.

An extra touch is the savory sauce easily stirred together with a package of chicken gravy mix and seasoned with dill weed.

A second pinch-penny recipe with flair is Baked Tuna Fondue. The tuna is baked in a custard, made hearty with bread crumbs, then given an unusual topping of canned pear halves. The finishing touch is a lightly spiced sauce quickly prepared with a packaged cheese sauce.

Serve either of these tuna dishes with brussels sprouts, a relish tray, glasses of milk, fruited jello and cookies. Both meals will provide you servings from each of the four food groups needed daily to maintain good health.

TUNA CRESCENT ROLL

1 can (7 ounces) tuna, drained
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
2 tablespooons chopped pimiento
1 package (8 ounces) refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
1 envelope (1¼ ounces) chicken gravy mix
½ teaspoon dill weed

Stir together tuna, mayonnaise, onion, and pimiento. Unroll dinner roll dough; do not separate into triangles. Pinch edges together to form one large rectangle of dough. Spread with tuna mixture. Roll as for jelly roll, starting with longest side. Place seam side down on greased baking sheet, curving edges to form crescent shape. Bake at 360 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes until golden brown. Prepare gravy mix as directed on envelope; stir in dill weed. Slice Crescent and serve with gravy. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

BAKED TUNA FONDUE

3 eggs, separated
1 cup milk
2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 can (7 ounces) tuna, drained
1 teaspoon salt
1 can (1 pound) pear halves, drained
1 envelope (1¼ ounces) cheese sauce mix
Pinch ground nutmeg

Lightly beat together egg yolks and milk; stir in bread crumbs, tuna, and salt. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form; fold into tuna mixture. Spoon into well-greased 8 or 9-inch square baking pan. Arrange pears, cut side down, on top of tuna mixture.

Bake at 325 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes, until firm. Prepare cheese sauce mix as directed on envelope; stir in nutmeg. Cut Fondue in squares and serve with Cheese Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

The gourmet cook's secret is seasoning

Less-expensive beef roasts turn into delicious dinner cuts when braised and simmered with special seasonings to make them more tender. In other words, the pot roast is at the top of the list as an economical and flavorful dish to serve the family or guests. Add vegetables during the last 20 minutes to avoid overcooking and loss of flavor and nutrients. This recipe calls for prune juice which gives a tart-sweet, almost wine-like flavor to meats.

TANGY POT ROAST

1½ cups prune juice
1 medium onion, sliced
1 tablespoon vinegar
¼ cup soy sauce
1 3-to-4 pound chuck roast
6 or 8 new potatoes
6 or 8 small carrots
1 can sliced beets
1 tablespoon cornstarch
Green peas, canned
Whole onions (optional)

Combine 1 cup prune juice, onion, vinegar and soy sauce in saucepan and bring to boil. Pour over chuck roast in dutch oven, cover and simmer on top of stove about 2½ to 3 hours or until meat is tender. Boil new potatoes and add with carrots during last 20 minutes. Heat beets separately. When pot roast is done, remove to serving platter, keep warm. Combine liquid from beets with pan juices. Dissolve cornstarch in ½ cup prune juice and add to hot mixture. Stir constantly until mixture thickens. Spoon over pot roast and serve with vegetables.

Chicken is remarkable protein buy

Chicken remains one of the more remarkable protein buys. Those who use chicken serveral times a week to help stretch the budget can vary this dish with some seasoning sleight of hand. Chicken breasts become a new treat when prepared with yogurt or dairy sour cream and a touch of curry powder. Serve with rice and a green vegetable.

CURRIED CHICKEN BREASTS

1 tablespoon flour
3 chicken breasts, split
salt and pepper
1 cup plain yogurt or dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons curry powder
1 teaspoon paprika
3 tablespoons melted butter
Lemon or lime wedges

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Shake 1 tablespoon flour in family size (14 x 20 inch) brown-in-bag and place in two-inch deep roasting pan. Skin chicken breasts; season with salt and pepper. Place chicken pieces close together in oven bag. Combine remaining ingredients, except lemon or lime, and pour over chicken. Close bag with twist tie and make six half-inch slits on top. Cook 45 minutes or until tested tender. Squeeze lemon or lime over chicken before serving.

Woman opens bank account for President

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — Mrs. Ann McDaniel, a retired school teacher, has opened a bank account for President Nixon and deposited $4.50 in it.

Mrs. McDaniel wants 99,999 other people to contribute $4.50 each so that a fund of $450,000 can be turned over to the President to help him pay his income taxes.

When she opened the account Friday at the First National Bank of Martinsville she said the fund would be a sort of belated Valentine for Mr. Nixon.

Supply and demand set fruit and vegetable prices

The consumer who buys lettuce for 19 cents a head one week and finds the price at 29 cents a week or two later, may well think that supermarkets pull prices for fresh produce out of a hat.

Not so, says Bernard J. Imming, executive vice president, United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. Retail prices for all fresh produce are determined, he states, by a known chain of cirumstances.

The law of supply and demand operating from grower to supermarket utlimately determines price, Imming points out, adding that the retail price also reflects labor, transportation and supply costs.

Increasing costs in these areas will be reflected in retail prices for fresh fruits and vegetables as in all other consumer goods in an inflationary economy. But, a generally rising price line will be bent from time to time, sometimes substantially downward and occasionally upward as supplies vary.

In simplest terms, the supply-demand theory means that when growers of a commodity have a short crop, buyers are willing to pay more in order to have a supply of what is avilable. This drives prices up.

While some economists have expressed doubt that the law of supply and demand is valid in determinung some retail prices, there is general agreement that the law still operates in the produce industry. The reasons are the perishability of the products and the fact that there are so many marketers of fresh produce that none is in a position to manipulate the nation's market prices, Imming points out.

One critical factor influencing supply in the produce industry is weather. When bad weather causes a short supply, demand for that limited supply can push prices much above the typical price for that commodity. However, working in the consumer's interest, Imming observes, is the fact that produce growers have a clearly limited time in which to sell their products. "Alternately," he said, "they have garbage on their hands."

The Law at Work

The drastic fluctuation in lettuce prices during the last year provides a good example of the way in which the law of supply and demand works. While the commodity in this instance was lettuce, the same principles apply to all fresh produce.

Last May, a head of lettuce was selling for 59 cents to 69 cents, with prices even higher in some areas. The reason was a severely curtailed supply, far too small to meet the normal demand.

The short supply was the result of some of the worst weather conditions in history in the areas which produced the lettuce to be marketed at that time. The immediate result was a drastic drop in the supply. As a result of this condition—and not because of general inflationary pressures—the price of lettuce soared far beyond usual levels.

Moreover, the same law of supply and demand worked the other way. As soon as more lettuce from other growing areas came on the [illegible], the prices started dropping almost immediately, until by summer lettuce was selling for 23 cents to 25 cents a head, despite increasing inflationary pressures.

Where Does the Money Go?

It takes about 35 per cent of the normal retail price to plant, harvest, pack and laod the lettuce onto a boxcar in California, according to a recent study. An additional 20 per cent of the retail price goes to pay for transporting the fresh lettuce across the U.S.

Another 10 per cent of the retail price covers warehousing the lettuce and delivering it to the store. In other words, 65 per cent of the shelf price pays for getting the lettuce into the store.

In the supermarket, overhead, labor, supplies and other costs account for 25 per cent of the retail price. The remaining ten per cent of the retail price is the store's profit before taxes which takes about half of what is left.

The store's actual profit on a head of lettuce priced at 29 cents is less than 1.5 cents.

Throughout the entire chain of distribution, from field to consumer, the largest single cost factor is labor. Each operation in growing, transporting, and marketing a food product adds labor costs, and they have been rising steadily. That means that whenever a wage increase takes effect anyplace along the line of distribution, it generally has to be reflected in the retail cost.

Good Food Value

According to crop forecasts, it is expected that most fresh fruit and vegetable prices will hew more closely to normal this year. However, until the new fall crops are harvested, a severe shortage of potatoes will inevitably be reflected in

Pest control a 'must' for sufficient food

Americans have a choice when it comes to the foods they eat: they can learn to live without eating, or they can accept the fact that chemical pesticides, properly used, are essential to produce adequate quantities of high quality, uncontaminated and unblemished food.

"Our crops are under constant threat from countless millions of insects, bacteria, fungi, nematodes (a type of worm) molluscs such as snails and slugs, rodents, weeds viruses and other pests," says Bernard J. Imming, executive vice president of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. He adds that many of these pests are also harmful to man and his animals.

Experts estimate that one-third of our potential crop production each year is lost to pests. At the same time, our population is increasing and expecting more and better quality fresh produce. "No consumer today will settle willingly for scrubby, misshapen, poorly colored insect-damaged and disease-damaged produce," Imming observes.

Nearly all agriculturists agree that it is impossible to grow profitable crops of fresh fruits and vegetables of the quality demanded by consumers without the application of chemical pesticides.

Our crops today are more vulnerable to attack than were the same crops a century ago. Part of the reason is the methods needed to grow the supply of fruits and vegetables our population requires.

Plants are grown closer together than previously, and they are grown as a single crop on larger tracts of land. These and other conditions combine to provide certain insects a version of paradise. With a plentiful supply of their staple food, these harmful bugs and pests can multiply enormously in a brief time if unchecked.

Further aiding the dispersal of plant pests is modern transportation. Like the harvesting crews, the pests can "hitch" to the next field—also, they can leapfrog states on trucks and trains and hop oceans on planes. The Japanese beetle is such an example of a transoceanic import.

Some environemental groups have spoken against pesticides, citing damage to the ecology and overkill as reasons for abandoning the use of these products. The fact is, most pesticide contaimination to the environment has resulted from careless use of pesticides. Through educational programs and strict enformcement of regulations, such contamination is being reduced. Were chemical pesticides eliminated from agricultural use, more than a quarter of our population would face starvation, according to predictions made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

There is no way that the fresh fruit and vegetable industry can meet its commitments to the consumer in the foreseeable future without the use of pesticides. However, the produce undustry believes that pesticides should be used with extreme care and as directed. Further, it believes that the use of all such chemicals should continue to be strictly regulated by government agencies.

Reliable estimates say that only approximately one per cent of the chemical industry's sales are in pesticides. Sales of these products are measured in the millions of dollars annually; but they save consumers untold billions of dollars in food and health costs.

Continuing research and education, which is encouraged and supported by the produce industry, is finding more and more refined ways to control pets. The new generation of farmers is generally more selective, eliminating only the harmful pests while leaving the balance of nature otherwise undistrubed. Such pesticides are directed particularly against pests that have no natural enemies in the existing environment.

Biological control which uses living organisms to control pets has been effective in some instances, and this method is currently being more thoroughly studied. However, at this moment, biological controls effective enough to insure commercial crops are rare.

Pesticides will continue to be important servants of American consumers, helping bring not only adequate quantities but also good quality fresh fruits and vegetables to the marketplace.

Prices set by supply and demand

high prices. Supplies now are at near record lows.

A plus for the consumer, however, is that prices of fresh fruits and vegetables are more often than not, lower than other food prices. In the last few weeks, for example, prices of a good many fresh produce items were at the same level or lower than a year ago. Their prices reflect chaning supply factors much more rapidly than processed foods. Fresh produce is a good buy when supplies are normal or better. When conditions produce bumper crops, then produce is an outright bargain for the consumer.

Robbery suspect faces new count

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — James Hoskins, 24, of South Laguna Beach, already held in connection with a bank robbery here, faces arraignment on charges of robbing two banks in San Diego.

Hoskins was arrested last week by the FBI in connection with the holdup April 1 of a Crocker Bank branch on Wilshire Boulevard. He will be taken to San Diego to face charges there of holding up a branch of the Union Bank March 4 and Southern California First National Bank Jan. 25, the FBI said Monday.

WHAT'S IN STORE...

SUDDENLY, IT'S SPRING.

Although we don't have much in the way of seasons, when spring arrives, we know it! The otherwise brown hills turn green overnight, and the flowering fruit trees burst into bloom.

Springtime always seems to bring back memories. When I was a child, our family looked forward to the announcement of the appearance of the massive displays of spring wildflowers. We packed a huge picnic lunch into our old Hudson and headed toward the Ridge Route to see the vivid orange-purple-pink splashed hillsides. Our picnicground was usually in the midst of a field of blue lupine.

When the masses of spring blossoms arrive in our produce warehouse, it is also a brilliant display. Aisles of lilies, hydrangeas, azaleas, stock and glads are gathered for the big spring flower sale.

Through the efforts of our produce merchandiser, Dick Gladden, Alpha Beta has become one of the world's largest flower retailers. For several years the Company has led the way in both cut and potted flowers, offering quality blossoms at low prices. He tells me that the lilies, hydrangeas and azaleas all come from the area around Half Moon Bay, the stocks are grown near Ventura, and the gladiolas come from Oceanside.

Flowers for a loved one; what better way to celebrate Easter and welcome spring?

Easter ham, asparagus and strawberries are other sure signs of spring. Our buyers have done an exceptional job in acquiring the finest at the best prices for your holiday table. I've included one of my favorite ways to use the small pieces from the shank of a baked ham and still have a "company" dinner.

Old Fashioned Baked Ham Loaf

3 c. ground ham (tightly packed)
1 c. cracker crumbs (24 single)
1 8 oz. can tomato sauce
2 eggs
1 c. milk

Method

Mix well and pack into a 9" x 5" loaf pan. Glaze with 3 tbsp. catsup. Bake at 350° for 1-1/4 hour. Serves 6. Serve with sour cream horseradish sauce, green salad, fresh asparagus, brown and serve rolls, and strawberry shortcake.

Using A Bit Of Nature To Color Your Easter Eggs

Pick sprigs of grass, fern, or dainty leaves and arrange them on a white egg. Carefully place the egg inside a clean "retired" nylon and draw nylon tight. Cut nylon, and fasten securely with a rubber band. Put into a 2 quart saucepan with the dry skins from four brown onions and cold water to cover. Heat until water just comes to boil, and simmer over low heat until eggs are deep rust color. Remove egg with a spoon, cool and remove nylon.

Beat the shortages with an old-fashioned supper

A hearty old-fashioned supper served up with traditional hot rum and cider will make your family and friends forget about energy and food shortages. Everyone is looking for menus that are not only nutritious, but substantial and economical, too.

For an informal party supper, try starting off your meal with a baked ham topped with a savory crust or mustard sauce. A cheesy macaroni ring garnished with sliced tomatoes is the only accompaniment to the entree you'll need.

Have a pitcher of hot rum and cider on the table, so that guests can help themselves during the meal, which can be served either buffet or sit-down style. Use lots of candles to conserve electricity: you'll be surprised how much nicer everyone looks and feels, too. Finish off the meal with apple-raisin pie and a second helping of cider.

HOT RUM AND CIDER PUNCH

1 quart apple cider
2 tablespoons maple syrup
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
4 ounces lemon juice
1 quart rum
lemon slices, cloves
cinnamon sticks

Heat the cider and stir in syrup and sugar. Add lemon juice and rum; garnish with lemon slices stuck with cloves. Place a cinnamon stick "stirrer" in each punch cup. Serves 12 with a few seconds.

BAKED HAM WITH SAVORY CRUST

1 ready-to-eat ham, 6 to 8 pounds
1 cup brown sugar
2 tablespoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
½ cup rum
1-3rd to ½ cup packaged plain bread crumbs

Bake or heat ham as directed on wrapping, usually about 15 minutes per pound.

Combine remaining ingredients and spread over scored fat surface of ham about 45 minutes before ham is done. Continue baking until done. Serves 12 to 14.

MUSTARD SAUCE FOR HAM

1-3rd cup vinegar
1-3rd cup rum
2 tablespoons butter
2 egg yolks
cup brown sugar
4 tablespoons prepared mustard
Water as needed

Combine ingredients and mix very well. Cook and stir over low heat until thickened. If desired, stir in a little water 1 teaspoon at a time until sauce consistency is to taste. Makes about 1 cup.

Some people prefer their baked ham unadorned with glazes or crusts. In this case, serve your ham with mustard sauce on the side. Do not use both crust and sauce with the same ham.

BAKED MACARONI AND CHEESE

1 pound elbow macaroni
1 pound sharp cheese, grated
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup flour
3 cups milk
teaspoon seasoned pepper
Salt to taste
¼ cup chopped onion

Cook and drain macaroni, turn into a large bowl. Add cheese and mix.

Melt the butter or margarine, stir in flour. Add milk and seasonings, stir until smooth. Add onions. Continue to cook and stir until very thick. Add the sauce to the macaroni and mix well. Spoon into a large greased ring mold, or a casserole. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, 35-40 minutes. If using ring mold, let stand about 20 minutes before turning out.

Serve with a garnish of sliced tomatoes dipped in French dressing, then sprinkled with basil or oregano. Makes 12 or more servings.

DEEP DISH APPLE-RAISIN PIE

Rich pastry for 1-crust pie
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) pie sliced apples, well drained
½ cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
3 tablespoons white or dark rum
1-3rd cup heavy cream
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) raisin pie filling
1 egg yolk

Prepare pastry from your favorite recipe and refrigerate until ready to use. Turn the well-drained apples into a bowl and toss with mixed sugar, flour and spices. Add the rum and cream and mix well. Turn into a buttered shallow 2-quart casserole. Spread the raisin pie filling over the apple filling.

Roll out the pastry and fit over top of casserole. Flute edge. Make a few vents in crust using point of paring knife. Brush the crust with the egg yolk beaten with 1 tablespoon rum.

Bake in a preheated hot oven, 400 degrees, about 1 hour, or until crust is golden and apple filling tender. Serve warm with ice cream, pour cream, or plain as desired. Also good with rum hard sauce or with cheese. Makes 8 servings.

Woman's magazine picks top recipes

Frozen Banana Velvet made with Dole bananas is the top winner in the Woman's Day Easy-Does-It Recipe Contest.

The winner, Mrs. Margaret R. Weiss of Elkhart, Ind., will be awarded the "best in contest" prize of $6,000 plus the "best in category" prize of $1,000.

The contest invited readers to create easy-to-do dishes using one of the five participating companies' products. The top winner in each of the five categories will receive $1,000; the runner-up in each category receives a five-piece set of Samsonite ActionPak luggage.

All finalists in the contest were tested in the Woman's Day kitchens and the winners were selected by Home Economists Unlimited.

Recipes were judged on the basis of originality, appetite appeal and ease of preparation. Nearly 10,000 entries were received.

Following is a list of the top winners in each of the other categories:

Mrs. Edward Hake of Cincinnati, Ohio, for Hearty and Hot Meat Dip, made with Heinz 57 Steak Sauce.

Mrs. Mary Swan Bolliger of Abilene, Kan., for Wham-Span Pie, made with Spam.

Mrs. Jean W. Sanderson of Leawood, Kan., for Onion Lovers Treat, made with Holland House Cooking Wine.

Mrs. Sarah Paul of Philadelphia, Penn., for Skillet Sausage and Pears, made with Swift's Brown and Serve Sausage.

FROZEN BANANA VELVET

2 cups mashed ripe bananas
1½ cups buttermilk
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 9-ounce container whipped topping

Mix mashed bananas, buttermilk, sugar and vanilla. Freeze until slightly thickened. Fold in topping. Return to freezer.

HEARTY AND HOT MEAT DIP

1 medium onion, chopped
1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
½ pound sliced fresh mushrooms

Brown these 4 ingredients together over medium temperature in an electric skillet, until the meat is no longer red. Reduce to simmer. Add:

1 6-ounce can tomato paste
½ can consumme (with gelatin)
½ teaspoon celery salt
1 tablespoon steak sauce
1 8-ounce package cream cheese
Salt and pepper to taste

Blend together at lowest heat until cheese melts and mixture begins to bubble. Serve hot in chafing dish as dip for chips, Doritos, French bread, rye sticks or vegetables.

May be frozen and reheated.

WHAM—SPAM PIE

1½ cups finely crushed onion crackers
6 tablespoons butter
1 can (12-ounce size) canned meat, chop one-half and puree other half (blender may be used if desired)
3 eggs
1 cup evaporated milk
¼ to ½ teaspoon marjoram
1 can shredded sharp cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons toasted slivered almonds.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Use deep 9-inch pie pan. Melt butter in the pie pan. Add cracker crumbs and mix thoroughly. Press crumbs into bottom and sides of pie pan evenly and firmly. Bake for 5 minutes at 375 degrees. Prepare filling by mixing eggs, milk, and marjoram together thoroughly (use blender for this if it has been used for meat preparation); add pureed meat. Add cheese evenly to baked crust, then chopped meat, then filling. Sprinkle almonds over top of pie. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 minutes. Reduce temperature to 325 degrees and bake another 15 minutes or until lightly browned and firm.

ONION LOVERS TREAT

8 medium size onions (yellow or white)
½ stick butter
½ cup cooking sherry
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Slice onions and separate into rings. Melt butter and saute in large skillet until onions are soft. Add sherry and saute for 3 minutes. Sprinkle Parmesan cheese over all and serve.

SKILLET SAUSAGE AND PEARS

2 packages (8-ounce size) brown and serve sausage
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 cup water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon honey
1 tablespoon brown sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
3 large fresh pears
2 teaspoons cornstarch

Brown sausages in skillet; remove. Melt butter, combine with water, lemon juice, honey, brown sugar, cinnamon and salt. Bring to simmering. Pare, halve and core pears. Add fruit to pan and cook, covered, 5 minutes; turn and cook 5 minutes longer. Blend cornstarch with 1 teaspoon water; stir into pan liquid. Add sausages and simmer 2 or 3 minutes until heated and sauce thickens.

Study shows half who win can't collect

NEW YORK (UPI) — Half of the people who win judgments in New York City's small claims courts are unable to collect their money, according to a study by the Community Service Society.

CSS said in the study published Monday that the winner of a small claims case is expected to collect his own money. If he seeks the assistance of the sheriff's office or the city marshals, he must put down a $10 deposit which is not returned unless the money is collected.

"It is a hollow victory to obtain a fair hearing if, after winning his case, the person can't collect his money," said CSS General Director Alvin L. Schorr. "Weak enforcement drastically reduces the effectiveness of the small claims courts."

S.F. supervisors urge repeal of penny sales tax

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A resolution urging the state to repeal the new one-cent sales tax immediately was approved by the Board of Supervisors Monday.

A resolution by Supervisor Robert Mendelsohn, who also is a candidate for State Controller, was approved unanimously.

"It's time the legislature stopped picking the pockets of the people who can afford it least," Mendelsohn said. "If new funds are needed—and I have my doubts about that—they should re-examine the corporate income tax structure and plug the loopholes that cost the treasury more than $300 million a year."

The state sales tax was raised by one cent April 1 to 6 cents per dollar.

Try a rice crust for pizza-making

For care-free pizza-making, try one with a rice crust! It's not that the traditional bread crust isn't good, but yeast breads take a long time to make, require special techniques in shaping, and sometimes puff into irregular bubbles.

When a rice crust is substituted, you eliminate any such worries. And, even more important in these days of diminishing dollar values, your rice crust provides more nutrition than the traditional yeast bread base.

Rice pizza gets its goodness from three sources: eggs, cheese and rice. Baked together, these nutritious ingredients emerge as a tender base for your favorite pizza toppings. And so firm you can even pick up and eat by hand!

With its rice crust, this pizza provides added protein value and you can serve six entree wedges or eight smaller cuts for snacks.

RICE PIZZA

3 cups cooked rice
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup grated Mozzarella cheese

Topping

2 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce
½ teaspoon each oregano, basil, garlic powder, and salt
1 cup grated Mozzarella cheese
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

To make crust, combine rice, eggs, and cheese. Press firmly into a 12-inch greased pizza pan or two 9-inch pie pans by spreading evenly with a spatula. Bake at 450 degrees for 20 minutes. For the topping, combine tomato sauce and seasonings. Spread evenly over rice crust. Top with Mozzarella and Parmesan cheeses. Bake 10 minutes longer. To serve, cut in wedges. Makes 6 servings.

QUICK RICE PIZZA. Use a canned or bottled pizza sauce or spaghetti sauce for the topping.

BEST LEFTOVER MEAL OF ALL. Dice any leftover meat or seafood and sprinkle on pizza before adding cheese topping. If it doesn't look like enough topping, add a few onion rings, mushrooms, and diced green pepper, too.

PIZZA PARTY FOR A RAINY DAY. You'll be surprised at the number of different age groups that will enjoy this one. Each person will need a greased baking sheet or pie pan. From a central bowl of the rice-cheese-egg mixture, direct each to ladle some onto his individual baking sheet or pan. This mixture can be spread into any number of shapes with a push of a spoon or rubber spatula. As the contestants decide that their design is ready, the crust can be prebaked and then returned for sauces and topping. Here enters the second area for creativity! Olives, onion rings, green pepper pieces, pepperonio slices, etc. can be placed for yes, ear, nose, mouth or whatever. Judging comes after final baking.

Art school coed missing in canyon

NEWHALL (UPI) — A group of students joined the search Monday by sheriff's deputies for an art school coed who disappeared last week when she took her easel and paints into the rough Pico Canyon area west of here.

Constance Marsh, 21, a student at the California Institute of Arts in Valencia, drove her late model Fiat up a dirt road into the canyon. Sheriff's deputies found the car abandoned.

Her roommate reported the girl missing Thursday afternoon. Miss Marsh was last seen at 6 a.m. Wednesday.

She was described as being 5 feet, 2 inches tall, 110 pounds, with blue eyes and long brown hair

Salmon is still affordable luxury

Canned salmon is back on grocers' shelf in limited quantity. It has increased rather alarmingly in price, but what food product hasn't? There are few protein foods today which do not fall into the luxury category when it comes to the price tag. But comparatively speaking, for appealing flavor and many other important qualities that canned salmon offers, it remains an exceedingly good buy for not only a family stand-by, but for an elegant gourmet food which can be served with confidence to guests.

Canned salmon offers variety in your diet, and extra nutrition, the kind of nutrition that experts get very serious about. It is an excellent source of complete, easily digested protein, has desirable unsaturated fatty acids and a low salt content. It's an important natural food product to remember in menu-planning, for the salmon that goes into each can is ocean-fresh. It is cooked in its own natural juices, with nothing added but a pinch of salt. It combines well with most other foods, vegetables and diary products, loving a pinch of spice, a dash of a herb, and it can be combined with inexpensive filler-foods without fear of dissipating its flavor or nutritional contributions. It lends character and color to an infinite variety of dishes from salads to loaves, croquettes, and casseroles.

Be sure to use the liquid in the can, for it contains important vitamins and minerals, and adds additional flavor accent to any dish.

Salmon may be more expensive than it used to be, but try it once again in these cutlet croquettes, and you'll agree it tastes like a million!

SALMON CUTLETS SUPREME

¼ pound fresh mushrooms, finely chopped
1 teaspoon minced onion
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups hot riced potatoes
7 ¾-ounce can salmon
Salt to taste
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
⅛ teaspoon mace or nutmeg
Flour
1 egg lightly beaten with
1 tablespoon milk
Fine dry bread crumbs or cornflake crumbs

In skillet saute mushrooms and onion in butter for 5 minutes, or until mushrooms are tender and most of the liquid has evaporated. Combine the mushroom mixture with the potatoes, the canned salmon, including liquid, salt, cayenne and mace or nutmeg. Chill thoroughly.

When ready to cook, carefully shape the mixture into flat cutlet-shaped croquettes. Coat the cutlets with flour and brush thoroughly with the egg beaten with the milk. Coat well with crumbs.

Pan fry the cutlets in ½ inch hot oil for 2 to 3 minutes on each side, or until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper and serve hot garnished with lemon slices and parsley.

Price in work-hours of some items falls

In spite of skyrocketing prices since 1968, it now takes less time at work for the typical factory worker to earn enough money to buy many of his favorite grocery products. According to data from the U.S. Dapartments of Labor, Commerce and Health, Education and Welfare, because take-home pay has risen faster than prices, many items are actually proportionately lower in price. These four items were among a list of fourteen household costs that have decreased or stayed even, as reported in the December issue of U.S. News and World Report:

. . . . It takes 20 per cent less time today than in 1968 to earn the money to buy a dozen oranges.

. . . . A large tube of toothpaste takes 42 per cent less time to earn.

. . . . A pound of white bread and a half gallon of milk take the same amount of work time today as in 1968.

Listed in the same story was a comparable list of goods and services that spiraled in price and have forced consumers to tighten their belts. Actually, this tightening of belts has a very positive aspect.

For example, a Virginia housewife "has taken to saving leftover meat and combining it with leavings from three or four days to make a meal." Think of all the money squandered in thrown-away leftovers prior to her sharpened awareness.

In the U.S. News and World Report a Washington, D.C., woman was quoted: "I can't gain weight because if I grow out of my clothes, I'm in trouble." She might well have added that her figure and health are in less trouble than her budget by maintaining her normal weight.

A Bedouin belly-dancing teacher in San Francisco suggested this solution: Get land and produce your own food — a seemingly simple solution to a teacher of belly-dancing, but people who have tried it find that when all the costs are added, it's cheaper to buy food in the marketplace.

John M. Van Horn, of Sunkist Growers, Inc., strongly disagrees with the belly dancer's remedy. He should know, because he's vice president in charge of Field Services and Research and Development for the marketing cooperative which represents over 8,000 citrus growers in the states of California and Arizona. Van Horn says that no home grower can compete price-wise or guality-wise with the expertise of professional growers. "New developments in citriculture are enabling grower-members of Sunkist to produce high quality fruit at a proportionately lower cost than at any time in history." Considering this, it seems wise to leave certain things to the experts — belly-dancing to the San Francisco teacher and the production of high quality produce to the agricultural experts.

The added expertise of Western growers is paying off this season with a fine crop of navel oranges. They are referring to it as a vintage crop, hich means the fruit is of excellent quality with delicious flavor and lots of juice. Remember that navel oranges are the seedless variety, sometimes called "eating oranges." You can tell it's a navel orange by the navel formation opposite the stem end. It's the perfect mid-winter snack.

There is an abundance of western navel oranges in your market. They will continue through the first part of May.

Southern California lemon growers have produced "one of the best looking and balanced lemon crops in recent seasons" according to Ted J. Matuska, Lemon Sales Manager, Sunkist Growers, Inc. That means there will be a variety of popular sizes to meet your total lemon needs during the winter months and throughout the summer.

Small hoofed animal

The mouse deer or chevrotain ("little goat"), native to the East Indies and western Africa, is believed to be the smallest hoofed animal in the world; Adults rarely exceed the size of a jack rabbit.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Unmarried bliss

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I've been living with this man for eight months and we have almost as many fights as we would if we were married. We both know we have short fuses, and this is one of the many reasons we decided to keep our lives flexible and unfettered. We don't seem to have solved much, though, because we can't ever settle any of our battles. They just go on and on. Though we both have separate financial accounts, we're always arguing about money and who spent how much for what. One of the big arguments is about how much each of us spends for liquor when it is not evenly shared. We're both fairly heavy drinkers and our liquor bills can be enormous.

My mother adds to the problem. She feels he should be paying for more than half of the expenses because, as she says, he's not the one who's going to get pregnant if there's an accident and he should therefore have greater financial responsibility. He feels we should split everything equally and he won't change his mind. — J. O.

Dear J. O.: Living with another person is a kind of marriage even though there is no legal bond. Unmarried couples who live together for any period of time soon discover that there are often just as many quarrels, just as many other problems as there would be in a formal marriage. Living together implies sharing of responsibilities — and bills.

Forming a happy union also requires a certain amount of maturity in both partners. One facet of maturity is the ability to express irritation and anger in a constructive way that leads to positive results. If you keep repeating the same old battles, you both need to learn how to quarrel constructively, especially so if either of you has a quick temper. There's nothing wrong with differences of opinion, provided anger doesn't stifle your ability to express the nature of the problem and its possible solution.

Money is the number one cause of husband-wife arguments so it's not surprising that you and your partner find it a source of contention. The big factor is not how much money, but how well partners agree on how to use it.

Heavy drinking may be adding to your troubles. You might enjoy your relationship more if you both consumed less. Analyze why each of you feels the need to drink so much. You both may be trying to escape problems or guilts via alcohol. If you drank less, your dispositions might improve and you might have less inclination to quarrel.

Your mother's suggestion doesn't seem realistic in light of the pill. While reliable methods of birth control have given women new freedom, they have also imposed new responsibilities.

Deciding how your money is pooled might best be determined by earning power. If you are earning more, you might contribute more. If his salary is higher, it seems only fair that he should add a little extra.

Sharing money and material possessions are problems you will have to live with for the rest of your lives, whether you live with each other or new partners.

It would be wise for you both to sit down and make a serious analysis of your problems now. They can be solved, but it will require patience, effort and discipline from both of you. You might begin by making a budget and sticking to it unless you both agree to make alterations.

Discretion

Only the leanest figures can wear a leotard instead of a blouse with a pair of slacks. If you want to make sure you are in that category try this simple test. Lightly pinch the skin on your side between your thumb and forefinger. If you grab more than an inch of fat — don't wear the leotard

Fleming and Sanders vows are exchanged

Newlywed Mr. and Mrs. David Lee Fleming were honored at a reception at the First Church of God in Pomona.

Mr. Fleming and the former Deborah Sanders were married at the Temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Elder George C. Christenson officiated at the double-ring rites which united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H.J. Sanders of Idaho Falls and the son of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Fleming of Pomona.

The bride's sister, Miss Kathleen Sanders of El Monte, was maid of honor. Kenneth Sanders, brother of the bride, was best man.

A reception at the Idaho Falls LDS hall honored the newlyweds.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming will make their home in Auburn.

MRS. DAVID FLEMING

Amy Vanderbilt

Teen drinkers

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: My husband died from alchoholism, and now my sons and daughters are coming into their teens, not old enough yet to drink officially, but I'm sure they have been experimenting with beer and wine at least.

"The sad example of their father doesn't seem to deter them. They seem to think that they can 'handle' it. I am sure they won't be able to and would like to do everything I can to discourage them from further experimentation. I feel they are in a high-risk group and that even so-called social drinking is not for them. How can I help? —Mrs. T.J., Douglaston, N.Y."

A new booklet called "Preventing Alcoholism," published by the Christopher D. Smithers Foundation (Dept. A, 41 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022—$1) has a section on this very subject.

"Research," the booklet says, "strongly indicates that alcoholism runs noticeably in certain families, to the extent that approximately 50 per cent of all alchoholic men and women state that either a parent, a brother, a sister or a grandparent became a victim of this illness in the past.

"This sensitivity to the drug, alcohol, is also in line with notable research in recent years by biochemists and pharmacologists. These scientists in their investigations of heredity factors inherent in the genes and enzymes of the human body in many instances have found an extreme sensitivity to the effects of ingested alcohol in succeeding generations of the same family bloodlines."

"Thus it seems necessary," the booklet says, "to especially emphasize caution in drinking—if they so choose—among younger people from this high-risk group."

I suggest that you send for this authoritative booklet.

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: My husband's associate and his wife have his mother living with them. On first meeting, it is obvious she is a dominant force and frankly overpowering at times. We would like to invite the couple to join us at times. Is it necessary to always include the mother in our invitations? If invited, I am sure she would accept. —Mrs. T.C., Albany, N.Y."

Especially as she seems to be a dominant force, I'm sure this couple would greatly appreciate an invitation for the two of them. As this will undoubtedly be considered business entertaining for you, the mother should not expect to be invited. She must have her own social interests.

(Miss Amy Vanderbilt welcomes your post cards and strives to answer all those of general interest in her column. Send your questions and comments to Miss Vanderbilt in care of Progress-Bulletin.)

Home preparation

If you like to experiment with making your own cosmetics at home, remember these two things. Try not to make too much of an experimental batch. If it turns out unsuccessfully, your natural, sometimes expensive, ingredients, will be wasted. Also, your homemade cosmetics won't have the preservatives that commercially prepared ones do and bacteria will grow if they are kept too long.

Debra Bartz is wed in Ontario ceremony

Miss Debra Ann Bartz and Jeffrey Michael Ketchum were united in marriage in a Saturday afternoon ceremony at the First United Methodist Church of Ontario.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bartz of Pomona was given in marriage by her father when she recited vows with the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ketchum of Upland.

The Rev. Marshall Ketchum performed the double-ring rites.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin with a lace bodice. The short bell sleeves were trimmed with lace and three rows of lace bordered the skirt. A headpiece of white flowers and pearls held the cathedral-length veil.

Blue and yellow daisy mums, white carnations and pink baby roses were carried by the bride.

Mrs. Cathy Rice was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Sue Compton, Miss Ginny Winter, Miss Julie Ketchum, Mrs. Helen Vander Heuvel and Mrs. Rosemarie Allred.

Loren Vander Heuvel was best man. Ushers were Louie Mercurio, Ken Ketchum, Mike Furlone, Rick Larned and Bill Allred.

A reception at the Ontario Eagles Club honored the newlyweds.

Mr. and Mrs. Ketchum will reside in Ontario.

Yesterday's Discards -- TODAY'S TREASURES

by Jean Barnes

Visiting with Barry Paris is like receiving a short cram course in American history. He is an enthusiastic and knowledgeable "teacher" who has collected political buttons for more than 10 years.

His collection started inadvertently. "My family was active in the 1960 Kennedy campaign in Pennsylvania and I acquired a lot of things from that election." By 1964, Barry had relocated in Kansas and his interest was captured by "good old Alf Landon." He had met Landon on several occasions and has many specimens from the 1936 Landon campaign.

On trips between Kansas and the East Coast, Barry made it a standard practice to stop at junk shops and antique stores to look for political memorabilia. He usually was successful and his collection grew.

That was in the days when people didn't collect it and it was easy to find. He explained that he belongs to the American Political Items Collectors. "When I joined I was member No. 800. Now there are 9,000 and it is difficult to get anything from campaigns earlier than the forties."

Paris, a young bachelor, is publisher of the Prairie Journal, a weekly newspaper in Wichita, Kans. For our visit he had brought a third of his collection to his office His buttons are mounted on boards, packed in small boxes or encased in plastic sleeves. He expressed regret at not being able to display his full collection of more than 1,500 items.

His earliest buttons are those of the 1888 campaign of Grover Cleveland and Benjaim Harrison. There are 1896 McKinley and Bryant buttons and 1900 McKinley-Roosevelt and Bryant buttons.

"I've got a lot of real kitchie TR buttons," he said, holding up a teddy bear stickpin. "If you know what you're looking for you can find things like this."

Pointing to another button he said, "This poor guy down here is Alto B. Parker, a Democrat running against Teddy Roosevelt. They knew there wasn't any chance that he would win so they didn't campaign for him. As a result there are hardly any campaign items for him."

He said that Andrew Jackson was the first president to campaign publicly. Beginning with Quincy Adams, campaigns were more lively. Campaign ribbons were used during the years between Jackson and the advent of celluloid buttons in 1896. Very few ribbons have survived the years, he added.

His advice to beginners?

"Familiarize yourself with the candidiates, especially the losers. It's traditionally true that there were many more political items made for the winning candidates than for the losing ones"

For Helen Thomas

It's a ringside seat on history

WASHINGTON, D. C. (MW) — "Miss Thomas, I believe you're first — as usual," said the President of the United States, singling out the small dark-haired woman from the rest of the reporters noisily vying for his attention.

At 53, Helen Thomas of United Press International is at her professional peak, no longer a "non-entity" writing for a wire service. And although she prides herself on covering "the straight story, the plain facts" on her White House post, it was "soft news" — the Martha Mitchell midnight phone calls and the "pants incident" that made her known by the public.

Talking with this warm, friendly woman, it's easy to see why the wife of the former attorney general would seek her sympathetic ear. Or why President Nixon would kiddingly chide Helen Thomas for wearing slacks instead of skirts.

"The President got a bad rap on that. He was just trying to be friendly to the press. I didn't take offense but a lot of women in the country did. In my job, jumping on and off helicopters, running to planes with your tape recorder, typewriter, papers and bags — you have to have pants in your wardrobe."

Covering the White House from the Kennedy years ("I got in the back door by writing about Jackie and the kids") through the present administration, gives her "a ring-side seat on history," marvels Helen Thomas. "You're on call all the time — like a doctor. You live the life the President leads."

In 1971 her job took her to China and "the greatest story I ever covered. It was like landing on the moon. Everything was new and everything was news.

"Time was short. I resented even the two or three hours a night I was sleeping because I thought this was once in a lifetime — I could always sleep later. My one regret was I didn't get to the hotel hairdresser which was open 24 hours a day. That's an experience I didn't have — and I needed it!"

Women reporters are very much aware of the way they look, says this correspondent who favors simple attractive clothes and lots of chunky gold bracelets on both wrists. But such things take a back seat when it comes to getting her stories. "You may not seem feminine elbowing your way to the front or running to the phone, but you've got to be first. That's the name of the game for a wire service," she exclaims.

"I try to be aggressive. And when I'm not . . ." she laughs, "I tell myself, Helen, you've got to be more aggressive!"

In October 1971, Helen Thomas married her opposite number at the White House, Douglas Cornell of the rival Associated Press wire service. "I married late in life — to put it mildly!" Before that journalism had been her first love. "I never really wanted to get married. But I didn't have that many opportunities either. So it was no big conflict!"

Cornell, 68, is now retired. He spends his time reading and shopping for family groceries. They usually eat together ("Doug complains I cook with too many spices"), unless she must cover a gala in evening clothes with her constant accessories — a pad and pencil.

Although Helen Thomas won't express herself politically ("UPI doesn't pay me for my opinions"), she believes her job is "to keep the American people informed. If they aren't, we'll live in a runaway country. It's the responsibility of the press to maintain eternal vigilance."

Midwest cops, truckers waging electronic war

CHICAGO (UPI) — In Illinois, and perhaps elsewhere, the police are having trouble with truckers who use short wave radio equipment to spread speed trap warnings.

Illinois authorities have begun to fight back, and if things go the way they often do it won't be long before the truckers fight back even harder and the whole affair may get escalated into a highly uncivil war.

As it stands now, the state highway patrolmen rarely can get close enough to a speeding truck to cite the driver for breaking the law. And violations of the speed limit may be at a record high, simply because the speed limit is so low—55 miles per hour at the most.

Some of these long-distance truck drivers don't even go that slow to change a tire. Energy crisis or not, they've been passing everything that moves below 80.

This is especially true on the Interstates. A truck driver headed south can warn those headed north about troopers just ahead. They'll broadcast something like, "Red Rat, this is Cute Sam saying boy in blue two miles ahead of you."

These radio warnings were perfected during the recent truck boycotts and they've been so effective the boss troopers don't have to get out anymore to see where their men are— they just monitor the truckers. Whether this situation has annoyed or pleased the troopers is speculative but it has irritated the motorists who don't have short-wave sets and who get caught by the troopers and passed by the truckers.

Motorists sometimes vote and this fact may have inspired activity on the part of Illinois officials, both Republican and Democrat. They've decided to find out if the Federal Communications Commission's rules permit the truckers to use the public air waves to tell each other where the cops are hiding.

Assuming normal mail delivery, the FCC lawyers in Washington should get the request for information next fall and there will be extensive exploration of law books to find out if, indeed, the truckers are broadcasting illegally. If the lawyers say they are, the question then—and possibly now—is: "What can be done"

The answer is available from at least three decades of military operations: It is no trick to jam a frequency.

Each trooper could be supplied with electronic equipment that would prevent the speeding trucker from receiving a shortwave warning from another trucker. Those in charge of hiring troopers may wish to put a radioman in each squad car.

But the truckers will not be left to the mercy of the lawmen. There also is available equipment that jams the jammers. This, of course, requires the services of a radioman in each truck. There could be a jurisdictional dispute as to which union he should belong to, but once that's settled the way is clear for more vigorous warfare.

For instance, did you know that a heat-seeking missile can be mounted on top of a motor vehicle? Simply by pressing a button the missile will go right up a tail pipe and whooommmmmm!

Aramco board OKs expansion in oil output

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A plan to expand oil production in Saudi Arabia from nine million barrels a day to 11 million has been approved by the board of directors of the ArabianAmerican Oil Co., (Aramco) a spokesman for Standard Oil of California said Monday.

The spokesman, who said the agreement was reached during a secret meeting of the Aramco board here this weekend, pointed out the agreement does not mean the actual oil production would increase that much. The Saudi government has the power to determine actual production levels.

Aramco is composed of Standard, Exxon, Texaco, Mobil and the Saudi Arabia government.

The announcement indicates the American companies plan to increase their investment in Saudi Arabia. The country sought several years ago to increase Aramco's production but was rebuffed. The Arab embargo has left the companies with little negotiating power, however, the spokesman said.

Shortage of jelly beans?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jelly beans, a traditional Easter candy, will be in short supply this year, according to R.E. Ferguson of the F.W. Woolworth Co.

He said Monday that the scarcity is due to difficulties manufacturers are having with the rise in the cost of sugar, syrup flavoring and packaging of the candy.

Letters 'O.N.T.'

The letters "O.N.T." on spools of thread manufactured by the Coats and Clark Company date back to the company's advertisement of "Our New Thread," a more durable thread which could be used in the new sewing machines being marketed.

MANAGEMENT

$500 WEEK
4 HRS. A DAY
NEW CAD. FURN.

YOU'VE READ RIDICULOUS ADS LIKE THIS BEFORE

How ever, we are only half kidding. Many of our management people drive Cadillacs and do make considerably more than $500 a week.

We are part of 1 of the nation's largest holding companies with interests in hotels, import and export, steel, printing, insurance, cable TV and the largest merchandizing mart west of Chicago. Our company has been in business since 1928.

The parent company has given us unlimited financing for the purpose of hiring and training young men and women, to assume management positions as soon as they can quality. Compensation averages $14,750 per year — plus bonuses and good fringe benefits.

Right now we need 6 men or women to help us manage our expanding chain of offices in the Upland-Ontario areas. If you are a man or a woman of integrity, bondable and have a good automobile, call for an interview. You look us over — We'll look you over — we'll see where we go from there.
